TROMSOE, Norway, Sept. 1.—Salomon August Andrée and his companions died of exhaustion and cold, in the opinion of Dr. Gunnar Horn, who found the bodies and who returned to Tromsoe with them today aboard the sealer Bratvaag. The aeronauts, said Dr. Horn, were even too tired to raise a shelter against the weather.

"They could hardly have lived long after landing from the balloon, perhaps a few days, perhaps a few hours," he said.

The bodies, Dr. Horn revealed, are now little more than skeletons in the clothing of thirty-three years ago. The Swedish scientists, in fact, have abandoned the idea of embalming them.

Many of the relics on the Bratvaag have not yet been carefully examined and Dr. Horn believes there are still relics of the utmost interest somewhere on White Island. He believes Andrée's diary, which consists of only a few pages, is a portion of a bigger book left somewhere on the desolate island, where the Bratvaag crew again attempted to land last Tuesday, but was prevented by high seas.

Polar bears and walruses could be plainly seen, but the waves were too rough to go close to the rocky shore.

On Way to Tromsoe.

The Bratvaag, with the relics aboard, left for Tromsoe shortly before midnight tonight after being twenty-four hours anchored off the desolate Skjaer Island.

Many times this island has been a landmark in Arctic exploration, but never has it withstood such a siege as today when thirty newspaper men and photographers of all nationalities made vain attempts to board the Bratvaag for a glimpse of its precious cargo. Even the committee of Swedish scientists from Andrée's native country spent the day in Tromsoe and were allowed to do nothing but wait for the arrival of the funeral ship tomorrow.

The official reception ship Michael Sars left Tromsoe tonight to meet the Bratvaag and escort her into the harbor. She will enter with her flag at half-mast in honor of the dead explorers. The Bratvaag is expected at 8 o'clock and, although there will be no ceremonies then, the whole population of the little fishing town will crowd to the quayside to see the bodies taken ashore.

DISCOVERY WAS ACCIDENTAL.

ABOARD THE HEIMEN, at Skjaer Island, Norway, Sept. 1.—Dr. Gunnar Horn told The Associated Press today how two harpooners, seeking drinking water on bleak White Island, stumbled on the grim solution to the mysterious disappearance thirty-three years ago of the Andrée aerial polar expedition.

When the Bratvaag reached White Island last month and dropped anchor among the icebergs under its bare stone mountains and its great white peak, walruses were seen disporting in the frigid seas and harpooners were at once put to work. Taking their catch ashore, the majority set about preparing the walruses for food, and two were assigned to search out a stream of drinking water.

These two walked along the great white silence until their eyes fell on a discarded tin can that seemed so foreign to the desolate landscape that they looked further and saw a brown mound. They investigated and found the mound to be a canvas boat, half buried in the snow. In

Horn Says Ice Brought Down Andree's Balloon; Pictures From Camera Impossible, He Believes

ABOARD MOTORSHIP BRATVAAG, Skjaer Island, Norway, Sept. 1.—This story is being unfolded in the cabin of the distinguished Arctic explorer, Dr. Gunnar Horn, aboard the little sealer Bratvaag.

Above us on the afterdeck rests all that remains of Andrée and his companions.

In my hand is a boat-hook found in the Andrée camp. It is engraved with words which proudly proclaim that Andrée's venture lay toward the then undiscovered North Pole.

One feels a queer sensation as he turns this historic boat-hook in his hand. Your correspondent has seen many strange things in the frozen wastes of the North, but never before has he felt the thrill of romance which is engendered by this boat-hook.

Dr. Horn says he believes there is no doubt that Andrée's balloon came to grief because of the snow and ice which gathered on it and weighted it down until it crashed.

"We also found Andrée's camera," said Dr. Horn. "It is of the reflex type and the plates are 2½ by 2½ inches. Fastened to the camera was a compass. The camera had open seams, which precludes the possibility of any pictures being reproduced."

Dr. Horn showed me Andrée's sextant. It was full of ice when found and a few hairs from a polar bear were stuck to it. Among other things found was a pulley which had been used on the balloon, two rusty rifles, one woolen mitten, some stockings and a canvas cover and fender for the boat.

Andrée's navigation book appears to have been kept extremely well. Dr. Horn has put pieces of paper between the leaves to preserve the writing. The book is written in pencil, and Dr. Horn said it was easy to read from beginning to end and explains many things.

I also had a chat with Captain Eliassen of the Bratvaag.

"This is the most remarkable trip I've made in my nineteen years in the Arctic," he said. "We made a coffin of unplaned boards in the way we fashion them in the polar regions. It is six by seven feet. It contains the remains sewed in canvas."

ABOARD MOTOR SHIP BRATVAAG, Skjaer Island, Norway, Sept. 1.—The Norwegian expedition to Franz Josef Land [now Fridtjof Nansen Land] in the Summer of 1930 was made with the motor sealer Bratvaag of Aalesund. The skipper was Peder Eliassen. It was planned that the vessel should at the same time hunt whales, seals and ice bears.

We sailed from Aalesund on July 29 and in marvelous weather we went northward along the coast to Tromsoe, where we arrived on July 30 in the morning. That evening we continued our voyage and by the next morning we were well out at sea past Soroya Island.

We made our course for Hopen, our first stopping place. We arrived there Aug. 2. From there we proceeded to King Karl's Land [Spitsbergen] and arrived on Aug. 4 at Sable Island, which is the most westerly part of King Karl's Land.

Because of reports from a hunting expedition that had been north earlier this year, we knew that ice conditions were unusually favorable, and up to now we had not seen one floating iceberg.

Therefore we decided that en route to Franz Josef Land we could visit the islands between Spitsbergen and Franz Josef Land, which usually are hard to reach. These are Stor Island, White Island and Victoria Island.

Found Map of the Region to Be Incorrect.

So we continued, and early on the morning of Aug. 5 we glimpsed a great island's white peak through the fog. We discovered that the map for this region is incorrect, as this island lies about twelve miles further to the west than on the British Admiralty map, and that the mapping done by the Worsley-Algarsson expedition in 1925 is quite correct.

We first landed on the southeast side of the island, where the coast is quite bare. After that we were on the northeast side, where there is a great expanse of bare flat land.

Just on the beach there is a pole that marks the spot where a depot was established by the Italians in 1928 for Nobile and Roald Amundsen. Beside this depot we erected a hut that we had with us. It is good to have a hut on this God-forsaken place in case some ill-fated expedition should seek refuge there.

At 5 o'clock we weighed anchor and sailed eastward in ice-free waters. At the outset we were followed by our old friend fog, but it soon disappeared, and then we caught sight of the big white peak on White Island.

This island—Giles Land, as it is also called—is known to be one of the most unapproachable islands in the whole of the Spitsbergen region, and here we were going full speed toward it in ice-free waters.

Lonely Ice-Bound Island Rarely Visited.

We certainly were lucky, and our joy was great over the possibility of being able to land so easily at this rarely visited place. Little did we imagine then that our visit would lead to the final explanation of one of the most tragic and mysterious happenings in the history of polar exploration.

We came up under a bare flat land on the southwest side of the island. White Island's position also is incorrectly marked on the maps, too far east.

It was quite still and there was a burning sun as we came to land. Very carefully Skipper Eliassen manoeuvred his vessel in through innumerable projections of land. Fortunately some stranded icebergs showed us where most of the dangerous projections were located.

The skipper dropped anchor, and members of the expedition went ashore. These were the botanist, Olaf Hanssen; the zoologist, Adolf Sorensen, and myself as leader of the expedition.

On our way into the beach we saw a school of walruses playing about in the sea, and the outlook for a good catch helped to put us in a good humor.

We landed and were soon on our way inland across the naked island. On it were mountains of granite and gneiss. Between them were stretches of gravel and sand. Only a shallow little lake broke the tediousness of

Germans Seize 'Legs' Diamond After Expulsion From Belgium

Reich Secret Police Say United States Wants Gangster in Connection With Murder—Held for Day in Antwerp.

By The Associated Press.

AIX-LA-CHAPELLE, Germany, Sept. 1.—Detectives of the German Secret Service tonight arrested Jack (Legs) Diamond, American gangster, as he arrived at the frontier on a train from Antwerp after being expelled by Belgian authorities.

Police said that extradition of Diamond to the United States for an alleged murder had been requested.

The prisoner took the arrest calmly, but was not disposed to talk. He was traveling under the name of Jack Nolan.

The gangster was expelled from Belgium, after he had been detained early in the day and released late in the afternoon, on the ground that he was an undesirable alien.

Since his passport had been visaed for entrance to Germany, the Belgian authorities brought him to the frontier.

Belgium Bars Gangster.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ANTWERP, Sept. 1.—Jack Diamond, New York gangster, was escorted to the Belgian-German frontier tonight after an anxious day spent at the Antwerp City Hall amid conflicting hopes and fears. Told he must leave Belgium and permitted to choose between three possible frontiers, he chose Germany.

Diamond was not officially arrested, as his passport was in perfect order, and no charge had been made against him, but under the Belgian law all suspicious persons may be detained twenty-four hours without a warrant. He was not jailed, but was taken to the City Hall, while the question of his sojourn in Belgium was placed before the Minister of Justice, and finally decided to leave the country of his own accord when informed the government did not offer him hospitality.

About 9 o'clock in the morning Diamond stepped off the gangway of the liner Belgenland. Unmolested, he believed his arrival had escaped attention, but fellow passengers pointed him out to newspaper correspondents. When accosted by the latter he said he wanted to leave the pier quietly and would receive the press later.

At this juncture an Antwerp detective asked him to show his passport, and his baggage was cursorily searched. While this was going on,

Socialists Unable to Control Protest—Scenes of Terror in Street Fighting.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 1.—Bloodshed and street fighting behind barricades marked the end of today's demonstration to protest against the failure of the government to provide unemployment relief. Tanks and troops were employed in a battle in the city park called Varosliget, where the demonstrators wrecked Budapest's most fashionable restaurant, the Weingruber, constructing barricades among the trees against police attacks from the wreckage of its chairs and tables.

Communist agitators shouting "Long live the dictatorship of the proletariat!," "Down with the police!," "Down with the bourgeoisie!" and "Up with Bela Kun!" incited mobs in other parts of the city to wholesale plundering of food and shoe shops.

The casualties were given officially this evening as two killed, fifty-seven seriously wounded, some of whom are dying, and 150 less seriously. The police evening report gives the total of arrests as 300, of whom many were sentenced in the afternoon by police sergeants to short terms of imprisonment.

Affair Starts Peacefully.

From 11 o'clock this morning workmen, singly and in twos and threes as the police had forbidden organized demonstrations, walked through the main streets from the industrial suburbs to their objective, the city park. As far as the Socialist organization was able to be effective in view of the police prohibition, the affair was orderly enough at the start.

Shortly before noon, however, several clashes occurred in the main streets. At one corner a stone thrown at a policeman resulted in mounted police charging with drawn sabres and driving the demonstrators into the side streets. Angry workmen wished to counterattack, but a Socialist leader, Deputy Karl Payer, appeared at the critical moment and restrained them.

Subsequently a group of fifty Communists surrounded the Deputy and beat him severely until he was rescued by Socialists and taken to a hospital with serious injuries.

The second clash occurred at noon when stones thrown by a demonstrator caused an inspector's horse to rear and throw him, whereupon troops of mounted police charged the crowds with flashing sabres. Many were cut down with face and head injuries.

Communists Rouse Mobs.

While the main stream of Socialist demonstrators, with whom the Communist agitators mingled, proceeded toward the City Park, in other parts of the city the Communists roused

VACATIONIST ARMY, 2,500,000 STRONG, POURS BACK INTO CITY

Milling Throngs, With Tons of Luggage, Jam Rail and Bus Terminals.

CARS CHOKE ALL HIGHWAYS

Burden Ferries and Tunnel—Airline, With 225 Passengers, Sets Intercity Record.

The homeward rush of approximately 2,500,000 New Yorkers from Summer and Labor Day Vacations at mountain and seashore resorts reached its peak last night and was expected to continue in reduced volume today. The vacationists, all trying to get back home at the same time, taxed to the limit, rail, water, bus and air transportation lines.

The holiday-makers, struggling under their burdens of luggage, clogged terminals, piers and rapid transit stations while motor cars, bringing additional thousands of travelers with their luggage moved in endless processions along all highways. At some of the ferry slips where congestion developed lines of waiting automobiles extended for blocks.

Traffic jams were not as serious, however, as those on July 4, and police explained that it was because many vacationists would not return until the end of the week due to the fact that schools do not open until next Monday, also because of yesterday's overcast skies which reduced travel to and from near-by beaches and country resorts.

Heat in South, Snow in Montana.

With the local weather cool and cloudy following a morning shower and a brief interval of sunshine, Washington, D. C., was visited by a heat wave that caused sixty prostrations at a firemen's parade, and Knoxville, Tenn., registered a temperature of 100 degrees, while light snow fell in the vicinity of Helena, Mont., and Cut Bank, in the same State, reported a temperature of 2 degrees below zero. Rains were general over the Mississippi Valley.

At Labor Day celebrations throughout the country many speeches appropriate to the occasion were made by some of the nation's industrial and political leaders. Among those who made addresses were, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, at Syracuse; Secretary of Labor James J. Davis at Clearfield, Pa.; Senator Smith W. Brookhart at Soldiers' Field, Chicago; Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor, at Baltimore, and Senator Thomas Connally at Chicago.

Vacationists from the Catskills, the Adirondacks and points west arrived by regular and extra trains over the New York Central, and from New England over the New Haven Railroad in the afternoon. By 9 o'clock last night they had packed every square foot of floor space of both the main concourse and the lower level in the Grand Central Station. Porters working at top speed were overwhelmed by the mountains of luggage dumped off every train. Baggage men shook their heads and advised vacationists not to be too sanguine over the delivery of their trunks. More than

CAPTAIN COSTE AND MAURICE BELLONTE
The Two French Fliers Who Are Crossing the Atlantic to Return Colonel Lindbergh's Famous Visit to Paris. Coste Is at the Right.

Coste's Own Story Before Start On Plans and Hopes for the Flight

His Preparations Provide for Forty-five Hours in Air—Following Ship Lanes, but Too High to Be Sighted—Returning Lindbergh's Visit.

PARIS, Sept. 1.—We are starting, Bellonte and I, to try to fly the Atlantic from east to west. It is our second attempt, and in that we have been lucky, for we are almost the only ones of those who have started from this side who have been permitted to have a second chance.

Last year in July we were forced back when we were north of the Azores by headwinds which reduced our flying speed so much that we could not hope to cover the whole course with our fuel supply. We made then a flight long enough to cover the whole distance if we had had fair weather.

This time we are promised that we will have fair weather almost the whole way, perhaps all of it, and we have, too, a more powerful Hispano engine and a larger fuel supply.

Take-Off Most Dangerous Moment.

For us the most nervous moment will be when we take off from Le Bourget. We have tested our plane and have the most complete confidence in its capacities. It is a wonderful machine. We have worked on it for months and are perfectly confident that it will lift its great weight in the air.

Once we are off we are going to make our course according to the route laid out for us by the Weather Bureau. That will probably be across the western end of the English Channel. We will fly northwest till we are about a third of the way up the western coast of Ireland, when we will head across the Atlantic, along the steamer lanes most of the time.

We intend to fly high and indeed to have reached a considerable height when we start across the ocean. Probably we will not be sighted at all until we are in touch with the American coast.

We will, however, we hope, be in constant communication by wireless.

We hope to reach New York within forty-five hours of the time we take off, but our flying time will, of course, depend on wind resistance. We may get there even sooner, for our plane has qualities of speed which are remarkable.

Not Afraid to Turn Back.

We have been planning this flight for three years and, though our attempt last year was not successful, we have proved that our Breguet plane is worthy of our utmost confidence.

We intend to succeed. But also I would like to say we will not be afraid to turn back if, as last year, we find we cannot do it. We will just try again.

It is over three years since Colonel Lindbergh flew here from New York and we intend this time to return his visit.

Captain Dieudonne Coste's personal account of his experiences on his hazardous flight from Paris to New York will be published in New York exclusively in THE NEW YORK TIMES. Captain Coste carries radio equipment in his airplane, The Question Mark, and he and Maurice Bellonte may be able to communicate direct to THE TIMES as they approach the American coast. On his safe arrival in America Captain Coste will write of the hardships and problems he encountered in his long flight, and in subsequent articles will tell of the lessons to aviation learned from it. He will contrast his experiences with those of Colonel Lindbergh on the first New York-to-Paris flight.

Ships and Land Stations Report Progress—1,725 Miles Out at Midnight.

BAD WEATHER LIES AHEAD

Forecast Is for Head-Winds and Fog, but No Storms or Dangerous Conditions.

START IS DELAYED BY FOG

Lights Will Be Turned On at Field Here if Aviators Do Not Arrive Before Dusk.

By The Associated Press.

PARIS, Tuesday, Sept. 2.—The Air Ministry announced this morning that Captain Dieudonné Coste had given the position of his plane, the Question Mark, to the wireless operator aboard the steamer Jacques Cartier at 4 A. M., G. M. T. (midnight in New York), as 43 North 41.15 West, Route 272.

The position given is about 1,725 miles east of New York. The route given signifies 272 degrees east of north, or just slightly north of due west.

The position given indicated a sharp southward turn to the plane's course which, within a few hours, placed it far to the south of the usual course off the Newfoundland coast, and set it almost due east of New York.

It was presumed the change in course was to obtain better weather conditions.

Fog and Headwinds Over Coast.

At 5 o'clock this morning, dodging rain and fog, but with winds generally favorable, Captain Dieudonné Coste, the French ace, accompanied by Maurice Bellonte, in their famous airplane, were approaching the American coast on what seemed likely to be the first successful flight from Paris to New York. They are expected to land at Curtiss Airport, Valley Stream, L. I., late tonight.

The achievement would mark the first return visit by French aviators since Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh made his famous journey from Roosevelt Field to Le Bourget in thirty-three and a half hours.

Captain Coste and M. Bellonte left Le Bourget Air Field at 10:54 A. M. yesterday [5:54 A. M. New York Time], and expected to spend less than forty hours on the trip. Througout the trip they maintained a speed of more than 100 miles an hour. All preparations were completed last night for their reception.

For the first half of their flight across the Atlantic the French fliers were in almost constant radio communication with ships at sea and with land stations. Followed by friendly tail winds, the aviators met their first weather difficulties after reaching a point about midway between the coast of Ireland and Newfoundland.

Clouds Force Change of Course.

For some time earlier they encountered heavy cloud banks, which for a while prompted Captain Coste to change his course northward from his original southerly direction, but rapidly surmounting this difficulty he was again able to resume his course direct for New York. Rain and fog came up as the aviators approached the American coast.

The first direct communication between the Question Mark and the American coast was reported at 9:15 P. M. last night, New York Daylight Time, when the Question Mark was in conversation with the Louisburg (N. S.) station. At that time, it was estimated, Captain Coste was a little more than half-way between Ireland and Newfoundland.

A message from St. John's, N. F., stating that Captain Coste was in touch with the radio station did not give his exact position, and efforts by Cape Race to reach the Question Mark were unavailing.

At midnight Cape Race reported fog and a falling barometer, indicating that, contrary to his experience on the first half of the journey across the Atlantic, Captain Coste was running into bad weather.

Because of these developments and the limitations of his wireless it was considered likely that Captain Coste may have difficulty in maintaining communication with American land stations until he approaches closer to the American coast.

Weather Change Foreseen.

The change in the weather conformed to the predictions made earlier in the day by Dr. James H.

BAR LEADERS TO MAP WORLD AVIATION LAW

SOCIAL INSURANCE URGED

NOTED DELEGATES ARRIVE

Liners Bring European Jurists to Join 200 Spokesmen of 25 Participating Nations.

An international code to regulate air traffic on the same well-defined lines by which commerce on the sea is governed and a recommendation for universal social insurance to protect the workers of all countries will be advanced at the convention of the International Law Association, which opens this morning at the Bar Association Building, 42 West Forty-fourth Street.

About fifty jurists, economists and statesmen, part of a delegation of 200 representatives of twenty-five countries, arrived on the Tuscania yesterday afternoon to join with distinguished American lawyers in the sessions of the association, which will last for seven days.

As invited guests of the association, the members of the British and French bar who arrived in New York Saturday after a tour of the country under the auspices of the American Bar Association, will participate in the conferences. The convocation of all the jurists today will mark the greatest assemblage of international legal authorities here in many years.

The importance of the proposed aircraft law codification was stressed by several of the delegates arriving yesterday, who indicated that the association would use its influence on the governments of all nations to stabilize aerial navigation. Drafts of proposed codes of civil and criminal air laws to be adopted by conventions between the countries will be made public this week by committees which have had the subject under study, and will be debated next Monday.

Freedom of Air Is One Aim.

The codes will be in the nature of a supplement to the Convention for the Regulation of Aerial Navigation of 1919. One recommendation which is sure of being adopted looks to the "freedom of the air" as a corollary to the "freedom of the seas." It proposes that all countries, when not belligerents, should accord freedom of passage above their territory to private aircraft.

Another proposal is that regular airway lines should carry special uniform marks in addition to prescribed nationality and registration marks. Other regulations will be advanced to standardize possible seizure or detention of aircraft. Adoption by each country of somewhat similar criminal laws to govern lights and signals and penalize unsafe flying also will be suggested.

R. E. L. Vaughan Williams of Great Britain, who served on the Anglo-German Mixed Arbitral Tribunal and was one of the delegates arriving on the Tuscania yesterday, stressed the importance of the fact that international legal authorities were seeking to standardize aerial law while aircraft navigation was still relatively in its infancy.

"All countries are now taking a great interest in the problem, and the time is ripe for the development of international law on the subject simultaneous with the development of commerce in the air," he said.

The idea of universal social insurance, advanced by the European delegates, will be debated almost at the outset of the convention at a session this afternoon. Hailed by some of the delegates as a new step in the development of social consciousness, certain of the conclusions which will be advanced by a committee which has been dealing with the subject, it was learned, will call for obligatory social insurance except where workers are able and accustomed to insuring themselves.

Universal Stability Sought.

The more specifically legal conclusions of the committee, however, are confined to seeking international stability for insurance through universal recognition of certain principles controlling its operation and payments.

"The age of world economy calls for not only private insurance free from all territorial trammels but for a world insurance as well," is the gist of the conclusions of the social insurance committee. Its conclusions in full follow:

Progress consists in the increase of safety, in a better provision and a more complete satisfaction of needs. Insurance which rests on mutuality and which distributes satisfaction of future needs over an organized body of individuals is one of the principal factors of progress.

Family property and, still more, the productive capacities of man invoke protection through insurance. Experience clearly shows that the duty of insurance can only be dispensed with in a country where the workers are able and accustomed to insure themselves freely and with advantage; in all other countries—and they are the great majority—obligatory social insurance can alone exert a systematic effort directed to prevent, restore and compensate all loss of the productive forces of the workers.

Human Depreciation Considered.

The age of world economy calls for not only private insurance free from all territorial trammels, but for a world social insurance as well. To thoroughly fulfill its mission, social insurance should be universal. Each national economy which participates in world commerce should, by way of contributing to social insurance, pay a premium intended for the restoration of the depreciation of the human factor.

The general conventions on social insurance drawn up by the annual conference of the International Labor Organization aim at the universality of social insurance. The ratification of these conventions powerfully contributes to the world economy and to international peace.

The following principles are recommended as tending to avoid friction, omissions and duplication in interstate relations and to increase the workers' freedom of movement:

(a) Concentration of insurance within the country of the centre of occupation, the law of this country having to provide for such employments as are carried out in another country, whether transiently or intermittently or even permanently in the case of the personnel of transport undertakings.

(b) Recognition of the right to a pension, even in the case of sojourning abroad, unless the power of control exists in the foreign residence of the pensioned workman.

(c) Conservation of rights in course of being acquired by assured persons who pass from one country to another.

(d) Treatment of foreigners to be the same as that of nationals, so far as concerns the obligation to insure and the right to benefits.

The delegates arriving on the Tuscania yesterday were welcomed by a committee headed by Arthur K. Kuhn, chairman of the general conference committee of the American branch of the International Law Association. Other members of the committee with him were Oscar R. Houston, Paul H. Lacques, Ira H. Brainerd, Edmund A. Whitman, Joseph P. Chamberlain, Raoul E. Desvernine, G. Evans Hubbard, Edwin R. Keedy, Fritz von Briesen.

From the pier the delegates went to the Plaza Hotel and to various clubs, where they will make their home during the convention. Besides the fifty on the Tuscania, many arrived yesterday or are due today on other vessels. Some of the delegates were already in this country, including Dr. Walter Simons, retired Minister of Foreign Affairs of Germany and president of the Imperial Court in Leipzig.

Prominent Jurists Arrive.

M., but a meeting of the council of the association at 10 o'clock will ratify elections made by the executive council, including that of Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes of the United States as honorary vice president. Other elections follow:

VICE PRESIDENTS—Professor A. Alvarez (Chile), Dr. M. A. Caloyanni (Greece), Professor Berlingieri (Italy), Dr. Bela de Szaszy (Hungary), Dr. G. Walker (Austria), Lord Blanesburgh and Sir Alfred Hopkinson (Great Britain).

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL—Professor Borel (Switzerland), Dr. Huselius (Sweden), Dr. Kiesselbach and Dr. Ernst Wolff (Germany), Dr. A. Muller (Holland), Dr. Emil Nagy (Hungary), Professor Prudhomme (France), Vicomte Poullet (Belgium), Lieut. Col. M. Alexander (Canada), Campbell Lee (United States), Dr. Karsten Meyer (Denmark), R. S. Fraser and General Sir G. Macdonough (Great Britain).

HONORARY MEMBERS—The Earl of Birkenhead, Lord Merrivale, Lord Tomlin, Sir Cecil Hurst, Sir Frederick Pollock, Mm. Alvarez, W. Blaess, W. D. Heyne, A. Mattei, V. V. Pella and Sir Percy Mackinnon.

At the opening of the convention afterward John W. Davis, president of the American branch of the International Law Association and former Democratic candidate for President, will deliver an address of welcome. Several of the foreign delegates will make responses.

Following luncheon at the Plaza the first business session will be held with discussions of social insurance and legalization of documents. On the latter topic the convention will have before it a recommendation that all documents, public or private, be legalized in the same way by the adoption of a convention with the following single operative clause:

"For the use or admission as evidence in any court of law in the territories of any of the high contracting powers, it is sufficient that documents issued or legalized by a court of law, public authority or notary in the territory of any other high contracting power be certified by the consul or diplomatic agent of the former high contracting power on the face thereof."

Should this practice be adopted, it is hoped that suits at law would be expedited and the interests of business thereby advanced.

Dinner at Plaza Tonight.

All the delegates to the convention will be guests of the six bar associations of the city tonight at a dinner at the Plaza. Mr. Davis will preside and the speakers will include Lord MacMillan, Lord of Appeal in Ordinary of Great Britain; Sir John Simon, who headed the British Indian Commission, and Under-Secretary of State Joseph P. Cotton. The women of the party will be entertained at dinner at the Colony Club by a committee of New York women under the chairmanship of Mrs. John S. Sheppard. Viscountess Dunedin, Lady Simon and Lady Jowitt, wife of Sir William Jowitt, Attorney General of England, will be among the guests.

The association will hold its second business session tomorrow morning on the subject, "Effect of War on Contracts." After a luncheon at the Plaza there will be a garden party at 3 P. M. at the home of Clarence Mackay at Roslyn. There will be a visit to Coney Island at night.

Visiting members of the British and French bar who arrived here Saturday went on a trip up the Hudson River yesterday on the steamer Chauncey M. Depew. Landing at Bear Mountain, they went by auto to West Point, where they were received by Major Gen. William R. Smith, who had arranged a special dress parade of the cadets.

FOR WORLD BOARD TO STUDY AVIATION

Head of Dutch Society Advocates Permanent Committee at Opening of Air Congress.

MANY PROBLEMS COME UP

Fog Flying, Aeronautical Sickness, Laws and Insurance Among Matters Discussed at Gathering.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Sept. 1.—A proposal for a permanent international committee on aviation was put forward by Dr. J. A. de Vogel, president of the Dutch Society of Aeronautics, in his presidential address opening the fifth International Congress on Aeronautics here today. The platform, on which were Prince Henry and the Dutch Minister of Communications, was draped with the flags of the many countries represented.

Dr. de Vogel suggested that such a committee should be instituted to give continuity to the work of aeronautic congresses. The first section of the congress will study the problem of the organization of airports and the instruments used in aeronautics, including radio.

The experiences of flying in fog and mist and of ice formation on wings of planes will be exchanged. The number of papers to be read before the technical sections shows that special importance is being given to information of this sort. In the judicial section questions as to insurance responsibility and neutrality in war will be discussed.

Air Sickness to Be Discussed.

The medical section will hear several papers on the influence of flying on the human constitution as studied by physicians. Air sickness will be among the disorders to be taken up.

Wagner's overture to "The Flying Dutchman" was played by the orchestra just as forty-three Dutch army planes soared over the building in which the congress is being held. Afterward the planes gave demonstrations of flying. Visits to Dutch airports are on the program of the congress, which will be in session for six days.

The official American observers include Major G. E. A. Reitburg, military air attaché at Berlin; Lieut Commander G. D. Murray, naval air attaché at London, and A. D. Douglas Cook, Assistant Trade Commissioner at Berlin. They have contributed papers to the congress. Also present are John J. Ide, European technical assistant to the National Advisory Committee on Aeronautics, Professor A. M. Klemin of the Guggenheim Foundation, and Dr. W. G. Friedrich, research engineer of Hackensack, N. J., and Clarence M. Young, who will address the congress on American airway practices.

Sir Sefton Brancker, Air Vice Marshal, is heading the official British delegation, which includes eight officials of the British Air Ministry.

In the first section of the congress discussion centred on the best way to light air routes and the value of neon light for this purpose. This discussion followed the general lines of the resolutions adopted by the Berlin conference last April. Proposals to be made at the International Congress for Safety in the Air, which will meet in December, were examined, and a small editorial committee will formulate some amendments.

Standard Medical Terms Urged.

In the medical section standard nomenclature was advocated and discussed, and remedies taken up in regard to sickness among aviators. The air tourist section resolved to formulate a requirement that every town of 10,000 inhabitants shall in some way make its name visible to aviators in flight.

In the judicial section a resolution proposed by a Polish delegate was adopted providing that international conventions on the responsibility of passenger services for the lives of passengers can have no practical effect as long as they not supplemented by the obligation of air services to insure the lives of passengers up to a maximum of 125,000 francs (about $5,000). This is designed to increase safety measures on the part of air services.

The Italian Under-Secretary of Aviation, Signor Fiannini, proposed a resolution that the unification of laws in aeronautical matters should be furthered as much as possible. This will be discussed tomorrow.

The technical section decided to treat meteorological subjects in a special committee of experts, who will meet Thursday under the chairmanship of the director of the official Dutch meteorological institutes. There will be much discussion in this section in German and Dutch papers on the problem of the stability of airplanes.

BYRD EXHIBIT AT SYRACUSE.

20,000 View Antarctic Replica at Opening of State Fair.

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 1.—Twenty thousand persons saw the Byrd Antarctic and aviation exhibit today at the opening of the New York State Fair.

This exhibit, arranged and staged by THE NEW YORK TIMES, was displayed in cooperation with The Syracuse Post-Standard and was amplified by a ten-foot model of the Goodyear-Zeppelin-built Akron, a replica of the giant dirigible being constructed for the navy.

The crowds exceeded all expectations of fair officials and the attendance at the Byrd exhibit was the largest ever assembled in one day for an exhibit of this nature.

YANCEY SPEEDING HOME.

Hops Off From Rio de Janeiro—Plans Atlantic Flight.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SAO PAULO, Brazil, Sept. 1.—Delayed a day on account of motor trouble, Captain Lewis A. Yancey in his Detroit-Stinson plane took off at Rio de Janeiro today at 8 A. M. for Natal. This hop is about 1,300 miles.

Before leaving, Captain Yancey stated he was hurrying to return to the United States as soon as possible, as he has plans for making another flight across the North Atlantic the latter part of this month or the first part of October.

Prince of Wales Is Promoted In All Three Services in a Day

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 1.—In one day the Prince of Wales has been promoted to a higher rank in each branch of the service, according to official announcements made today. From Captain he becomes Vice Admiral of the fleet, passing over the rank of Rear Admiral. In the army he assumes the rank of Lieutenant General, and from Group Captain he is raised to the rank of Air Marshal in the Royal Air Force.

The Prince, now 36, began his naval career in 1907, when he entered the Royal Naval College at Osborne as a cadet. He had held the rank of Captain since 1919, when he made his first Empire tour to Canada on H. M. S. Renown.

The Prince joined his parents at Balmoral, Scotland, today, expecting to see his new niece, the Duchess of York's baby daughter, soon. He went north by train wearing a grey flannel suit and arrived in Highland dress.

REPORT 2 MINISTERS OUT IN ARGENTINA

War Department Head Believed One as Officers Confer With Interior Chief.

IRIGOYEN REMAINS AT HOME

Stays Away From Office for Third Successive Day—Gold Peso Falls to 126 for $100, Low Mark.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 1.—President Irigoyen did not go to the executive offices today, this being the third successive day he has remained at his home.

Rumors that the Minister of War has tendered his resignation were strengthened today by the fact that the commandants of the first and second army divisions and other high army officers who have been conferring daily with the Minister of War conferred last night and today with the Minister of the Interior. The latter and the Minister of Foreign Affairs are the only two Cabinet members enjoying the close confidence of the President.

The Minister of Public Works is also reported to have resigned. He left Buenos Aires today for his home in the interior.

The principal subject of conversation today in political circles as well as in the streets was the unprecedented hostile manifestation which prevented the Minister of Agriculture from inaugurating the annual cattle show of the Argentine Rural Society Sunday afternoon. When the Minister rose to make the usual opening address he was greeted by loud whistling and booing which made it impossible for him to be heard and which continued until he left the building.

Aimed at Executive.

The hostile group followed him to his automobile, where one of them approached and told him the manifestation was not directed against him personally but against the executive power which he was representing. Today's newspapers devote much space to the incident, saying that never in the country's history has there been anything like it.

The confusion and lack of coordination in Cabinet circles was apparent today when all sailors on leave or shore duty were ordered to rejoin their ships and remain at their posts. When they reported on board they were informed the order had been canceled.

The exchange value of the gold peso dropped to 126 for $100 this afternoon, this being a new low record since the gold conversion office was closed in December to prevent further exports of gold. The quotation also establishes a record for a one-day drop.

The market closed Friday afternoon at 123.80 and Saturday was a holiday. The market opened this morning at 124.5 and dropped steadily to 126. The drop is blamed on the unsettled political situation and the heavy demand for drafts on New York and London.

Today's quotation makes the paper peso worth 36 cents, compared with a par value of 42.46 cents.

Low Price for Champion Bull.

The unsatisfactory business conditions reigning in Argentina were emphasized this afternoon when the grand champion shorthorn bull at the Rural Society's annual cattle show was sold at auction for only 32,000 pesos, the equivalent at today's exchange of $11,200. The animal was one of the finest that had been exhibited in recent years.

Although the price was 2,000 pesos higher than was paid for last year's champion, it was the lowest price paid since 1914, with the exception of last year, and less than half the average price over the last ten years, in three of which the champion shorthorn bull was sold for more than 100,000 pesos. In 1925 the champion was sold for 152,000 pesos, the equivalent of $64,000, the highest price ever paid for a shorthorn.

FOG FORCES LANDING IN BAY

Caught in the fog that suddenly closed down over New York and vicinity at dusk last evening, Owen O'Connor, pilot for Colonial Airways, landed eight passengers from Boston in Newark Bay just outside the ship channel, instead of at Newark Airport, a half mile away. He made the landing without mishap, taxied his Sikorsky amphibian to a near-by dock and the passengers climbed up a ladder to dry land. They continued to their destinations in taxicabs.

The passengers were Albert Jaynes, 5 West Sixty-third Street; C. S. Bogart of 44 Drake Road, Scarsdale; Donald McKechnie of 46 East Thirty-sixth Street, Bayonne; Miss Jean Zellermeyer of 64 East Thirty-fourth Street; Miss Ora Fuchs of Denver, Col.; James A. Whetton of Needham, Mass; Benjamin Friedman of Chicago, and George Silberman of 250 Fort Washington Avenue.

NIGHT FOG FORCES LINDBERGHS TO LAND

FLOODLIGHTS KEPT ON HERE

Some Apprehension Had Been Felt When They Were Several Hours Overdue at New York.

Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh were forced down by fog at the air mail field at Bellefonte, Pa., last evening as they were returning to New York from Detroit, where they had been visiting on the way back from the National Air Races at Chicago.

Although the famous couple landed at Bellefonte at 10 o'clock, two hours after their departure from Buffalo, where they had stopped for fuel, word of their landing was not received here until early this morning, after several hours of anxiety for their safety.

In that period landing fields in the metropolitan area kept their floodlights on i the faint hope that they might serve to guide the plane down, although attachés at the Long Island field frankly admitted that even the most skillful flier could not have landed in the face of the thick blanket of fog which had swept in during the late afternoon and evening.

Colonel Lindbergh had arrived in Buffalo at 7:45 Daylight Saving Time and was warned by the meteorologist there of poor visibility along the Hudson valley. He took on an extra fifty gallons of gasoline, evidently to provide for the possibility that he might not be able to land at New York and might have to turn back to an airport outside the fog-bound area.

He arrived at Bellefonte at 10 o'clock and made no comment on his trip to the airport officials there except to say that the fog had kept him from continuing to New York. Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh went to the Hotel Brockerhoff at Bellefonte for the night.

DETROIT, Sept. 1 (AP).—Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh took off for New York at 4:45 P. M. from Ypsilanti Airport, near Detroit. They had been visting President Alexander G. Ruthven of the University of Michigan.

VENTURA HAILED AT PORT.

San Francisco Welcomes the Liner Bringing 91 Saved From Tahiti.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Sept. 1.—The Mabon liner Ventura steamed today through the Golden Gate bearing 91 of 317 men, women and children she rescued from the foundering steamer Tahiti two weeks ago in the South Seas.

It was a triumphal marine procession. With shrieking sirens, shrilling whistles, with airplanes overhead and yachts alongside, the ovation to the heroism and seamanship of the Ventura and its crew continued until the liner reached her pier.

On the bridge of the Ventura, Acting Mayor Angelo Rossi expressed the praise of San Francisco for the heroic deed of Captain Meyer and his men and presented to the skipper an illuminated scroll.

Tomorrow Captain Meyer and his men will parade up Market Street. At the City Hall, they will be presented to the people of San Francisco and then will be guests at a luncheon at the Commercial Club.

ARREST IN LINGLE KILLING.

Man Once Indicted for Murder Here Held by Chicago Police.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—Israel Alderman, alleged gunman for the Moran-Zuta-Aeillo gang, said to be wanted for questioning in the murder of Alfred J. Lingle, reporter for The Chicago Tribune, was arrested tonight.

In hiding since June 9, the day of the killing, Alderman is reported to have acted as Frank Foster's liaison man here after Foster had fled to Los Angeles and to have communicated with him by code.

Detective Bureau records show Alderman was indicted Oct. 19, 1925, in New York City for the murder of a jeweler in a $25,000 hold-up. He was arrested here, but the New York authorities were unable to extradite him because they could not produce a witness in the Cook County Criminal Court in which he was arraigned, to swear he was in New York on the day of the murder.

HEADS CATHOLIC VEREIN.

A. J. Werdein Is Re-elected for the Seventh Term at Utica Session.

UTICA, N. Y., Sept. 1 (AP).—Re-election of all but two officers marked the final session of the thirty-third annual convention of the New York branch, Catholic Central Verein of America, here today. Alois J. Werdein of Buffalo was again chosen president after six terms and completing twenty-five years of service, nineteen as secretary.

Joseph M. Schifferli of Buffalo was re-elected recording secretary after a quarter century service.

New officers are Charles T. Rott of Rochester and Henry F. Honikel of Albany, elected third and fourth vice presidents, respectively. Others re-elected were the Rev. Dr. Albert Regensburger of Syracuse, spiritual advisor; Adam Galm of Brooklyn, second vice president; Peter J. M. Clute of Schenectady, fifth vice president; Mrs. Clara Thries of Buffalo, general secretary; Carl J. Weis of Schenectady, marshal, and Charles Stickler of Poughkeepsie, historian.

SWIMMER'S BODY FOUND.

Johnny Mehl of Jamaica, L. I., Lost in Lake Ontario Month Ago.

TORONTO, Sept. 1 (Canadian Press).—The body of Johnny Mehl of Jamaica, L. I., drowned in Lake Ontario off Port Credit a month ago, was recovered today and identified. It will be sent to Mehl's home tomorrow.

Mehl came here to train for the men's marathon swim at the Canadian National Exhibition. With two others he was swimming out in the lake when a squall arose. The small boat into which they climbed was blown further out and then capsized. The other two reached shore, but Mehl, numbed by the cold, sank.

PLANE RISES IN 800 YARDS

Despite Five-Ton Load It Shows No Sign of Strain—Fuel Enough for Fifty Hours.

By P. J. PHILIP.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LE BOURGET, Sept. 1.—It was after nearly seven hours of almost agonizing waiting that Captain Coste and M. Bellonte started this morning at 10:54 A. M. (French Summer time) from Le Bourget on their Atlantic flight. At 4 A. M. all was ready, but Captain Coste, as he stepped from his Passy apartment, where he had been sleeping, asked those who had come to fetch him, "Are the stars clear?"

It sounded at that dead morning hour a necromantic kind of question. But it was there the whole essence of the situation lay. The stars, which should have been shining at their brightest before dawn, were entirely obscured. Few of those who had spent the night in vigil had noticed it. They were all thinking how wonderful the reports had been of conditions over the Atlantic. Captain Coste went straight with his question to the immediate issue.

There were some two or three hundred people at Le Bourget Field when Captain Coste arrived. In the course of the night every bolt and nut, every gadget and tissue on this most carefully prepared of all air vessels had been gone over. Fuelling had been completed and the airmen's provisions stored on board. Their clothes were ready and as soon as Captain Coste came the scarlet plane, with all its legend of great flights and records, was wheeled out the door of its hangar and the motors started.

Engines' Purr Satisfactory.

Captain Coste stood listening and nodding his satisfaction. It seemed certain that as soon as dawn came fully the start would be made.

But Captain Coste kept looking for the stars. Slowly at first, then more heavily as the light grew stronger, the whole atmosphere began, instead of clearing, to fill with heavy white opaqueness. It was not that there was mist or fog. It was simply that, despite a strong breeze which blew from the northeast from exactly the right direction for a good take-off, clouds lay low and sullen over the whole country. From the outside reports began to come in confirming that this curious phonomenon was general over the whole Seine Valley and along the Channel.

Gradually knowledge of this terribly ironic situation spread. While, as if by a miracle at the end of these long weeks of waiting, conditions were entirely favorable over the whole Atlantic route, here at the very start they were almost desperately bad. Even those who knew least about aviation recognized that it would be the utmost folly to try to lift and pilot the scarlet plane, with its single motor, its small wing expanse and its tremendous weight of 6,400 kilograms into that uncertain, misty air.

Crowd Talks of Postponement.

"Another postponement," they began to whisper. And so the vigil began again. Lieutenant Paul Codos, Captain Coste's companion on some of his greatest flights, went off in a miniature Question Mark to see for himself how far the fog spread. Those who still waited where the big plane had been placed at the western end of the long field impatiently saw that, instead of lifting as daylight grew, the heavy grayness of the clouds became more and more enveloping. A small, fine rain, such as people call a Scotch mist, began to fall.

Even the scarlet plane, standing almost deserted now by the curious crowd, took on a desolate, forsaken look.

"That is not the look a plane should have when it is going to fly the Atlantic," one man said.

Alone in the whole crowd Captain Coste kept his optimism. There was never a flicker of the least discouragement in his face or in his brisk comings and goings. He joked with every one.

"We will have to wait a bit," he repeated, "but if it clears before midday we start."

Everything was so completely ready that there was nothing more to do but watch the weather reports. In the little office Captain Coste soon tired of that.

Flier Goes Back to Sleep.

"What a fool I was to get up so early," he said. He asked if there was a soldier's bed available, wrapped himself in his blanket and fell asleep almost instantly. Outside in the dreary daylight the crowd waited quietly but began to melt away. Disappointment at Le Bourget has become somewhat of a habit.

There was only one bright spot in the whole morning. Between the place where her husband slept and the big red plane at the other end of the field Mme. Mary Coste moved constantly backward and forward; not nervous, but, like every one else, touched with impatience. She could not even affect that real, philosophic indifference of her husband. For the occasion she had donned a sports costume of white and scarlet with a little close fitting white hat on which was embroidered a scarlet question mark. As she came back once more toward the plane, she saw in the grass without having searched for it, a four-leaf clover. Even in her native Georgia good luck is known to attend such a phenomenon. Plucking it carefully she went back to the office where Captain Coste still slept, the only calm person in all that nervous, tired crowd.

Bellonte Wakes Up His Chief.

At 10 o'clock the curly-haired Maurice Bellonte, busy with his maps, decided it was time to awaken his chief for at last the sky was beginning to rise. One could see at least half a mile beyond Le Bourget Field.

Captain Coste awoke as cool, as practical and as alert as ever.

"Half an hour yet," was all he said and then he started joking again. When some one asked if it was not too late, if the long delay might not mean he would reach New York after nightfall, he replied: "Not with luck, and we are going to have marvelous luck. The situation is absolutely unique."

Mme. Coste then came in with her offering of a four-leaf clover and tucked it in his buttonhole.

"That's grand," he told her as he kissed her and buttoned it down for safety.

It is the only mascot the Question Mark is carrying.

Captain Coste and M. Bellonte ate a breakfast of biscuits and water as the sky cleared still further, each watching the growing light—Captain Coste as unemotional as an old sea captain, M. Bellonte with his long face, curly hair and blue, clear eyes like a dreaming young knight.

Both Give Word Together.

"Come on," they said at last, almost simultaneously, and climbed into a car to drive across to where the Question Mark stood patiently waiting.

It seemed to take life again as Captain Coste appeared. There was a moment's fuss as swan's-down from their white pullovers had to be carefully wiped from eyes and faces. Then Captain Coste climbed jauntily aboard his ship. He showed, indeed, that he had no more emotion than if he were just going to fly around for an hour. He has gambled with his life and won so often. Yet those who know him knew his calm was just perfect confidence in his own preparations and himself.

On the road out to Le Bourget in the night he had driven his own car.

It was a moment when most men would have forgotten, in their exhilaration, ordinary precautions, but Captain Coste slowed down at every corner and flashed his lights as a warning—horns being forbidden in the night hours in Paris.

There were photographs to be taken and sound pictures to be made. Both men submitted easily, for they had long been used to it.

"Contact!"

With a compressed-air starter, the motor was set in motion, and its deep note rose and rose, louder and louder as Captain Coste tested it. It sang true and strong. M. Lacoste, father of the noted tennis player and himself well known as the builder of the Hispano-Suiza motor, had a last word to say:

"Do not, at any price, be foolhardy," he urged.

Captain Coste, cool and as perfectly master of himself as ever, answered calmly:

"M. Lacoste, if it were foolish to start out this morning, we would stay here."

Around the plane the police and soldiers of the aviation camp had formed a cordon, but it was to keep these two men's friends away. They shouted last messages, which were drowned in the noise of the motor. They waved to both men, engrossed in their task, which had already begun.

Captain Coste's order came at last: "Clear away below!"

The engine roared its majestic diapason. Slowly, almost at a snail's pace it seemed, the scarlet plane, with its tricolor bands, its glorious legend and its enigmatic sign, moved forward.

Autos Follow Down Field.

For twenty feet any man walking could have kept up with it. Suddenly, it gathered impetus, like a lion as he leaps out of a crouch.

A dozen automobiles started to chase down the long field. It seemed that even those who knew Captain Coste feared that this attempt to lift such a great weight with so small a wing expanse and a single motor might be too much. There was fear in every one's throat, and with it, somehow, great confidence. Near the place where Lindbergh landed the tail carrier detached and went tumbling drunkenly aside. Perfectly balanced on its landing wheels, the plane ran on powerfully and unforced.

Captain Coste did not seek to rise before his vessel should itself seek to wing itself into its element.

Then, slowly—ever so slowly, it seemed—but without either hesitation or fault, it rose, gliding into the air.

The smoothness of the rise gave the first indication of the plane's perfection of craftsmanship and of the power of the engine.

Unhurried, Captain Coste let it rise, content to climb slowly as long as that was sufficient.

Into the still, gray light it faded, although the brilliance of its scarlet seemed still to linger in the eyes.

Taxies 800 Meters at Start.

LE BOURGET, Sept. 1 (AP).—Captain Coste got the big red plane into the air after a comparatively short run of 800 meters, for the plane weighed seven tons, five of which was gasoline. This was enough fuel, he said, to carry him 5,000 miles in favorable weather. He said he expected to reach New York within thirty-five hours, although well able to stay up more than fifty hours, as he did last year when establishing the world's long-distance record by flying from France to Tsitsihar, Manchuria.

When the plane reached the end of the field it was 100 feet up in the air. He put its nose northward first and soon disappeared from view. His last gesture was to wave at his wife, a Russian actress, with a bright red dress on. She waved at him for several minutes after he was out of sight.

Coste Is Bringing Altimeter Lost by Byrd in Ocean Flight

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 1.—Among the instruments aboard Captain Coste's plane Question Mark is the altimeter compass carried on the Byrd plane America, which dropped into the sea when the plane landed, damaged, at Ver-sur-Mer. The altimeter was recovered by a fisherman and taken to Paris, and Captain Coste requested the privilege of returning it to Admiral Byrd.

"It will perhaps be useful to me," said Captain Coste, "and I shall be glad to be the messenger to return to Admiral Byrd his lost altimeter on behalf of the French Government."

COSTE IS HALF WAY ACROSS ATLANTIC

Kimball, United States meteorologist in New York, who predicted that for the first half of their journey across the ocean the airmen would be aided by easterly winds and that the winds would become increasingly less favorable as they approached the American coast.

Apparently, they had to face their greatest test during the night, although the weather map, indicating rain for the western Atlantic, gave no indications of general storms. Dr. Kimball believed that the fliers would rise to an altitude of about 2,000 feet to gain full advantage of the tail winds. Their speed probably would be cut, however, judging by weather reports, which predict westerly winds for the west Atlantic after the fliers reach the coast.

From Halifax it was reported that conditions would be favorable for the flight down the coast.

The Question Mark's position at the time of her contact with Louisburg, N. S., could be determined by a message wirelessed directly to THE NEW YORK TIMES by the North German Lloyd steamship Bremen at 9:33 P. M., New York Daylight Time, stating that at 11 o'clock G. M. T. (7 o'clock E. D. T.) the French airplane, in communication with the Bremen, had reached a point at 48 degrees 30 minutes north and 32 degrees west.

This message, confirmed by one from the Bremen's sister ship the Europa, to the Mackay Radio Company here, placed the Question Mark at more than half-way between the Irish coast and Newfoundland.

The message from the Europa said the fliers were "O. K." It was received directly from the Question Mark and was confirmed by a radiogram from the steamship Franconia, picked up by the Radio Marine Corporation at Chatham, Mass.

Turns Southward for New York.

The Bremen's message declared that Captain Coste was following a southward course, apparently headed straight for New York.

A previous message from the Bremen to THE NEW YORK TIMES stated that at 6:10 P. M., New York time, the ship had been in communication with the Question Mark, which gave its position at 6 P. M. as 50 degrees 10 minutes N. and 30 degrees 40 minutes W.

A message picked up by the Marconi station at Montreal, and sent out by The Associated Press, gave Captain Coste's position at 3:45 P. M., New York time, as 51 degrees N. and 24 degrees W. This message, picked up presumably from a ship at sea whose name was not given, showed Captain Coste to be about 600 miles out over the ocean, west of Loop Head, on the west coast of Ireland.

The message indicated that Captain Coste had progressed more than 300 miles since his position had been reported at 1:30 P. M., New York time, by the French liner Rochambeau and sent to The Associated Press.

The Marconi message indicated also that the Question Mark was keeping up the speed of around 125 miles an hour at which it flew on the first part of its voyage.

A message received by the Radio Marine Corporation in New York from the North German Lloyd liner Columbus and given out by The Associated Press said that the ship had heard the Question Mark giving its position at 1:20 P. M. as 51 degrees 20 minutes N. and 16 degrees W.

There was a tail wind of fifteen miles an hour, the Columbus's skipper reported. He also said he heard the Question Mark getting its bearings from the Rochambeau.

A later message from the Columbus picked up by the Chatham (Mass.) station of the Radio Marine Corporation at 5:05 P. M. stated that at 3:20 P. M. the Question Mark was 51 degrees 20 minutes N. and 16 degrees W., speeding at 100 miles an hour with a four-mile wind behind it. The Columbus said she did not see the Question Mark but heard it at 600 meters.

At 3:20 P. M. the French Naval Ministry at Paris received a message from the liner Rochambeau stating that Captain Coste had run between two cloudbanks, The Associated Press reported, and was going to veer toward the north for better weather.

A previous report about this time caused some excitement when the Ile de France radioed The Associated Press that it had intercepted a message from the Rochambeau saying the flier had been caught between two storms and was turning northward. After receipt of the Air Ministry's message, however, The Associated Press declared, it was believed the plane was in no danger.

This appeared to have been confirmed by the later messages from the Bremen to THE NEW YORK TIMES, which showed that Captain Coste was pursuing a southerly direction, having turned apparently to resume a direct flight from Paris to New York.

At 1 P. M. yesterday the Question Mark was reported by the French steamship Marie Therese, in a wireless to the London office of The Associated Press, to be 170 miles off the coast of Ireland. The French ship reported that Captain Coste's airplane had just passed overhead.

Messages to THE NEW YORK TIMES declared that at 11:49 A. M. Captain Coste was following the River Shannon near Kilrush, County Clare, flying fast and at a high altitude. Captain Coste was last seen leaving the Irish coast in a westerly direction under most favorable weather conditions with a moderate wind following. Shortly before that he had passed Waterford, County Clare, apparently headed straight for the Atlantic. Less than an hour earlier he was flying over Rosslare at an altitude of 1,500 feet.

At 10:40 A. M. yesterday Captain Coste was reported in Associated Press dispatches from Limerick, Ireland, as having been sighted by civic guards there, flying high and fast and heading for the coast of Galway. At that time he was 560 miles by air from Le Bourget Air Field, having covered this distance in less than six hours over a route which would bring him exactly over the Great Circle.

The point at which the Question Mark left the continent appeared to be Pointe Barfleur, north of Cherbourg.

While flying over Ireland the Question Mark was in communication with the Berengaria, which sailed from New York Thursday. The Berengaria, according to Associated Press dispatches, was informed by Captain Coste that "everything is O. K."

A message from the Question Mark received at Valencia, Irish Free State, showed that the airplane had left the Irish coast at noon.

Thirty-nine passenger liners and about 100 freight ships are strung along the North Atlantic steamship lanes in the path of the fliers, it was learned yesterday. Bound to New York, in order of their distance from Europe, are seventeen passenger ships. Among them are the Cunard liner Aquitania, the Hamburg-American liner Hamburg, the Holland-America liner Statendam, the Hamburg-American liner Milwaukee, the Carmania, Carinthia and Caledonia of the Cunard Line, the North German Lloyd liner Stuttgart, the Scandinavian-American liner Frederick VIII, the Swedish-American liner Kungsholm, the North German Lloyd liner Bremen, the Hamburg-American liner Resolute, the French liner De Grasse, the United States liner Leviathan, the French liner France, the White Star liner Homeric and the Yorck of the North German Lloyd Line.

The twenty-two ships bound to Europe, in order of their distance from New York, are:

The White Star liner Cedric, the Scandinavian-American liner Hellig Olav, the Anchor liner California, the Hamburg-American liner St. Louis, the Atlantic Transport liner Minnewaska, the Cunarder Franconia, the United States liner Republic, the North German Lloyd liner Europa, the Holland-America liner Volendam, the Cunarder Caronia, the White Star liner Majestic, the Red Star liner Pennland, the Baltic-American liner Polonia, the North German Lloyd liner Dresden, the American Trader of the American Merchants' Line, the North German Lloyd liner Columbus, the Hamburg-American liner New York, the French liner Ile de France, the Cunarder Berengaria, the United States liner America, the French liner Bourdonnais, the Hamburg-American liner Reliance and the Anchor liner Transylvania.

The preparations for the reception of Captain Coste and his companion at the Curtiss-Wright Field at Valley Stream, L. I., are under the direction of W. L. Avery, manager of the airport. The floodlights at the field will be turned on at dark tonight if Captain Coste has not arrived before then. He will be received by members of the Nassau County reception committee headed by William L. Enequist of the Mayor's Committee on Reception of Distinguished Guests.

It could not be ascertained last night whether Grover Whalen, chairman of the Mayor's committee, would be present.

Special arrangements have been made by the Nassau County and New York police to handle the crowds. The Question Mark will be taken to hangar 1.

Telegraph instruments and additional telephones have been installed at the field to take care of the army of newspaper men who will report the arrival.

The landing will be broadcast over a nation-wide hook-up and will be rebroadcast in France by French stations. The broadcasting here will be over WEAF and WJZ. Eleanor Smith, aviatrix, and Kurt Peterson will describe the landing in English, while Kelvin Keech, National Broadcasting Company announcer, and René Recover, Captain Coste's personal representative here, will broadcast in French.

On Lower Edge of Great Circle.

PARIS, Sept. 1 (AP).—Far out over the Atlantic Ocean tonight, winging toward America, Captain Coste and his flying companion, Maurice Bellonte, in the famous Question Mark, sped along the lower edge of the Great Circle to repay the visit of the Lone Eagle of 1927, Charles A. Lindbergh.

Lieutenant Paul Codos, who escorted Captain Coste part of the way in another plane, returned to Le Bourget at 11:35 A. M. and said that the aviator, who already has crossed the Atlantic in an airplane, waved him farewell ten miles north of Le Bourget and had signaled that all was well. Lieutenant Codos said that the first few miles of the flight were accomplished in perfect fashion.

At departure there lay ahead of Captain Coste a trip probably in excess of 3,700 miles, which he should traverse at an average speed of 100 miles an hour by about sundown tomorrow. Should he succeed in his flight he will be the first East-West transatlantic flier actually to achieve the goal of landing in New York without a stop.

Captain Coste estimated that his flight to New York City would require thirty-five hours.

By the time the big machine had reached the Irish coast and thrust its nose into the air over the open sea, it had settled down to a gait that must have been an even 125 miles an hour, the Question Mark's best flying speed for endurance performance.

Coste's Wife Finds a Four-Leaf Clover; 'Excited but Not Frightened,' She Declares

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 1.—Mary Coste, wife of France's intrepid airman, found a four-leaf clover in the grasses of Le Bourget today, so she is confident tonight while her husband is out over the Atlantic.

"I am not superstitious," she said tonight, "but it makes me feel happy just the same. I am excited but not frightened."

The pretty Georgian actress sat up late with friends in the Coste apartment at Passy and received news bulletins telephoned to her by the newspaper which will publish the airman's account of his flight.

"I shall try to sleep tonight," she said, bidding good night to her guests, but the vivacity of her demeanor could not hide that the sleep she takes will not compare with the calm repose of the famous aviator last night, who, she said, "slept like a log," when he knew he would awaken for his great adventure.

ADVERSE WINDS DUE ON LAST OCEAN LAP

By Veering South of His Course Coste Is Expected to Cut Down Their Velocity.

SHIPS REPORT CONDITIONS

Fliers Face Headwinds Over Land, but Good Weather Otherwise—Lindbergh Optimistic.

As Captain Dieudonné Coste and Maurice Bellonte pushed their Breguet biplane over the British Isles and their roaring 650-horsepower engine nosed on out to sea before a twenty-five-mile-an-hour tailwind, a small group of aeronautical experts and aerologists was kept busy throughout the holiday in the local office of the weather bureau atop the Whitehall Building.

Several pilots and navigators who are now awaiting equally fair skies with winds opposite to those which Coste is encountering clustered about Dr. James H. Kimball, meteorologist and forecaster of transatlantic flying weather, and made hurried calculations with each report of the Breguet's progress.

Meanwhile, with teletypes clicking off data on their ribbons as fast as it was gathered in Washington from ships at sea, Dr. Kimball pored over a huge map, changing details of winds and positions as each new message came in. At regular intervals he posted his observations on a permanent map, a series of which showed accurately the progressive courses of the various areas of low or high pressure and their accompanying wind, storm or fog.

From the evening map it was learned that the two men who are daring the non-stop flight which has yet to be completed and has cost many lives would enjoy tailwinds somewhat stronger than anticipated over the first half of their long jump over the Atlantic. Early reports of the plane's progress showed an average speed of 117 miles an hour despite the heavy load, indicating that the tailwinds were in excess of twenty-five-miles-an-hour velocity.

Ships all along the lanes which run 100 or more miles south of the Great Circle Course to Cape Race, Newfoundland, reported high barometric readings with spotty skies with the exception of the Bremen, the first of the liners which Captain Coste will leave off to his left. At the edge of the hurricane and tropical storm area which passed eastward over Bermuda last Wednesday and is now centred over the Azores, the North German Lloyd liner reported low pressure and strong east-northeast winds. She gave her position as Lat. 48 N., Long. 27 W. at the time the weather report was last relayed to shore.

The next ship which will be passed by the Frenchmen, far off to the north, will be the America of the United States Lines, which reported clear skies and north-northeast winds from its last position at Lat. 45 N., Long. 36 W., about midocean, and along the meridian at which the fliers are expected to run out of the tailwinds.

Nearest to the actual course the next ship at sea will be the American Trader, last reported at Lat. 48 N., Long. 48 W., but a few degrees south of the flying course and near enough so the ship may aid the fliers if need should arise. The American Trader reported reversed winds from the north-northwest, a quartering headwind of light velocity and the first adversity to be encountered. Because of the shifting winds and clouds in that area a likelihood of squalls at low altitudes was reported.

The position reported by the American Trader is about 300 miles due east from St. John's, N. F., to be sighted by the fliers early this morning, according to their schedule.

The Leviathan, 300 miles south of St. John's, was the only one of the ships at sea which reported fog, but her report showed a fair amount of visibility, which indicated the fog as light and local near Lat. 44 N., Long. 53 W. The Republic, another returning United States liner, and the Minnewaska also gave good reports of ocean weather, but each with winds from the north and northwest.

The further south Captain Coste can hold his course, so much will he diminish the velocities of his adverse winds along the last stages of the water jump, according to the charts, and he is expected to keep veering in that direction in case he runs into squalls or other meteorological impediments. Too far south he would miss the Newfoundland coast altogether, however, and would lengthen both his over-water route and his total mileage from Paris to New York.

Once over land the men will have some difficulty battling headwinds to New York but few other hazards. Whatever fogs were reported yesterday along the New England coast should have disappeared by this morning with exceptions only over small areas where they will have burned themselves out to ground hazes.

Besides his work on the Coste flight Dr. Kimball is at present compiling data on ocean weather which indicate an early take-off for three eastbound planes between New York, Boston and Montreal respectively and Europe, and the men connected with those flights were following the progress of the French flight with the keenest interest in the Weather Bureau offices yesterday.

Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh also expressed keen interest in Captain Coste's advance across the reverse of his own route of 1927. Colonel Lindbergh had gone to the home of one of his relatives in Detroit and he and Mrs. Lindbergh hoped to be in New York in time to see the French plane land at Curtiss Airport in Valley Stream. He said that in his opinion the speed with full load of the first few hours showed most satisfactory indications that Captain Coste would pull through, barring accident.

MESSAGES TO PARIS SHOW GOOD SPEED

Wireless of Question Mark Keeps in Touch With Ships at Sea.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 1.—The first news received at Le Bourget of the flight of the Question Mark came from an accompanying plane, which notified the field here that at 11:27 A. M. (6:27 A. M. New York Time), just half an hour after she had risen into the air, Captain Coste's plane was over Les Andelys, seventy-eight miles from Paris, and flying at an altitude of about 3,500 feet. The speed then was about 130 miles an hour.

The first wireless message from Maurice Bellonte came a few minutes later and read as follows: "Passed at 10:48 Greenwich Mean Time (6:48 Daylight) Latitude 49.40 North and 0.45 Longitude West. Altitude 3,500 feet; speed 131 miles an hour."

The position given then showed the plane had reached the mouth of the Seine.

The French Air Ministry announced that the liner Ile de France at 3 o'clock in the afternoon had received a message [illegible] giving the Question Mark's position over Loop Head at the mouth of the Shannon River in Southwest Ireland.

About that time the red biplane was seen from Kilrush, not far distant in County Clare, states a message to the Air Ministry. The plane was flying fast and at a high altitude, and when starting out over the Atlantic at this point the atmospheric conditions were fine, with a light wind.

An hour later the French steamer Marie Thérèse reported sighting the Question Mark 160 miles west of the coast of Ireland.

Shortly after midnight the Air Ministry received a message that was relayed from the French Line steamer Rochambeau at sea at 9:30: "We are communicating with the airplane FRANS [the call signal used by the Coste plane], whose position at 6:30 Greenwich Time was 51:20 N., 16 W.; route 248; speed 100 miles; east wind, force four; misty." The point indicated is 400 miles west of Valentia, Ireland.

The next report to be relayed by steamship at sea came from the Britannic, which indicated that at 49.54 North Latitude and 22.37 West Longitude this ship heard the French plane communicating with the Rochambeau. There was a light easterly wind and the visibility at sea level was poor.

The latest advices received in Paris tonight were transmitted by the liner America, which reported the Question Mark flying at 51 North Latitude and 24 West Longitude.

SIX WORLD RECORDS IN COSTE'S HISTORY

Daring Flier Was First Across South Atlantic—Reached China on Distance Flight.

TWICE MADE A PRISONER

First Time Was for Flying Over German Soil—2d When Thought a Red Spy in Manchuria.

Six times holder of world's records and the hero of flights which have taken him round the globe and many times brought him into the closest intimacy with death, Dieudonné Coste has won for himself the title of "d'Artagnan of Aviation." Gascon born, Captain Coste possesses the qualities of hardy physical endurance combined with intelligent courage, an obdurate will to succeed and a fierce independence of character which are the supreme attributes of his race and have made him the first aviator of France.

Impatient under restraints, Dieudonné Coste was attracted to aviation for the freedom of it, but his struggle for that freedom and its rewards was impeded by many obstacles. Perhaps for that reason his career became the more adventurous and has made his history read more like the epic narratives of old than almost any modern hero. Escapades and scrapes with his superiors figure frequently in the record of his rise, together with hair-breadth escapes, deeds of unexampled coolness and bravery despite his often vaunted prudence and predilection for caution, which he never hesitates to exercise with brusque disregard for criticisms. But probably his greatest characteristic and the one most responsible for his success has been his self-reliance, based in the knowledge of his capacities and in his own painstaking supervision of every detail in his undertakings.

Early Schooling at Toulouse.

Captain Coste was born on Nov. 4, 1893, in the village of Caussade, Tarn and Garonne, twenty-two kilometers northeast of Montauban, in the old province of Gascony. In 1898 his family moved to Toulouse. Here he obtained his early schooling at the Toulouse Lycee. In 1907, at the age of 14, he entered the Ecole des Arts at Metiers, at Aix-en-Provence, as an engineering student.

In 1909, while still pretty much a wild peasant boy, Coste left this school at the age of 16 without completing the three-year preparatory course and for the next three years was employed in offices and laboratories of metal foundries.

His first acquaintance with aviation came in 1912 when he entered the Bleriot school for pilots, obtaining a license from the Aero Club of France after two and one-half months of training. In 1913-14 Coste did compulsory military service in an aviation ground school. At the outbreak of the war he was sent to St. Cyr for technical aviation training and then dispatched to the front near Rheims. It is at this point that his spectacular career begins.

On Dec. 12, 1914, he was wounded in the right hand by a bomb fragment and after convalescence was ordered to the Chartres flying school. In September, 1915, after obtaining a military pilot's license and serving as instructor he went into service at the front as an aviation machine gunner and then for three months at the Western front as pilot.

Volunteered for Eastern Service.

In December, 1915, Coste volunteered for service with the French Army of the Orient. From 1916 to the end of the war he served as pilot with the Armies of the East and became the "ace of aces" on that front. His war record includes eleven individual citations for bravery and skill, nine official victories in air battles and 817 flying hours in pursuit and bombing planes.

In 1919 he returned to Toulouse where he was discharged from the army and in September of that year he began his career as a commercial pilot on the Bordeaux-Toulouse-Montpellier lines, serving on these lines until 1922. From 1922 to 1925 he was one of the leading pilots on the Paris-London service of the French Air Union. In March, 1925, he entered service as pilot of the Breguet factory.

Loaded with decorations from his own country and thirty-eight other nations, the former Gascon peasant boy has traveled the globe and viewed every continent from the air, becoming the idol of his nation, recognized the world over as perhaps the most skilled pilot of his day. Only Colonel Lindbergh's great adventure excels this in romantic elements. No other airman has to his credit such a list of dramatic exploits and experiences as Captain Coste, who has continually added one exciting achievement after another to his long record of accomplishments as mail pilot, war aviator and shatterer of world's records.

Lost Count of Flying Hours.

Captain Coste has lost count of his number of actual flying hours. He stopped recording them when, as a commercial pilot he exceeded 2,000, but it is safe to say no other aviator can offer claims to rival his for unremitting performance.

He has had his share of mishaps, but probably less than the proportion experienced by the best pilots. One of his crashes, on his first distance record attempt with the noted pilot, Robert Thierry, Sept. 13, 1925, turned to poignant tragedy, when pinned in the wreckage of their plane, fumes of the flooding gasoline asphyxiated Thierry while Coste lay imprisoned in the débris, unable to move to assist his companion.

This tragedy occurred near Freiburg, Germany. Coste was arrested for violating the German law forbidding Allied aviators to fly over Teuton territory. He returned to France after his release and was appointed chief pilot of the Breguet firm.

Another adventure befell Captain Coste when, with Maurice Bellonte, he landed in Manchuria in the course of the Russo-Chinese hostilities in 1929 and was held prisoner by the Chinese troops because his red plane had brought him under suspicion of being a Bolshevist.

Rignot Shared in First World Record

Captain Coste first established a world record with Captain Rignot on Oct. 28, 1926, flying from Paris to Djask in Siberia. With Lieutenant Joseph Le Brix, on Oct. 10, 1927, he was the first to fly the South Atlantic from shore to shore, making his flight from St. Louis, Senegal, to Natal in Brazil, and then proceeding with an extraordinary demonstration of endurance and regularity in his trip to South and Central American capitals and across the United States. Next season, from Tokio, they astonished the world by returning to Paris in less than six days' elapsed time. This was April 8-14, 1928.

Even his unsuccessful enterprises have been fraught with daring and ingenuity of a high order, as in his remarkable twelve-hour battle with terrific storms over Siberia and the Urals in his record attempt with Captain Rignot, which fell short of the mark when both airmen were exhausted, and in his amazing excursion over the Atlantic with Bellonte on July 13, 1929, when after passing the Azores en route to New York and finding that head winds had put him far behind schedule, Captain Coste turned his plane back and returned to Paris after covering 5,000 kilometres on the flight.

On Sept. 27, 1929, Captain Coste regained the world's distance record flying with Bellonte to Tsitsikar, Manchuria. This was the occasion when he was held prisoner by the Chinese.

On Dec. 15-17, 1929, Captain Coste and Paul Codos, flying in the circuit Marseilles-Narsonne-Nimes, set a world's endurance record of 58 hours, 38 minutes. On Jan. 17-18 of this year the same team of fliers set a world's endurance record with a freight load of 500 kilograms.

In all these brilliant exploits are emphasized those Gascon qualities that show Captain Coste's valor built in calculating caution, in careful physical and mental preparation and in a persistent will to conquer after unimaginative measurement of all the possibilities. Captain Coste had these qualities from childhood, and in his individualistic nature they developed to give him the very basis of his strength.

COSTE'S COMPANION FLEW IN WORLD WAR

Bellonte Accompanied Captain on Unsuccessful Attempt to Cross Ocean in 1929.

Maurice A. J. Bellonte, the companion of Captain Dieudonné Coste on the flight across the Atlantic, has been associated with Captain Coste ever since entering the service of the French Air Union as a commercial pilot after the war. The pair have been through many hazardous experiences together.

Born in the town of Meru-sur-Oise on Oct. 26, 1896, M. Bellonte attended school there and later was apprenticed in the trade of mechanic. In 1917 he joined the French First Aviation Group, with headquarters at Dijon. Finally he went to the front as a mechanic under the command of Captain Pirot, a noted French flier who died in an accident near Amiens seven years ago.

After a period at the front, M. Bellonte was assigned to Morocco with a squadron stationed at Meknez, where he served three years. Upon returning to France he became a member of the mechanical force of the French Air Union. For two years he worked with Captain Coste, who at the time was piloting planes on the Paris-London run, where they put in more than 1,000 hours of flying time together.

M. Bellonte, who is licensed as wireless operator and navigator, remained with the French Air Union for some time after Captain Coste had resigned from it in order to devote all his time to long-distance flying. But two years ago he, too, resigned and rejoined his old pilot. At once they set about preparing for a flight to New York. After numerous test flights and readjustments of their plane, they took off from Le Bourget on July 13, 1929, at the same time that two Polish fliers, Major Leon Idzikowski and Major Kasimir Kubala, took off on a similar enterprise. The Polish plane crashed in the Azores, killing Major Idzikowski, and Captain Coste and M. Bellonte were driven back by adverse weather. The Frenchmen, undaunted, made a sensational flight to Manchuria, and then set about preparations for the present undertaking.

COSTE HAS NEW MOTOR IN HIS FAMOUS PLANE

With 50 Additional Horsepower, the Question Mark Carries Most Fuel of Career.

The Question Mark, in which Captain Dieudonné Coste is flying over the Atlantic from Paris for New York is the same scarlet Breguet biplane in which last Autumn and Winter the noted French aviator set the world's records for a distance flight in a straight line and in a closed circuit.

However, Captain Coste has installed in the Question Mark a 650-horsepower Hispano-Suiza motor—fifty horsepower more powerful than the old motor with which he made his two world's records. The new motor has enabled him to increase his gasoline supply, Captain Coste having decided several weeks ago to increase the fuel load for the New York flight to 6,200 litres (more than 1,600 gallons). Thus he will take off for the United States with an even bigger load than he did last September when he flew from Le Bourget to Tsitsikhar in Eastern Siberia, a distance of 4,940 miles, or when he attempted an East-to-West transatlantic flight in July of last year and was forced back near the Azores because of head winds.

The plane has been gone over with new cloth stretched on the wings and has been repainted. On one rudder is a Tri-color flag, inscribed with the words, "Breguet GR Hispano 650 CV." A flying stork, Captain Coste's war squadron insignia, decorates the fuselage, with the plane's records, in black lettering, as follows: Paris-Azores-Paris; world's non-stop distance record; Hanoi-Paris, four days six hours; world's endurance record; endurance and speed records with 500 kilos and with 1,000 kilos freight loads. A Tri-color band runs the whole length of the fuselage and is cut in the middle by a huge white interrogation point. Inscribed in this band are the names of the places visited by the plane on its travels—Paris, the Azores, Tsitsikar, Kharbine, Shanghai, Hanoi, Calcutta, Aleppo, Athens and Rome.

A heating system for the plane's motor, which can be turned on or off at will, is one of the important improvements added to the plane. Wireless will be carried and a telephone and telegraph receiving radio also has been installed.

Curtis Opens Capital Air Line.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1 (AP).—Hourly service on the Washington-Philadelphia-New York airline was officially opened today when Vice President Curtis gave a signal for the departure of a tri-motored plane. Two similar planes carrying West Point cadets had left the Washington airport a while before. Among the passengers on the third were Major Gen. James E. Fechet, chief of the Army Air Corps; Clarence M. Young, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, and Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt.

NO WIFE TO GUIDE HIM

WHEN they refurnished their home, his wife did all the shopping. He merely paid the bills. But refurnishing the office was a different matter. The responsibility was up to him.

Somebody tipped him off. He hailed a taxi. In 5 minutes he was in the midst of the only complete exhibit of its kind in New York—the Telesco exhibit of partition, paneling and railing. What kind of wood? What style doors? Plain glass or frosted? How high? It was easy to decide by comparing typical installations displayed here.

For 21 years, Telesco Partition has been recognized as the best. Only Telesco has telescoping posts. Only Telesco has the modern design, the scratch-proof finish, the waterproof base. Only Telesco is made in walnut at a cost that challenges imitations of these fine woods. Will you come yourself, or shall we send a representative to you?

Melting?

Every so often someone asks: is there a Law that forbids the destruction of U. S. coins, as for example by melting? *No, there isn't, but there is a way to stop them from "melting" in your pocket! Bank your dimes, quarters, gold, etc, at the Central Savings! Compound interest turns coins into dollars and dollars into hundreds!

* There is a Statute however, which does forbid the mutilation or lightening of a coin so that the original may be circulated later in impaired condition. The reason is obvious.

COMFORT ASSURED ON ATLANTIC FLIGHT

CRAFT IS LIKE HIS OTHERS

But Many Improvements Have Been Made in Thorough Tests of Plane's Performance.

By P. J. PHILIP.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 1.—The Brequet plane which Captain Dieudonné Coste and Maurice Bellonte are using for their transatlantic flight is a sesquiplane, for the lower wings are very much shorter than the upper wings than is usual in a biplane. It has two seats and a single 650 horsepower Hispano motor. The fuel-carrying capacity is 5,570 litres (about 1,470 gallons).

Like its predecessors which Captain Coste has used for his distance records, it is entirely a metallic structure of duralumin with canvas-covered wings. The fuselage, tractor propellor and landing gear are like those used before. The plane, however, is different in form and in the angle of the wings and tail. The spread of the upper wing and the space between the wings have been increased.

In profile the upper and lower wings are the same as in the old Breguet 19. When looked at flat it will be seen that they are elliptical at the ends. The upper plane consists of a central part into which the wings are set. These have compensation shutters which also are set in.

Main Tank in Fuselage.

The fuselage is ovoid in shape. It includes in the middle part the principal gasoline reservoir which is traversed by strengthening braces. Behind this reservoir are the pilot's and navigator's posts which are protected by windshields which give almost complete shelter.

The frame of the cockpit consists of a central cabin formed by four uprights of special steel transversed by two oblique struts and four vertical stays, while in each half of the cockpit there is a system of two parallel struts of special steel transversed by stays. The cockpit thus is extremely strongly made, as was that of the Breguet 19.

The motor is mounted on a structure which encloses the water and oil circulation. All reservoirs are constructed according to the Breguet custom of duralumin sheeting and are riveted. Their total capacity is 5,570 litres (about 1,470 gallons). The principal reservoir contains 2,990 litres (about 790 gallons) and is placed in the fuselage.

In the upper wing there are seven reservoirs. One placed in the centre, used as carburetor feeder, contains 110 litres (about twenty-nine gallons), while in each half of the wing there are three reservoirs. These wing reservoirs are built in such a way that their partitions form the ribs in the wing.

In recent weeks two more reservoirs were added to the plane. These are attached to the lower wing and when empty would serve to keep the plane afloat in a forced descent. Each can be emptied by a hand pump. Motor pumps bring the gasoline from other reservoirs into the supply tank. The whole system of supply has been found during test flights to work admirably. There is a quick-emptying system to be used in a failure to take off.

Oil circulation is assured by two reservoirs with a total capacity of 220 litres. The water supply is sixty-five litres with a special fifteen litre emergency supply which can be used to compensate loss by evaporation during the flight.

The pilot and observer sit tandem, well protected by cockpit and windshield and each has a complete set of controls. Every possible arrangement has been made for the comfort of pilot and navigator during the flight of forty to fifty hours. They will carry wireless transmission and reception apparatus. In the pilot's cockpit on both sides will be placed food supplies and below the seat is a reservoir for drinking water which is easily detachable.

In front and on each side of the pilot's chair are the controls and the following instruments:

Multitude of Instruments.

Carburetor thermometer, two carburetor mixture thermometers, inclinometer, gyrorector, voltimeter, flight indicator, chronograph, speed indicator, oil level gauge, forward fuel gauge, rear fuel gauge, two altimeters, water thermometer, oil thermometer, oil pressure indicator, gasoline presure gauge, horizontal compass with loop.

Fixed on the inside of the windshield are a speed indicator, two tachometers and one vertical compass.

In M. Bellonte's cockpit there are the following navigation instruments:

Flight indicator, inclinometer, Morel magnetic compass, Le Prieur navigraph, alidade and sextant.

M. Bellonte has also under his charge the following wireless instruments:

Generator with telescopic basis, and sending and receiving apparatus.

The code word of the Question Mark is Frans. The wave lengths are 600 to 700 meters and 800 to 900 meters. There is continuous reception on 450 to 1,550 meters.

Each airman carries a parachute and they have a small collapsible boat of rubber and canvass which can be inflated easily with a bottle of compressed air. They have a pair of small oars.

The Coste motor is a 650 horsepower Hispano type 12nb. It has the following general characteristics:

Normal revolutions, 2,000 a minute.
Real power, 754 horsepower.
Nominal revolutions of propellor, 2,000 a minute.
Two banks of six cylinders each placed in V at 60 degrees.
Bore 150 mm.
Total weight empty 469 kilograms.
Consumption gasoline per horsepower per hour, 222 grammes.
Consumption of oil per horsepower per hour, 5.5 grammes.

The Hispano-Suiza engine in Captain Coste's plane is of the French pursuit plane military type. The engine, full out, uses close to fifty gallons an hour, but this consumption should be cut soon after the plane is in the air to a cruising rate of between thirty-five and forty gallons an hour.

While no exact prediction can be made, it is probable that the plane can stay in the air forty hours. The military type Breguet can cruise normally at 115 miles an hour and the distance between Paris and New York on the Great Circle course is 3,633 statute miles. Allowing at least fifteen miles an hour for head winds, Captain Coste would need thirty-six hours for his journey.

FOUR PLANES MADE WESTWARD FLIGHTS

But None Has Been Able to Go From Europe to New York Without Stops on Way.

No attempt to make a non-stop airplane flight from Europe to New York has been successful, and half a dozen have been fatal. Only four flights westward across the Atlantic in heavier-than-air machines, even with various stops en route, have been successful.

No non-stop westward flight across the Atlantic can fail to call to the minds of airmen, and particularly of the fellow-countrymen of Dieudonné Coste and Maurice Bellonte, the tragic attempt of Charles Nungesser and François Coli, begun at Paris on May 8, 1927, with New York as the announced objective.

A flight of this kind had never been made and it created profound interest in all parts of the world. Nungesser and Coli were regarded at once as heroes. They took off as the sun rose and were last seen off Etretat, on the French coast, by fisherman, who identified a speck against a bank of white clouds as their plane, the White Bird.

The first westward flight was made as a part of the American Army's round-the-world trip. In August, 1924, Lieutenants Lowell H. Smith, Erik H. Nelson, John Harding Jr. and Leslie P. Arnold flew from London, England, to an Iceland fjord, thence to Greenland, where they stopped at Reykjavik, Fredericksdal and Ivigtut; thence to Cartwright Harbor, Labrador; Hawkes Bay, Newfoundland; Pictou Harbor, Nova Scotia; Boston and New York.

The second westward Atlantic flight, though counted successful, was unable to proceed past Greenley Island, Labrador. This was made in the Bremen, commanded by the late Baron von Huenefeld, which flew from Ireland, with Mitchell Field as the objective. Fog caused the fliers to deviate from their course, resulting in a forced landing in which the plane was damaged.

The next successful westward flight over the North Atlantic in an airplane was that of Major Charles Kingsford-Smith with his three companions last June in the Southern Cross, the plane in which he had flown from California to Australia. With Captain J. P. Saul, M. E. Van Dyk and J. W. Stannage, Major Kingsford-Smith flew from Port Marnock, Irish Free State, to Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, and thence to New York.

The fourth successful flight of this type was completed last week when Captain Wolfgang von Gronau landed near the Battery in a 5-year-old Dornier-Wal seaplane. With him were Fritz Albrecht, Franz Hack and Edward Zimmer. They came from Germany, with stops at the Faroe Islands, Reykjavik, Ivigtut, Cartwright Harbor, Queensport Harbor and Halifax in Nova Scotia.

Westward Atlantic flights suffer a great handicap in comparison to astward flights over the same region, because of the prevalence of westerly winds, which help eastbound fliers and retard those bound in the opposite direction. Partly due to this, dirigibles have been far more reliable than airplanes in Atlantic flights because of their ability easily to carry sufficient fuel to offset the delays incurred in facing opposing winds. A number of successful westward flights have been made over the South Atlantic, where the distance from land to land is shorter and weather conditions are better.

RADIO TO DESCRIBE COSTE'S ARRIVAL

Scene at Curtiss Field Will Be Reproduced for American and French Listeners.

PARIS TO HEAR FLIER FIRST

He Will Speak While Still in Plane, Then for This Country—Major Chains in National Network.

Preparations have been completed to broadcast to the radio listeners of America and France the arrival in this country today of Captain Dieudonné Coste and his comrade Maurice Bellonte, who took off from Le Bourget airport early yesterday on a transoceanic flight to Curtiss Field, L. I.

Captain Coste's first words after his plane touches American soil are to be transmitted back to Paris via the National Broadcasting Company and the transoceanic radio telephone service of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company for reproduction over a battery of loud-speakers installed at the Place de la Concorde, Paris, according to NBC engineers.

The arrival of the fliers is to be broadcast to listeners in this country over the nation-wide networks of WEAF, WJZ and WABC, beginning some time between 3 o'clock this afternoon and 9 tonight. This is dependent upon the flying conditions encountered by the aviators during the latter half of their trip to America.

At the Long Island airport, Valley Stream, will be a number of radio announcers of the various systems, including Elinor Smith, aviatrix. They will describe the landing of Captain Coste's plane and the scenes at the field preceding and following its arrival.

As soon as the plane comes to rest it is planned to rush a microphone to the cockpit and have Captain Coste speak in French for the benefit of the listeners in Paris. This is to be before he steps onto American soil. He is then to be brought to the microphone for the benefit of American listeners.

When it is known that the Question Mark is nearing New York the broacast will go on the air with Curt Peterson and Kelvin Keith of the NBC as the announcers. The latter will translate the French words of the fliers into English for American radio chains if it is found necessary.

The Question Mark is equipped with a special aircraft radio transmitter and receiver designed in France, of the vacuum tube type, according to Captain Coste's representative in this country. While little is known about its capabilities the equipment is said to be something new in the way of airplane communication apparatus. It is operated by M. Bellonte, the Question Mark's navigator. The call letters of the plane are FRANS.

The transmitter is equipped for either telephone or telegraph work, which means that when the plane nears New York there will be a possibility of two-way voice communication with the fliers. Captain Coste carriers no short-wave apparatus, although the receiver installed on the Question Mark is thought to be capable of intercepting short wave lengths. However, the fliers are expected to concentrate entirely on the 600-meter wave to carry their messages to ships over the Atlantic, which will relay them on to THE NEW YORK TIMES. When the Question Mark nears New York radio men here expect to establish direct communication with the plane.

CRUISER LOUISVILLE DEDICATED ON COAST

First Warship Constructed in a Naval Drydock Is Floated—Keel of the Astoria Is Laid.

Special to The New York Times.

BREMERTON, Wash., Sept. 1.—For the first time in naval history a warship constructed in a navy yard dry dock was added to the fleet today with the dedication of the 10,000-ton cruiser Louisville. Immediately afterward the keel of the second cruiser to be constructed at the Puget Sound Navy Yard was laid in the same dock.

A bottle of water taken from a spring at the boyhood home of Abraham Lincoln was broken over the bow of the Louisville by Miss Jane Kennedy, 13-year-old Kentucky girl.

The Louisville, already afloat and with steam up, sounded one long and two short blasts on her whistle, the gates of the dock swung open and the warship moved out slowly into the bay while a navy band played "The Star-Spangled Banner" and "My Old Kentucky Home."

Representative Maurice H. Thatcher of Kentucky delivered a brief address.

After the water had been pumped from the dock, ceremonies attending the keel-laying of the next warship began.

The second vessel is to be named the Astoria, after the Oregon city at the mouth of the Columbia River. Governor A. W. Norblad of Oregon worked as rivet-passer of the honorary crew that started the work. Mayor J. C. Tenbrook of Astoria was the riveter, with Mayor C. E. B. Oldham of Bremerton as his helper and Brig. Gen. Maurice Thompson, Adjutant General of the Washington National Guard, as rivet-heater.

Senators Wesley L. Jones and C. C. Dill and Representatives John F. Miller and Sam B. Hill of this State, were present

Construction of the Louisville on the flat surface of the drydock, instead of the sloping ways of a shipyard, shortened the working time more than six months and cut the costs $2,500,000.

The Louisville is one of eighty treaty-type light cruisers authorized by the act of Congress Dec. 24, 1924, under a statutory limit of cost, exclusive of armor and armament, of $11,000,000. Although authorized in 1924, funds were not available until March 2, 1927

GERMAN FLIERS RETURNING.

Von Gronau and Crew Hope to Join in Reception to Coste.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—Captain Wolfgang von Gronau and his three companions, who came here for the national air races, are on their way back to New York in the famous flying boat which brought them from Germany to New York.

They are expected to participate in the New York reception to Captain Dieudonné Coste when the French airman and his aide, Maurice Bellonte, arrive from Paris.

Marcel Doret, French stunting pilot, who ended his performances at the national air races today, announced that he will take off for New York tomorrow morning with Mme. Doret and his mechanic. They hoped to be on hand to witness the landing of their countryman.

AMERICANS READY TO FLY EASTWARD

Three Planes Poised to Start Transatlantic Hops When Weather Permits.

THE COLUMBIA AT MONTREAL

Boyd to Pilot It to London—Williams to Head for Berlin and Boardman for Dublin.

While Coste's French Breguet biplane was winging its way from the Old World to the New last night, American aviators with three planes kept watch on the weather, which promised a chance to take off on the reverse route in the next couple of days.

At Montreal J. Errol Boyd, copilot for Roger Q. Williams on his recent non-stop round-trip flight between New York and Bermuda, stood by late into the night with Harry Connor, his navigator, as the veteran Bellanca monoplane Columbia, which carried Clarence D. Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine to Germany in 1927, was kept in readiness for a start for London.

Since the Chamberlin flight, Roger Q. Williams crashed in the Columbia once on a take-off with Pierro Bonnelli for Rome, and Mabel Boll started out in it, but abandoned a flight to England after landing at Newfoundland when Amelia Earhart and Wilmer Stultz got away before her.

On the present flight Boyd will endeavor to get off from St. Hubert's Airdrome with his navigator and 500 gallons of fuel, one of the heaviest loads the sturdy Columbia has ever been called upon to lift.

Williams and Lundgren Alert.

At Roosevelt Field, Roger Q. Williams and Ted Lundgren stood by with the Emsco long-range monoplane in which they have been preparing for weeks to get away on a round-the-world flight, which will make Berlin its first landing. With the plane in good condition and the fliers ready, bulletin news on the progress of Coste and Bellonte on their journey westward stood paramount in the fliers' minds and they scanned the charts for signs of weather favorable for a take-off.

In Boston, Russell Boardman was also poised for a hop to Dublin, Ireland, where he plans to refuel and fly back to Boston. Boardman will use a newer model Bellanca than the Columbia and will carry 600 gallons of gasoline. His craft has a larger wing and a motor of 300 horsepower, instead of the 200 horsepower Wright Whirlwind of the Columbia.

All three planes are equipped with the latest instruments for blind flying and navigation. Sperry artificial horizons are on them, devices in which the horizon is represented by a white line above which a gyrocontrolled model of the plane assumes the exact position in relation to the white line as the real horizon is in with regard to the earth's surface.

Boyd Plans 30-Hour Flight.

MONTREAL, Sept. 1.—While deciding late tonight to postpone the take-off for London in the monoplane Columbia, which had been set for tomorrow, Captain J. Errol Boyd voiced his confidence in being able to make a "time-table" flight as soon as weather permitted.

"All hazards being reduced to a minimum, I confidently expect to make a safe landing at Croydon Airport within thirty hours or less, provided favorable winds aid me in flight," he said. "There is no such thing as chance in the flight as worked out and aided by scientific navigation."

Captain Boyd had not decided whether to make the flight alone or with his navigator, Harry P. Connor. Alone, Boyd would steer the Great Circle course, the shortest route, via St. John's, N. F., a distance of 3,324 miles. Connor, mapping out available routes, planned a more southern course if he accompanied Boyd.

"It means an additional 200 or 300 miles, but I believe it would be more advisable on account of the lateness of the season and weather conditions," he said.

Lyon Quits as Boardman's Aide.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Sept. 1.—Captain Harry W. Lyon, navigator of the Southern Cross on Major Kingsford-Smith's Pacific flight, announced tonight that he had refused to install navigating instruments in Russell Boardman's transatlantic American Legion plane, and that he had declined the position of co-pilot and navigator.

"Boardman has a great plan," he declared, "but he is greatly enhancing his chances of an unsuccessful flight by lack of thorough preparation. It seems to me that too much has been left to the last minute, and while he has much in his favor, it is too hazardous a hop for guess work."

WOMAN FLEES WITH BABY.

Child Entrusted to Her Care and Girl, 15, Sought by Police.

Police of the Fort Hamilton station sent out an alarm last night for a woman and two children who mysteriously disappeared late Saturday night from 413 Eighty-eighth Street.

The woman is Mrs. Winifred Hansen, 24 years old, of that address, and the children are Gloria Capaldo, 1 year old, living in the same house, and Mabel Nelsen, 15, of 415 Eighty-eighth Street. Early Saturday night Mrs. Hansen took the Capolda child to care for while the parents held a party. About 10 o'clock the Nelsen girl visited Mrs. Hansen and shortly afterward they were seen by neighbors to enter a taxicab with the baby and drive off.

The woman's husband, Louis, told the police that they had no children and that his wife had wanted one and might have taken the children for that reason.

the landscape. Brown moss shaded a little spot of color here and there. Otherwise vegetation was very sparse. There were the usual polar flowers about.

Fine Weather Continued Next Day.

We worked through the evening in the northwest part of the flat land and went on board again in the early morning.

On Aug. 6 we had the same marvelous weather, with brilliant sunshine and a cloudless sky. The ocean was like a mirror, and on many jutting peninsulas round about were stranded icebergs.

White Island's great ice peak rose majestically from the low coast land. Everywhere reigned an intense silence. Just once in awhile we could hear the noise of ice breaking away from parent icebergs and splashing into the sea.

In truth, there was a great white silence everywhere, and it was impossible not to feel a little affected by such a deathlike stillness. The noise of the falling ice emphasized the depth of the silence.

In the morning the Bratvaag's two hunting boats, under the leadership of the shooters, old Myklebust and Severein Skjelten, went out to harpoon walruses. Ultimately Skjelten and the harpooners, Karl Tubvik, Olfa Salen, John Almestad and Sigurd Myklebust, went ashore to skin their catch.

Find Boat Sticking Up From Mound of Snow.

Salen and Tubvik went to search for drinking water and discovered a little stream. Besides the stream, the found a mound of snow that was rather dark and did not resemble the ordinary snow hill. They went over to it at once and saw a boat sticking up from the snow.

In the boat they caught sight of the point of a boatswain's hook, with a name engraved on it. The two men at once ran back to Skjelten and told him about their find, showing him the hook.

On it was engraved "Andrée's Polar Expedition, 1896." Skjelten, Almestad and Myklebust then went to the mound, and in the boat they further found a book, which they took with them to the beach.

At this moment the Bratvaag's motorboat, with Skipper Eliassen and Assistant Mechanic Ekornassvaag aboard, arrived to help the hunters with their walrus catch.

Eliassen was immediately informed about the discovery, and he went on alone to investigate it further. Against the wall of a neighboring mountain he found a body leaning against the mountain slope, with its feet half buried in snow.

Eliassen realized at once that this must be the remains of the Andrée expedition. He immediately returned to the Bratvaag, where I was. He showed me the book, and I saw immediately that it was the Andrée expedition's observation book, containing records of their sledge journey after they left the balloon.

Salvaged All They Could and Put It Aboard.

We took different implements on board the motor boat, and then all the expedition's members went ashore to try as best we could to dig everything out and then transport it on board.

It was with strange feelings that we stood on the beach where the brave Andrée and his men thirty-three years ago ended their last polar wandering. In deep silence we went up toward the camp, which only too plainly showed us what had happened.

There lay the boat half buried in snow, with its nose pointing inland. Alongside it lay a sledge. The top of the sledge was level with the ice. On the snow a few yards away was a piece of black and red cloth with crude squares cut in for windows—perhaps a part of a tent. And under the wall of the mountain was Andrée himself. We recognized him only by the monogram on his jacket. He was leaning against the mountain slope a few yards northeast of the boat. He had worn-out Arctic shoes on his feet, but otherwise was well clothed.

Beside him lay a gun and an oil stove. There was oil in the stove, and when we pumped it the oil came out in a fine spray and gas came out at a vent on the side. The apparatus was in quite good order.

Diary Was in Andrée's Inner Pocket.

In Andrée's inner pocket was his diary, but only a few pages appeared to have been written on. We also found in his pocket his pencil and a pedometer.

Between two mounds of earth a short distance away from Andrée's body we found a little later another member of the expedition, who had apparently been laid there by one of the others.

The body was half covered with small stones. It was "frozen down" and very hard to get up.

We also found in the boat some remains of bones, but we have not been able to decide whether they are human bones. Some other articles were found at different places in the camp and were carefully gathered up.

Upon examining the boat more closely, we found many different things. These were the expedition's equipment of all kinds. There were articles of clothing, such as stockings and handkerchiefs, an instrument for measuring the velocity of the wind, photographic apparatus, shotguns, a theodolite, sewing articles, a hammer and an axe, and a bag containing navigation books and other things. On two of the handkerchiefs was the monogram "N. S." [Nils Strindberg].

Boat, Partly Buried, Difficult to Free.

As I said before, the boat lay partly buried in the ice and was half full of ice. After we got the dead loose and transported down to the beach, we began the difficult job of getting the boat free. It lay slightly on its side, so that the right side was quite buried. The other side protruded and was half destroyed.

During the digging it became evident that the boat was resting on another sledge to which it was well bound. It had four cigar-shaped pillars as foundation. To get the whole thing loose we first had to move the boat and then the sledge.

This sledge, as well as the other one, had metal runners. When we got everything free we began to transport our find over the 150 yards down to the beach.

The ice-filled boat soon became too heavy, and its canvas covering was torn to pieces. Therefore we put five oars under the boat, and with five men on each side we tried to carry it.

But this method also proved ineffectual. One of the oars broke. It was not until we had removed more ice from inside that we managed to make progress. Then we went carefully toward the beach with what in more than one sense was a heavy burden.

Marked Spot With Cairn Surmounted by Pole.

Before we left the spot we built a cairn, surmounted by a pole, on a hill just behind the camp. It is easy to see and will make it possible for future visitors to find the place without trouble.

In the cairn we put a bottle with a note written in Norwegian and English. The note said that it was here that the Norwegian Franz Josef Land expedition found the remains of the Swedish Andrée expedition.

Everything that had been brought down to the beach was then carried on board one of our walrus hunting boats. The boat became so heavily loaded that it was only a few inches above water level.

The boat was then towed by motor boat, and an hour later we reached the Bratvaag. We put Andrée's body on one of the boat decks, and thus, after twenty-four hours of labor, our work was finally finished.

It was certainly fortunate that we had such fine calm weather while we lay at White Island. Because of the dangerous nature of the coast, one can go ashore only when the weather is quite calm.

Took Advantage of Calm Weather at Island.

If there had been wind or waves when we came up under the island there would have been no question of going on land. Therefore we had to take advantage of the calm weather so as not to be interrupted before we finished.

As soon as the find was made our walrus hunt was stopped and digging hastily begun. It is therefore possible that the work was not done so scrupulously and neatly as might have been desired. But, taking conditions into consideration, I can say that everything was done that could possibly be to get the work performed thoroughly and conscientiously.

Added to this difficulty about weather was the fact that the greater part of our find was buried in the ice, which, of course, rendered difficult the digging up of fragile articles or pieces of cloth.

The camp had been very much plundered by bears. They certainly had destroyed many objects of value. Many articles also were probably blown away by the wind and are now lying buried under the snow some distance away.

Later Visit May Reveal More.

The camp lay beside a big mound of snow, and it is very possible that under this many of the expedition's belongings can still be found. While we were there, however, it would have taken too much work to remove all the snow and ice. On a visit later in the year, possibly so much of the ice would be melted that the work would be easier.

As it may be gathered from what I have recounted, the camp was not very far from the beach and was visible from there. Ordinarily one wouldn't pay much attention to a dark mound in the distance.

It was only after our attention had been called to a tin can on the beach that we began to look around and caught sight of the camp. No cairn or hut had been put up, and if the snow had been only a few feet higher the whole thing would have been covered without a trace.

This Summer there has been very little snow in those regions. There is reason to believe that the camp during many Summers has been quite buried under snow.

Even if one had examined the land very carefully, he might well have walked right over the camp without seeing anything.

Traced Course of Party Along East Coast.

As it was, it looked as though the boat had been drawn up from the beach. And as the camp lay in the eastern part of this naked island, there is reason to believe that the members of the expedition came to White Island on its north side and from there went down along the east coast until they came to bare, clear land.

After a heavy march over the ice from 83 degrees North they certainly could not have had very much strength left. They probably died of exhaustion, especially since, at the time of the year when they came to the island, some time in September, it can be pretty cold there.

The reason why they did not go toward Northeast Land [the part of the Spitsbergen group from which Andrée set out], which would perhaps have been just as short as the trip to White Island, might have been because they were continually forced eastward by open water and many openings in the ice.

Ice Would Bar Use of Boat.

When thin ice began to form at the beginning of August, they would not have been able to go out in their miserable canvas boat for fear of ripping its covering. When they first caught sight of White Island's tall white peak they must have been filed with new courage, and by summoning all their strength sought land.

We can imagine their joy when they came to the island and finally felt firm ground under foot instead of the terrifying, driving ice they had been encountering. But they were never to come any further than this. Exhaustion and cold took them. They surely fought and strove, courageous and brave to the very last, as true sons of the land that mothered them.

For us whose fate it is to find and bring home one of the great pioneers of polar exploration, it has been an occasion of pomp and impressiveness that will never be erased from our memory.

On the 7th of August we left White Island and set our course eastward toward Victoria Island. White Island's peak was visible for a long time, and again and again our eyes returned to the bleak land which for thirty-three years hid Andrée and his companions from the waiting world.

When we were on Victoria Island we could still, from its highest point, see White Island. It was as though the island would not let us go, but rose majestically and grimly in spite of the fact that we had taken from it one of the greatest secrets of the polar regions.

ANDREE AND AIDES DIED OF EXHAUSTION

the boat was a boathook, which they picked up and examined. On the shaft of the hook they read the inscription, "Andrée Polar Expedition, 1896."

And so, awed and almost unbelieving, they knew that they had found the belated answer to one of the most spectacular riddles in all the history of exploration.

"It was with strange feelings," Dr. Horn said in a statement to The Associated Press and the Oslo Aftenposten today, "I stood on the beach where the brave Andrée and his men thirty-three years ago ended their last polar wandering."

As soon as he was apprised of the harpooners' discovery, Dr. Horn and the other officers of his expedition went to the place where the boat lay, a worn sledge beside it, and then they let their eyes circle about for what they must have both hoped and dreaded to find.

Skeleton Discovered.

Their search was not long. Not many yards from the boat and sledge was found a body, if indeed a skeleton in the fur garb of an Arctic explorer may be called a body, lying between two mounds of earth and partly covered with small stones. So had the last rites been observed by the survivor or survivors for one member of that gallant crew.

And somewhat further on, leaning against the mountain slope, feet buried in the snow, was a second clothed skeleton. It was headless. This one was Andrée himself, identified by a monogram on the jacket.

In the boat were a few bones, but Dr. Horn and his fellow-scientists were not able to determine whether they were human and represented all that was left of the third member of the expedition. He expressed the hope that study of the teeth of the whole skeleton would reveal whether it was the remains of Nils Strindberg or Knut Fraenkel.

All they found, all the physical and material remnants of the expedition which set out from Spitsbergen in high hope so many years ago, were taken reverently to the Bratvaag. Last Tuesday an attempt was made to land on the island again for further search, but high waves prevented.

And so the Bratvaag turned back toward civilization. From its deck the last view of the frozen island which had held so grimly to its secret was the eerie sight of a great white bear dancing about the cairn of stones that Dr. Horn and his men had raised to mark the spot where so much gallantry came at last to nought.

From evidence he found on the island, navigation books, the condition of the lost explorers' fur boots and such matters, Dr. Horn estimated that they had struggled southward for about 180 miles before they reached the towering island and knew at last that their long battle was done.

It must have been the deadening cold, increasing with the approach of the Winter night, and not starvation that finally conquered them, although exhaustion from their terrible trek across the broken ice may well have been a contributing factor. For at Andrée's side was found his gun and in the boat was ammunition. There were feathers, too, indicating that birds had been shot. And near Andrée, also, was a stove with oil still in its tank.

And Andrée himself, to judge from the position in which his body was found, had resigned himself to inevitable fate. He sat down in the snow and leaned back against the mountain slope, relaxed, knowing at last that any effort would be vain, waiting for eternal release from suffering.

Dr. Horn said that it would have been impossible to get the bodies and the boat and the other camp equipment to the Bratvaag had it not been for the unusually calm weather which set in just at the right moment and lasted just long enough to permit the work to be done.

Everything had to be dug laboriously from the ice that had set a grip of years on the remains of the balloon expedition and so, of necessity, the work was slow. Had the weather roughened before it was done the whole attempt would have had to be abandoned, for it is impossible for boats to land on the island unless in exceptional calm. As on many peninsulas, icebergs are stranded. Between these the boats had to pass, something they could not have done in the customary surf.

ANDREE'S LOG BELIEVED MOST VALUABLE RELIC

It Is Said to Contain Several Hundred Pages of Notes Which Are Easily Read.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SKJAER ISLAND, Norway, Tuesday, Sept. 1.—Salomon August Andrée's observation log may prove of more value to scientists and hold more dramatic interest than his diary. The pages of the diary are stuck together and it is problematical what experts will be able to do with it, but the log is said to be in good condition and to contain several hundred pages of Andrée's careful handwriting, which is easy to read.

Those connected with the expedition express the belief that the log will prove more than a mathematical record and will, in fact, be found to be a diary in which is recorded the tragic march of Andrée and his companions from 83 degrees N., where the balloon is believed to have gone down, to White Island, where the explorers made their last stand.

It is possible this observation log may chronicle the great march of Andrée and his two companions across some 200 miles of well-nigh unconquerable frozen fastnesses, where they encountered drifting ice and great barriers. It may tell the world how they succeeded in getting their boat and sledges, with their other equipment, across this inhospitable polar zone.

In well-informed quarters it is stated the log does, in fact, show the remarkable, indomitable spirit of Andrée. He is said even to have written jokingly about his plans for the next balloon expedition.

PHILIPPINE PEACE STRESSED BY DAVIS

Governor General's Report Emphasizes 1929 as a Year of Order and Prosperity.

PEOPLE'S LOYALTY PRAISED

Harmony Characterizes Relations Between the Legislature and Executive Departments.

FINANCES ON SOUND BASIS

Increasing Consumption of Steel, Cotton Textiles and Other American Imports Is Cited.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—Peace, order and prosperity were enjoyed by the Philippines during 1929, according to the annual report of Governor General Dwight F. Davis to Secretary Hurley, which was made public today by the War Department.

Covering the period from July 8, 1929, when he arrived in Manila, until the end of the year, Governor General Davis said conditions had been prosperous, but that near the end of the year a slowing up in business was noted which probably would mean poorer conditions during the first part of 1930.

"For the people in general, as well as the government," he said, "the year was, on the whole, a very satisfactory one. Peace and order were excellent, and, with the exception of two typhoons which swept through some of the Southern islands, the country was free of major disasters. Health conditions were very favorable. While prices of staple crops were low, their volume was larger than ever before.

Low Prices Affect Business.

"This prosperous condition of the country was reflected all along the line in increased revenues of the government. A typical example of this is the fact that internal revenue collections increased over 2,500,000 pesos, or about 4.5 per centum. There was unmistakable evidence, however, toward the end of the year that continued low prices were slowing up the business situation, and competent observers expect that the revenues of the government will be diminished for the year 1930, and business in general will be somewhat poorer during the first part of the year.

"This causes no undue alarm, however, as the government is in a very sound position financially, the budget having been drawn in such a way for the past several years that a cash balance has resulted."

Governor General Davis discussed political conditions in the islands in some detail.

"The second session of the Eighth Legislature (July 16 to Nov 8)," he said in this connection, "was fruitful in legislation some of which should be of lasting value.

"The session was characterized throughout by the greatest harmony between the leaders and members of the Legislature on the one hand and the executive departments on the other.

"Before definite action was taken on any important legislation the matter was made the subject of an informal conference between the Legislature and the various executive officers of the government and each party was kept fully informed of the attitude of the others. Differences of opinion naturally exist, but by keeping in close touch with each other a minimum of friction results."

Praises Loyalty of the Mass.

Governor General Davis said he wished to express his "sincere appreciation of the unswerving loyalty to and support of the Government of the United States by the great mass of the Filipino people in general and by their representative leaders in particular."

"The relations, both official and social, between the people of the islands and myself and members of my staff could not have been more pleasant," he added.

As to insular finances, he said:

"The report of the secretary shows that the financial position of the government is very sound. The revenues from ordinary sources amounted to 87,270,576.36 pesos, an increase over the previous year of nearly 5,000,000 pesos.

"The ordinary expenditures of the government, on the other hand, amounted to slightly less than 78,000,000 pesos, a decrease of about 800,000 pesos from the previous year.

"The surplus at the end of the year amounted to over 51,000,000 pesos, of which, however, over 41,000,000 pesos has already been allotted for future expenditures, leaving a net unappropriated cash surplus of over 10,000,000 pesos.

"The bonded indebtedness was increased by 1,400,000 pesos during the year, but the total amount of bonds outstanding is still well within the limits provided by law and sinking funds are fully maintained to cover all outstanding bonds.

Gold Standard Fund's Status.

"The gold standard fund amounts to 24.4 per centum of the money in circulation, which is 11,000,000 pesos over the minimum required by law.

The Philippine National Bank made a net profit of 3,265,027.37 pesos from operations during the year, which was 587,444.52 pesos greater than the profit realized during 1928.

"During the year under review five sugar centrals, financed by the Bank in Occidental Negros, were able to reduce their principal indebtedness in the total sum of 3,488,420.50 pesos, besides payment for interest in the sum of 556,435.70 pesos.

"The total trade of the islands with the United States and foreign countries for the year was the largest ever recorded, the imports amounting to 294,000,000 pesos, an increase of 9 per centum over the previous year; and the exports amounting to 328,000,000 pesos, an increase of slightly less than 6 per centum.

"The total trade with the United States amounted to 434,000,000 pesos, an increase of 9 per centum over the previous year, of which 185,000,000 pesos represents imports, an increase of 11 per centum; and 248,000,000 pesos exports, an increase of 7 per centum.

"American vessels continued to lead in the foreign carrying trade of the islands, handling imports and exports to the value of 278,000,000 pesos, an increase of over 15,000,000 pesos.

Cites Trade Possibilities.

Pointing out that the United States furnished the major part of the island imports, Governor General Davis said:

"The per capita consumption of steel, most of which has always come from the United States, has increased more than 400 per cent since 1903 and 67 per cent since 1924.

"The per capita consumption of cotton goods has increased by over 200 per cent since 1903, meat and dairy products 300 per cent, wheat flour 276 per cent, silk 421 per cent, paper 450 per cent, and other articles imported from the United States in similar manner.

"These figures are cited to illustrate the constant and growing importance of the Philippines as a market foi American goods. Taking into consideration the vast undeveloped resources, the future possibilities suggested are enormous."

NAVY MAY SINK UTAH IN TARGET PRACTICE

Installation of Radio Control for Purpose Planned When Ship Quits Service Oct. 1.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—A decision has been reached by the Navy Department to prepare the battleship Utah of the scouting fleet after Oct. 1 for the use as a radio-controlled target ship for sinking under the terms of the London naval treaty.

Whether the vessel will be actually used as a target ship, however, has not been finally decided, Admiral Charles F. Hughes, Chief of Naval operations, said today.

The battleship Florida will be decommissioned at the Philadelphia Navy Yard after Oct. 1, while the battleship Wyoming will be made ready at Philadelphia to be used as a training ship under the terms of the London treaty. Both vessels are also members of the scouting fleet, the Wyoming being the flagship. The battleship Arkansas will become the new flagship of the scouting fleet.

The Florida is now at Baltimore, and the other two are at the Norfolk Navy Yard. All three will engage in target practice in Southern waters the week of Sept. 15, and then steam to port to be taken from the active list, thereby reducing the battleships to the number allowed under the London treaty.

This will release their crews for distribution among other naval vessels. Many of the men are expected to be assigned to the new 10,000-ton cruisers as they are placed in commission.

'VOTE AS YOU LIKE' TO BE WARD DICTUM

Westchester Republican Head May Even Turn Wet at State Convention, Observers Say.

DRY ISSUE NEW TO GROUP

County Organization Forced for First Time in 35 Years to Take Definite Stand.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Sept. 1.—The policy of the Westchester County Republican organization toward its delegates to the State convention has always been that they should vote on party issues as personal feeling dictated, according to an announcement party leaders will make as a result of a conference held yesterday morning at the home of William L. Ward in Port Chester, it was learned today.

Many of the forty-five delegates are reported to be wet and it is possible that Ward himself may vote wet if he feels it will serve the party's best interests. He has led Westchester Republicans for the last thirty-five years.

The forthcoming election is said to be the first in which the Ward organization will be forced by political circumstance to take a stand on prohibition. It has been the organization's policy in the past not to accentuate the issue in politics because of a feeling that it was not of vital interest in this locality.

After Charles D. Millard of Greenburgh had been named as the organization's candidate for Congress from the Twenty-fifth District, John M. Holzworth of Port Chester came out in opposition on a "dripping wet" platform. Before Holzworth entered the primary contest, Millard said he was for prohibition until some better plan should be substituted in its place, but after Holzworth's entry as a wet, Millard declared he was also wet and would work for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. Seeing two wets in the field, the Anti-Saloon League entered Robert A. Patteson of Tarrytown as a dry candidate.

Ward has been called dry repeatedly thus far in the primary campaign and has made no statement to the contrary. Working on the theory that Ward was unequivocally a dry, Holzworth's forces got forty-four wets to oppose the organization's forty-five candidates for the State convention. Six of Holzworth's wet candidates were thrown out by organization authorities because of an insufficient number of legal signatures on their petitions.

The Westchester Republican committee against the Eighteenth Amendment had not completed its speakers' list for its dinner Wednesday night at Briarcliff Lodge, but President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University and Senator James Wadsworth were among those tentatively announced.

BATTLES THREE POLICEMEN

Labor Day Celebrant Also Takes a Punch at Finger-Printer.

Four patrolmen were required to arrest Thomas Kelly yesterday afternoon. Kelly, a tinsmith, who is 24 years old, lives at 1,984 Second Avenue. What he considered a fitting manner of observing Labor Day did not coincide with the opinion of Patrolman Edward Goehner, who tried to arrest him after Kelly felled an unidentified woman with a blow from his fist, then rushed into Loew's Eighty-sixth Street theatre and started a disturbance.

Kelly declared that it would take more policemen than New York has on its force to arrest him and he emphasized his remarks by punching Goehner in the mouth and knocking out a tooth. Only when three other patrolmen came to Goehner's aid did Kelly submit. Even then he would not admit defeat. When his finger-prints were being taken he aimed a final punch at Detective Hoyles. He is charged with felonious assault.

LAY ST. LOUIS WRECK TO MALICE OR PRANK

Frisco Line Officials Find Pieces of Big Stone on Rails—Death List Reduced to Six.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 1 (AP).—The wreck last night of the Texas Special of the St. Louis-San Francisco Railroad on the outskirts of St. Louis, which killed six persons, seriously injured eleven and caused minor injuries to forty-seven more, was declared today by officials of the line to have been caused by either a malicious deed, a childish prank or the act of an insane person.

The statement followed a careful examination of the rails where the wreck occurred. Several fragments of stone and powdered rock, which appeared to have formed part of one large stone which was splintered when hit, were found.

The train carried about 200 passengers. It had thundered by the Osage Hills station, the last suburban post, beginning an uninterrupted run of 120 miles to its first fuel stop, when the disaster occurred.

A report last night to general offices of the Frisco here was that eight persons had lost their lives, but County Coroner John O'Connell said today that only six were killed. They were:

The train included a combination car, chair car, a diner, eight Pullman coaches and a club car. All left the rails, but Pullman and club cars remained upright.

Identification of the dead and injured and work of clearing the wreckage was nearly completed today. One official estimated that the railroad's loss, including payment of damage claims, would reach $1,000,000.

MRS. EDDIE CANTOR ROBBED OF $20,000

Hotel Burglars Steal Gems as Wife Watches Comedian Act at Atlantic City.

"INSIDE JOB," SAYS ACTOR

But the Ambassador's Management Exonerates Employes in Second Room Theft in 24 Hours.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 1.—While Eddie Cantor was amusing an audience which included his wife, Ida Cantor, at the Steel Pier here last night, burglars entered his room at the Hotel Ambassador and escaped with $20,000 in jewelry.

This was the second jewel theft at the Ambassador within twenty-four hours. Saturday night jewelry valued at $75,000 was stolen from the suite occupied by Mr. and Mrs. John Edward Johnston of Baltimore. The hotel management denied a statement by Mr. Cantor that the looting of his room appeared to be an "inside job." It was emphasized that all employes of the establishment were trustworthy.

According to meagre police reports, both burglaries were almost identical in character. In neither instance was the room broken into and it appeared that the thief had definite knowledge of the valuables which he might expect to find.

Mr. Cantor said the jewels taken consisted of a diamond and ruby bracelet an inch and one-half wide, two diamond and platinum bracelets, a silver chain with diamond pendant, a diamond pin, a three-carat marquise diamond ring and a gold wedding band. All were insured, Mr. Cantor said, adding that they bore a sentimental value which could not be replaced. He was particularly insensed over the loss of the wedding band, which he gave his wife on their fifteenth wedding anniversary after the birth of their fifth child.

Early in the evening the comedian and his wife left the hotel and went to the pier. After the performance they went to the Hotel Ritz-Carlton, where Mr. Cantor visited George White, the producer. Mrs. Cantor continued to the Ambassador and discovered early this morning that the jewelry was missing. She telephoned to her husband and he reported the theft to the police.

Mrs. Cantor appeared greatly upset today. She said she would never again travel carrying valuable jewels. Her husband said that she had kept her jewelry locked in a trunk but last night took it out with the intention of wearing several of the pieces. She changed her mind, however, and left it in two cases in a top bureau drawer and in a third case in a lower drawer. The contents of the latter, worth $500, were not touched by the thief.

From a house detective Mr. Cantor said he learned that while he was making his rounds at 11 P. M. the door to the room next to that which Mr. and Mrs. Cantor occupied was open. Benjamin Holzman, theatrical press agent and a friend of Mr. Cantor was the occupant of that room. He was absent at the time. Mr. Cantor expressed the opinion that the thief was frightened off before he stole anything there.

He said that he believed the burglary was an "inside job." He explained that he based his belief on the fact that the thief entered the room by unlocking the door. This also was true of the earlier theft. The cases containing Mrs. Cantor's valuables had been broken open. The bureau drawer had been left unlocked. Detectives are understood to be working on both crimes through fingerprint evidence.

Mr. Cantor will leave here tonight for Cleveland and will return to New York Sept. 23.

SHOT AT RIDING IN AUTO.

Philadelphia Man Reports Attack From Passing Car in New Jersey.

Special to The New York Times.

OCEAN CITY, N. J., Sept. 1.—Howard P. Mulhern of Philadelphia, son of Fire Marshal Mulhern, and his wife, were fired upon by unknown autoists while driving from Philadelphia to Spray Beach late Saturday night.

Mr. Mulhern reported the case to the police here today, and the State police have also been notified.

According to Mr. Mulhern, he was driving toward Tuckerton when a large yellow sedan, coming in the opposite direction, crowded him off the road. An occupant of the car, sitting next to the driver, reached out and fired at the Mulhern car. The bullet shattered the windshield above Mr. Mulhern's head and passed out a rear window. Neither Mulhern nor his wife was injured.

Mr. Mulhern said he knew of no reason for an attempt to take his life and said he believed the firing was done by drunken persons or hijackers.

SHOT AS HE WAITS FOR GIRL

Brooklyn Poultry Store Manager Wounded—Two Arrested.

James Azzare, 32 years old, of 226 Cornelia Street, Brooklyn, a poultry store manager, was shot early yesterday morning while he waited to keep an appointment with a girl named "Irene" at Twenty-second Street and Tenth Avenue. He was taken to the New York Hospital, where it was said he would recover.

Two men were arrested as they were fleeing from the scene. One of the men, Emil Nass, 43 years old, of 448 West Nineteenth Street, had in his possession a pistol for which the wounded man had a permit. Nass was charged with violation of the Sullivan law and felonious assault. The other prisoner, James Hughes, 26, of 430 West Nineteenth Street, also was charged with felonious assault. Both were held without bail by Magiistrate Bourke for examination Thursday.

60 FELLED BY HEAT OF 102 IN CAPITAL

Clanging Ambulances Rushing Victims to Medical Aid Halt Firemen's Parade.

HOSPITAL STAFFS TAXED

Pennsylvania Avenue Is Thronged by Visitors From Near-By States for Picturesque Spectacle.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—With the thermometer in the Pennsylvania Avenue kiosk registering 102 degrees, scores of persons were overcome by the heat today as they watched the annual firemen's parade pass down the historic thoroughfare. At times the sirens of the hose wagons, pumping engines and other apparatus were silenced so that the traffic could give way to ambulances and automobiles transporting victims to the hospitals.

The parade continued for two and a half hours, and before it ended, sixty stricken persons had been treated, some of them firemen. The avenue was thronged with residents and visitors from New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania and Virginia, all of these States being represented by firemen with their brilliant apparatus.

Facilities at Emergency and Casualty Hospitals were extended as person after person was brought in, stricken with the heat. Every doctor and nurse at Emergency Hospital was called in to service. Cots were set up in the corridors to take care of the overflow. In addition to sufferers cared for at hospitals, many were taken to homes or hotels, where private physicians were summoned.

The blazing heat exceeded that of yesterday, when the thermometer's highest mark was 101 degrees at 3 P. M. Today the instrument registered one degree more two and a half hours earlier, and maintained that figure until after 4 P. M. A soft breeze from the south helped the situation only a little.

Many of the firemen in the procession wore not only heavy helmets but the traditional red flannel shirts, which made the day seem no cooler to the onlookers.

The parade was picturesque, showing the evolution from the old horse-drawn machines to the motor-propelled vehicles of today. There was an "aerial fire engine of tomorrow," a "spirit of St. Louis" float, modeled like an airplane with two fire axes on the hull, and "No. 27 engine company" inscribed on the side of the ship.

Memories were awakened when Barney, Gene and Tom, three of the most celebrated fire horses in the District's history, came prancing down the avenue, drawing an old-time engine. They had been brought from the Home for the Aged and Infirm at Blue Plains, where they are leading peaceful lives, pensioned for the rest of their days to green pactures. Their appearance drew great applause.

SEES RASKOB PLOT TO SLANDER HOOVER

CALLS CASE UNPARALLELED

Republican Floor Leader Charges Publicity Deliberately Misrepresents President.

Continuous slander of President Hoover over a period of twelve months by the publicity bureau of the Democratic National Committee, headed by Charles Michelson, a former Washington correspondent, is charged by Representative John Q. Tilson of Connecticut, Republican floor leader in the House of Representatives and Eastern director of the National Republican Congressional Committee, in a statement made public yesterday at committee headquarters in the Hotel Roosevelt.

Mr. Tilson cites, with his personal comment, twenty-seven statements issued by the Democratic publicity bureau in Washington during a period beginning Sept. 15 last and ending Aug. 22 of this year, in all of which, he declares, President Hoover and his administration were misrepresented. He declares the output of the bureau "certainly supports the charge that the business of this bureau is misrepresentation and that we have no parallel in American history of a person being paid, set up in an office and issuing such libelous misinformation about the President of the United States."

Mr. Tilson refers to Mr. Michelson as "John J. Raskob's personally underwritten propagandist." Mr. Raskob is chairman of the Democratic National Committee. The head of the Republican Congressional Committee points out that, while Mr. Michelson has asserted that the output of his bureau is free from misrepresentation, he has not denied statements occurring in a recent article contributed to Scribner's Magazine by Frank Kent, Washington correspondent of a Baltimore newspaper, that "the goal set for him by Mr. Raskob was 'to smear Hoover and his administration; to obscure every Hoover achievement and to put Mr. Hoover in bad with the American people. That is what he (the head of the bureau) is there for and all he is there for.' "

Lists Alleged Misrepresentations.

Mr. Michelson, Mr. Tilson says, has asked for a bill of particulars, and the list of items is given in response to this. Here is the list:

Sept. 15, 1929—Misrepresents the President as responsible for "lobbyists which swarm Washington."

Dec. 18, 1929—Insinuates that the President looks with favor upon "the corruption of the election of Senators."

Dec. 23, 1929—States that "if Al Smith were in the White House, and his name had appeared in the Lakin-Shattuck (sugar lobby) correspondence, impeachment proceedings would have been discussed before now."

Dec. 23, 1929—Insinuates that the President was venally connected with the sugar lobby, and yet the Democratic chairman of the Senate Lobby Committee on Jan. 6, 1930, in reporting to the Senate and referring to the President, said: "Your committee finds no impropriety nor anything open to censure or criticism." No retraction of this foul libel by the Raskob bureau has been made.

Oct. 23, 1929—Misrepresents the President as desiring to abolish the bipartisan character of the Tariff Commission and appoint all Republicans. Its bipartisan character was insisted upon in several messages sent to Congress by the President.

April 22, 1930—Represents the President and Republicans as endeavoring to obtain "the unbridled right to raise or lower a tariff rate as it suits his whim or interest," and becomes excited over the prospect of such tyranny which would "enable him to destroy one section of the country to the advantage of another," yet the President advocated at all times that this authority be in the hands of a bipartisan commission with a limitation in rate changes of 50 per cent of the duties fixed by Congress.

Recalls Tariff Bill Changes.

Sept. 23, 1929—Insinuates that the President is in collusion for unlimited revision of the tariff, yet when the measure was passed it was found that Congress had revised only 27 per cent of its 3,300 items.

Oct. 22, 1929—Insinuates that the President intends to ask Congress to abandon the tariff bill. The President made no such suggestion.

Oct. 31, 1929—Represents the President as responsible for Senate delays in passing the tariff bill.

Nov. 25, 1929—Repeats the same charge, although it was obvious to the whole country that the opposition delayed the bill for six months, thus contributing to economic depression and business uncertainty.

Aug. 10, 1930—Attacks the President for delay in appointing the Tariff Commission and asserts he had a year to select its members, whereas the Tariff Commission bill giving this authority was then only six weeks old. The question of whether there would be a commission and what its character would be was in doubt to the very last minute, as it was the last thing settled by the conference between the two houses of Congress.

Oct. 29, 1929—Insinuates the President brought about the stock market crash.

Oct. 29, 1929—Implies the President and Republican party were responsible for collapse in stock market.

Oct. 30, 1929—Insinuates the President was responsible for stock speculation and subsequent losses of innocent people.

Dec. 29, 1929—Implies the President responsible for stock market panic.

May 8, 1930—Reverses all this and says, "President, of course, did not bring about the panic."

June 1, 1930—Again asserts the President responsible for stock market crash, insinuating he brought about soup kitchens and bread lines.

"Political Card Index" Denied.

June 6, 1930—Implies that the President assured that "the interests which so long have fattened on the public should be confirmed in their privilege and given further opportunity to exploit the public. This, the secret agreement, made in the little smoke-filled back rooms."

March 17, 1930—Asserts that the President is allied with "predatory interests."

Jan. 26, 1930—Asserts the President is completing a card index of Federal employes for sinister political purposes. No retraction was made when this infamous statement was disproved.

March 28, 1930—Sneered at "abortive arms limitation," yet later laid claim of credit to the Democratic leader in the Senate for the major portion of the success of this great accomplishment.

March 28, 1930—States "Hoover Administration" utterly bankrupt—only three major bills having been passed, farm relief, reapportionment, tax reduction. Yet the tariff, inland waterways, highways, prison reform, law enforcement, reorganization of Power Commission, reorganization of Veterans' Bureau and many others were on their way and subsequently passed.

April 14, 1930—Criticized the President for appointing fact-finding and negotiating commissions, although it was well known that President Wilson had appointed scores of such commissions during his tenure of office.

May, 1930—Claims falsely that the Republican members of the House are turning against the President.

May 8, 1930—Represents the President as garbling figures on extent of unemployment.

Calls Statements "Scurrilous."

August, 1930—Repeats misrepresentations that faulty employment statistics were used in April, and no retraction was made when those estimates subsequently were proven accurate by the census.

July 24, 1930—Accuses the President of misrepresenting estimates of the year's Federal expenditure at $4,203,000,000, implying that expenditures would exceed $5,000,000,000 with an "unparalleled increase in Federal appropriations." When it was evident from the treasury that the President was correct, no retraction was made.

Aug. 22, 1930—Misrepresents the "Hoover Administration" as forecasting abandonment of tax reduction. No such forecast was made. Quite the contrary.

In conclusion, Mr. Tilson says:

"These are but a few statements of the scurrilous misrepresentations. There are more, and they will be produced if Mr. Raskob wishes to have his subsidized bureau of defamation further ventilated.

"It might also be mentioned that all this constitutes a fine travesty by Mr. Raskob upon a great Democratic political party supposed to be appealing to the American people on great public issues."

An outline of the charges made by Mr. Tilson was given to Mr. Raskob's secretary at his home in Claymont, Del. Word came back that Mr. Raskob possibly would make an answer today, when he will return to his New York City office.

SLANDER OF PRESIDENT DENIED BY DEMOCRATS

National Committeemen, Answering Tilson, Says None of Criticisms Has Been Anonymous.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—The attitude of the Democratic National Executive Committee, it was stated tonight, is that there has been no misrepresentation and no attempt to slander the President as charged by Representative Tilson of Connecticut.

All of the statements, published between Sept. 15 last year and Aug. 22 this year, it was said, were made by men whose names were attached, and they are responsible for their utterances.

The Democratic managers here cannot understand why Charles Michelson, director of publicity for the national committee, should be singled out for attack. They assert that Mr. Michelson was merely the vehicle of distribution, and that it is a poor newspaper joke to say that he wrote the statements objected to by Representative Tilson.

"Why should the statements be attacked so viciously when the Republicans have so much to explain and defend?" said one representative of the national committee.

It is probable that the indictments by Mr. Tilson will be formally replied to by the Democratic National Executive Committee tomorrow, although no formal reply could be obtained tonight.

UNCLE ROBERT TO BE HOST.

Two trucks will transport the patients' wheelchairs to Rye, and two motor buses will convey the guests. They are to leave the home at 10 o'clock Thursday morning and return in time for dinner.

Puzzlers League Adds New Word to Language, 'Geosere,' Meaning the 'Folding of the Earth'

Special to The New York Times.

SEASIDE PARK, N. J., Sept. 1.—A new word was added to the language today by the National Puzzlers League of America, meeting here in its ninety-fourth semi-annual convention, and compilers of dictionaries were authorized to include it in their next editions.

The word is "geosere," and its meaning was explained as "folding of the earth." The word was brought before the convention by John Q. Boyer (Primrose) of Baltimore. All the members of the league are known by a nom de plume and are so addressed. "Primrose" urged the members to adopt the word "geosere," explaining that there was no other word which adequately described "the folding of the earth."

The word was coined by Joshua Price (Jack o' Lantern) of Bangor, Pa. It was said that it had been approved by some of the country's most famous lexicographers. At the instance of Mr. Boyer the words "care free" were approved as one word. He added that it would be included in revised editions of the leading dictionaries.

There was a long discussion on a report of the cryptogram committee, comprising C. H. Moon (Skylight) of Easton, Pa., and Erik Bodin (Viking) of Denver, Col., who recommended that words used in cryptograms be restricted to dictionary words, and that if other words are necessary they be designated by some mark or sign. The recommendation was not approved. In the discussion it was said that the members of the league took little interest in everyday cross word puzzles; that they were too simple.

Representative James M. Beck, former United States Solicitor General, was unable to be present. He was to place upon the original Sphynx a fitting memorial as the origin of puzzling. The president suggested that a man be selected to go to Egypt and place the wreath with fitting ceremonies and that the expenses be paid by the league. The matter was finally left over until the next meeting in February.

Ten cities wanted the next convention, among them being New York City, Philadelphia and Baltimore, the invitation from New York being backed by the Merchants' Association. Several ballots were required to make a choice, Baltimore finally winning.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

President, Miss Olive W. Dennis (N. Jeneer) of Baltimore, service engineer of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, a graduate in engineering of Columbia and Cornell Universities.

First vice president, George B. King (D. C. Ver) of Collingdale, Pa.

Second vice president, C. F. Patterson (Pat) of Scarsdale, N. Y.

Secretary, Lewis Trent (C. Saw) of New York City.

Treasurer, John Q. Boyer (Primrose) of Baltimore.

Official editor, Rufus T. Strohm (Arty Ess) of Scranton, Pa.

To fill a vacancy as trustee for Ohio, Fred J. Kathman (Cincinnatus) of Cincinnati, Ohio.

The convention concluded tonight with a dinner.

CHINESE HELD IN SLAYING.

Charged With Killing Countryman With a Hatchet in the Bronx.

Thomas Wong, 31 years old, a Chinese, of 192 Claremont Avenue, the Bronx, was held by Magistrate Gotlieb in Morrisania court yesterday for hearing in Homicide court Sept. 9. He is charged with the murder of Sing Foo, 28 years old, of 104 Lenox Avenue, who was found dying as a result of hatchet blows in a lonely section of the Bronx last Friday.

Wong, according to Assistant District Attorney Mogilesky, confessed that he attacked Foo with a hatchet in his car because the latter had caused him to lose his position in a restaurant by accusing him of dishonesty. Acting on the belief that Foo was a victim of a tong feud, detectives started a round up last week and arrested five Chinese for violations of the Sullivan law.

Denies Delay in C. P. A. Results.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Sept. 1.—Complaints of delay in announcement of results in certified public accountants' examinations in the State were met with denial today by Dr. James Sullivan, Assistant Commissioner of Education. "The list was sent out the latter part of July," said Mr. Sullivan, "but it is necessary to check them over very carefully before the applicant receives his license."

WAR CLAIMS ISSUE NEARS SETTLEMENT

Personnel of American-German Commission Will Sail Tomorrow for The Hague.

GERMANY DENIES SABOTAGE

Contends Munitions Explosions for Which $20,000,000 Is Sought Were Industrial Accidents.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—Practically the entire personnel of the American-German Mixed Claims Commission will sail from New York Wednesday on the President Harding to take part in proceedings at The Hague for a final settlement of the claims of this government against Germany arising out of the Black Tom and Kingsland munitions explosions in July, 1916, and January, 1917.

The United States contends that the explosions were due to sabotage on the part of German agents during the war but before the United States entered it. The damages sought amount, in principal and interest, to more than $20,000,000.

The American agent and chief counsel who will present the case of the United States is Robert W. Bonynge, former Representative in Congress from Colorado, now practicing law in New York.

Sailing with Mr. Bonynge will be H. H. Martin, assistant, who has been making a special study of the Black Tom disaster for the last two years; E. P. Bowyer, assistant to the umpire; Jackson C. Lusby, auditor; Eugene Bogan, attorney, and a clerical staff.

Dr. Karl von Lewinski, Consul General in New York, is the German agent. He is en route to Europe. He will be assisted as chief German defense counsel by Dr. Wilhelm Tannenberg and Dr. Karl Grossman.

Chandler P. Anderson of Washington, American commissioner; Dr. Wilhelm Kisselbach of Hamburg, Germany's commissioner, and Rowland Boyden of Boston, umpire, are already abroad.

The German Government maintains that the Kingsland and Black Tom disasters were industrial accidents.

The German and American agents are taking abroad several hundred other claims, with a view to settlement. For this purpose both agents and their assistants will go to Hamburg, and possibly Berlin, after the Black Tom and Kingsland cases have been argued at The Hague.

The Mayor came ashore in a tender this afternoon. He was accompanied only by members of the crew. After a few minutes' walk about the dock of the Montauk Yacht Club, Mr. Walker returned to the yacht.

POSTAL CLERK SLAIN BY FRIEND IN ACCIDENT

Victim Is Shot Dead as Pair Inspect Revolver in City Hall Station.

James Desio, a 34-year-old postal clerk, who was employed as a guard for the registry division on the mezzanine floor of the City Hall branch of the postoffice was accidentally shot and killed there yesterday morning by a fellow-worker, a friend of long standing. The shooting occurred when the two men were examining a revolver similar to one Desio carried and discussing their abilities as marksmen.

Desio who had been employed in the postoffice for about ten years, was married and had three children. He lived at 8 First Street, Yonkers. His friend, who accidentally pulled the trigger is George Kantowitz of 206 East Ninety-fifth Street. After telling Postal Inspector J. M. Graham how the shooting occurred, Kantowitz was allowed to go home, with orders to appear before Federal District Attorney Tuttle this morning. No charge was lodged against him.

The shooting occurred about 7 o'clock just before Desio was scheduled to be relieved. He and another clerk had put their revolvers on a table just inside the gate leading to the main cage of the registry division, while they prepared to wash their hands. Five other men were standing about chatting a few feet away when Kantowitz and Desio picked up one of the guns and commenced discussing the weapon. As Kantowitz lifted the revolver on his palm to feel its weight, it was discharged. The bullet pierced Desio's left arm and entered his heart.

Kantowitz is also married and has been at the City Hall branch of the postoffice for about seven years.

MAYOR BERG'S CAR TAKEN.

Mount Vernon Official's Auto Stolen From Garage and Wrecked.

Westchester County Park policemen reported yesterday that someone had taken the automobile of Mayor James Berg of Mount Vernon without his permission from a garage in Mount Vernon, and wrecked it on Bronx Parkway, near Bronxville, early yesterday morning by running into a blinker light.

Nicholas Jackman, a brother of the garage owner in whose keeping the car was left, was questioned but was unable to tell the police who took it. The driver fled after the crash.

SAY FATHER TORTURED TWO TO FORCE THEFTS

Children Allege Connecticut Man Made Them Aid Chicken Stealing Gang.

NORWALK, Conn., Sept. 1 (AP).—Charges that Clarence Jennings Sr., alleged leader of a gang of chicken thieves, had tortured his two children into stealing poultry throughout Fairfield County and Southeastern New York State are being investigated by police.

Mrs. Ruth Jennings Reddy, Jennings's daughter and one of nine persons arrested in connection with the thefts, is quoted by police as saying that her father had tied her thumbs to two spikes nailed over on open doorway and had left her suspended in the air with her toes barely touching the floor until she had agreed to accompany him on raids on poultry farms. Her brother, Clarence Jennings Jr., 16 years old, also under arrest, charged, police said, that his father had beat him until he also had consented to participate in the raids.

Police allege that thousands of chickens have been stolen by the gang during the past year.

NEW JERSEY BLASTS WRECK TWO HOUSES

Destruction of Home of Former Norwood Police Official Laid to Rum-Runners' Revenge.

RENNER 'CLEANED UP' TOWN

Paterson Authorities Hold Owner of Place Blown Up There on Suspicion of Arson.

Terrorist racketeers and rum-runners seeking revenge on Robert S. Renner, former supervisor of police at Norwood, N. J., are believed by the police ot be responsible for an explosion and fire that badly damaged his home there early yesterday morning. Until Renner left the police office a short time ago he carried on an intensive struggle for a "clean town," which led to frequent threats of vengeance, the police said.

The explosion in Renner's home was the second to occur in New Jersey yesterday. The first leveled a two-story brick and frame building at 120-22 North Maine Street, Paterson, which James Gallo occupied as a factory and home. Gallo was arrested late yesterday afternoon on suspicion of arson and held in the Paterson Police Headquarters jail for questioning.

Both Renner's and Gallo's families were away from home when the blasts occurred.

Renner and his family have been away for the last four days on a yachting trip. Police said the only reason they could ascribe for what they are certain was an incendiary attack on the house was spite.

Police Lieutenant Edward Levy was on his way home from duty when he heard what he described as a terrific explosion. In an instant flames leaped from the house. Lieutenant Levy turned in an alarm, but by the time firemen arrived the house was a mass of flames, and after four hours only the shell of the place remained.

In the yard next to the house the police found an automobile with Passaic County license plates which had been issued for another car. The police believe that either the plates or the car or both were stolen. Inside the car were thirteen five-gallon cans which, according to the police, had contained gasoline.

Owner of Paterson House Held.

Special to The New York Times.

PATERSON, N. J., Sept. 1.—An explosion that leveled the two-story brick and frame building at 120-122 North Main Street here early this morning remained unexplained this evening. The police had taken James Gallo, who owned and occupied the premises as a factory and residence, into custody for questioning. He and his family were absent from home when the explosion occurred.

The entire neighborhood was aroused by the blast, which rattled windows blocks away. The front porch of the demolished building was hurled across the street and through a store window. A chair landed on the second floor of another building across the street. Strips of torn canvas from the awning and shade factory which Gallo operated on the first floor were draped across telephone wires.

Fire Damages Other Houses.

Fire that followed the explosion damaged the building at 118 and 124 North Main Street. The local fire-fighting force was able to keep the flames from other buildings in the block, most of which are constructed of wood.

At 124, the family of Frederick Hemingway was jarred out of bed, but no one was injured. George Bonnet, at 118, was reading a newspaper when the explosion shattered a window near which he was seated. A sheet of flame burst through the aperture and Bonnet's face was burned before he could leap back.

The débris, which was all that remained of the brick and frame structure, prevented the removal of automobiles from garages in the rear.

According to the police, there were traces of gasoline in the wreckage. Detectives said, however, that they were unable to explain the explosion. Gallo and his wife and two daughters left their residence on the second floor of the building Saturday night and were out of town until this afternoon, when Gallo was taken immediately to headquarters.

Money Doubled in Fortune Teller's 'Magic Bag' Till Man Put In His Life Savings of $3,800

There was no doubt in Max Rosenthal's mind that Jenny Frank, 20-year-old gypsy fortune teller, was as much an expert in her chosen calling as he was in the picture framing business. She had proved it to his satisfaction by means of her little black bag, the "magic bag" she called it.

Mr. Rosenthal first met Jenny last April. Business at his factory at 2,346 East Twenty-third Street was a trifle slow. The January graduates had had their diplomas framed, and he was anxiously awaiting the publication of the Summer lists. Mr. Rosenthal happened to wander down toward Sheepshead Bay one afternoon, and there was Jenny sitting outside her store at 1,912 Avenue U.

"Tell your fortune, sir," she urged, and he somewhat sheepishly consented. It would be good fun, thought he.

Jenny took his hand and peered into it. "Oh-h-h-h," she cried, "you're going to be awfully rich." She must have guessed his business, Rosenthal thought, and could see the graduates lined up outside his store. She must be clever.

The gypsy continued: "And to show you, I won't charge you anything. I'm going to put your dollar into this bag, and give it back to you. Then go home and sleep on it, and open it the next morning."

Mr. Rosenthal beamed at her. Here was a genuine fortune teller, who had confidence in her prophecies. He went home, happy. That night he put the bag under the pillow, and fell asleep. The next morning he opened the bag. His eyes popped. There were two dollars in it. He could not wait till he told the good news to Jenny.

The next day, he tried $10, and sure enough it became $20. He tried it with $20. The next morning there was $40 in the bag. Then he decided to take a flier with his life savings, $3,800. He did not sleep that night. When the dawn came, he looked. Ten one-dollar bills reposed in the bag. He dressed and rushed to Jenny's store, but Jenny had gone out of business. He told the police.

Since April he has been searching for her. Sunday he found her in a gypsy settlement and turned her over to the police.

Jenny denied the charge yesterday before Magistrate Blanchfield in Coney Island Court. She was held without bail for examination today.

"I appeal from your customs. I must be myself"

says Emerson in his "Self-Reliance."

There is a tendency, today, to minimize the individual and to exaggerate the machine-like customs of business, and of life.

Some men are so constituted that they fit quite easily into a mechanistic system, while others feel, instinctively, that their individuality will be or is being, gradually standardized out of them. They are becoming "cogs" and they don't want to be "cogs."

Work in the life insurance field certainly doesn't cramp individuality, ingenuity, or initiative. Men of character, who are capable of sustained hard work, who like to overcome obstacles by their mind and personality, who are interested in human nature, may well consider the profession of life insurance. There are no big fortunes to be made in it, but many agents have attained bigger things than that in its service.

Life insurance is used today as an essential commodity. There are but few problems in a man's personal or business finance in which it cannot be of help.

Life insurance is a property, free from shrinkage or depreciation, nor will it be dissipated by inexperienced or speculatively inclined beneficiaries if its policy income provisions are used.

This office offers a liberal commission contract with a renewal income for a period of years — thorough courses of instruction, and the cooperation in practical field work of an experienced staff, without affecting in any way the agents' commissions.

We will be glad to discuss the matter in detail with anyone who is interested. We will tell him, as clearly as we can, the nature of the business, its possibilities and also its difficulties. He can then more accurately analyze the situation—and also himself and make his own decision.

DIVERS WORK APACE ON TREASURE LINER

Three Explosive Blasts Detach Hydraulic Crane on Egypt, 400 Feet Below Sea.

WEATHER FAVORS EFFORT

But $5,000,000 in Gold and Silver Is Deep in Ship—London Underwriters Greatly Stirred by Feat.

By DAVID SCOTT.

Copyright, 1930, in Europe by The Times, London. Copyright in North and South America by The New York Times Company. All rights reserved.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BREST, France, Sept. 1.—Three explosive charges were fired 400 feet beneath the surface of the Atlantic today, detaching one of the hydraulic cranes on the sunken liner Egypt, which plunged beneath the waves eight years ago with more than $5,000,000 worth of gold and silver in her hull.

They were the first charges ever fired at such a depth during salvage operations, and soon afterward a great crane weighing several tons was brought to the surface within seventy-two hours of its first descent to the wreck. It was a remarkable feat which promises well for the recovery of the Egypt's sunken treasure, and the clearing away of the top hamper amidships is the first step to the gold-laden strong-room below.

Since the Egypt was located yesterday divers have worked like slaves to take advantage of the spell of fine weather and slack tides. Today they worked ten hours, and from now on all their efforts will be directed toward the bullion room of the sunken liner in front of the forward funnel. Above are the boat decks, hurricane deck, spar deck and main deck, counting downward.

Ship Is Standing Upright.

All these decks are of steel, varying in thickness from a quarter to three-quarters of an inch. The grabs of the shovels must come at the treasure vertically from above. If the ship were lying on her side only the hull and one partition would have to be pierced. As she is upright four decks must be cut through, but this is really preferable because the work is easier to follow on the ship's plan.

The floor and the walls and ceilings of the treasure room are thicker than the surrounding structure. Around it again are four mail rooms for Egyptian, Indian, Australian and Chinese mails, which may contain unexpected prizes.

The naval weather office at Brest prophesies a fine September, and it would be rash to say that the workers who are moving about the hydraulic cranes like minnows will not touch the gold this year. Yet it seems unlikely that they will finish their task soon, and they must face the problem of marking the Egypt through the Winter. The solution will probably be one large service buoy and a quadrilateral of smaller buoys ninety feet below the surface, safe from storms.

Already divers have had much occasion to reflect on the perverse and impish nature of marine buoys. A buoy in the hold of a salvage ship is just a tiresome half ton of iron painted red, which bangs about when you hoist it and will smash your hand or shinbone if you let it. Drop it into the sea and it becomes a living, illusive thing which bobs sarcastically at you while you are in sight, and with a little persistent spinning and tugging it works itself free of your five-ton anchor and six-inch cable as soon as your back is turned.

This year a bouy found the Egypt without waiting to be trawled. It stole away in the night from its four companions and entangled its moorings in the wreck a mile away. There, too, the drag caught fast in something last year after a fortnight's work and wrecked the trawling gear. It is fairly certain now that our ships touched the Egypt then but could not locate her afterwards.

Find Causes Big Stir in London.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 1.—The discovery of the treasure-laden wreck of the Egypt off Cape Finisterre, France, yesterday has created a first-class sensation among London marine underwriters. Everywhere in the London market it was eagerly discussed.

London business men are cautious, and earlier attempts to locate the Egypt had aroused nothing but doubt in the minds of underwriters that the feat could be accomplished. Now, however, the first stage of the job has been completed, and there is confidence that the second stage—the actual recovery of the bullion—will be equally successful.

The position of the wreck agrees with that officially recorded by Lloyds. The Egypt sank in May, 1922, and the precious metal she carried consisted of $4,195,000 in gold and $1,075,000 in silver, a total of $5,270,000. Since then, however, the price of silver has depreciated heavily, but the value of the gold has held up, and if the salvaging efforts are successful there ought to be a good reward for Italian divers and a pleasant return for the marine underwriters who paid the claims after the liner sank. At the time a number of reinsurances were effected.

One of the most famous salvage cases known to the London market was the recovery of gold in the steamer Alfonso XII, wrecked off the Canary Islands in February, 1885. Aboard were ten boxes, each weighing about 200 pounds and containing 10,000 Spanish gold coins, each worth nearly $5. The gold was insured in the London market for about $525,000.

It was stowed in the lazarette, and to reach it openings had to be made in three decks. The metal was at a depth of 160 feet, compared with 400 for the Egypt, and up to that time, forty-five years ago, the greatest depth at which it was thought divers could work successfully was 150 feet. The London underwriters organized a special salvage expedition and sent out a staff including three British divers in the steamer Arabian. About $450,000 of the gold was recovered, the actual cost of recovery being 15.922 per cent, as compared with an estimate of 16 per cent at the outset.

Since then there have been a number of notable salvage cases, including the recovery of gold in the sunken Laurentic, but it is recognized everywhere that if the Egypt's hoard is recovered it will be the greatest achievement of its kind.

GERMANS PAY TRIBUTE TO GEN. HENRY T. ALLEN

Berlin Newspapers Praise His Large Sympathy With Defeated Reich.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 1.—News of the death of Major Gen. Henry T. Allen in Pennsylvania on Saturday brought expressions of genuine regret in Germany, where he is widely remembered as "one of the fairest and most knightly former enemies Germany had," as the Vossische Zeitung phrases it. His work as chairman of the American committee, which fed undernourished German children after he left the army, is particularly recalled here, where his death "calls forth no less sorrow than in his native land," the Vossische Zeitung continues.

The Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung devotes a full column to recounting how General Allen changed from one of the most ardent supporters of the "on to Berlin" movement at the time of the armistice to a friend of Germany and a sturdy defender against French efforts to tear the country limb from limb, as told in his "My Rhineland Diary."

"Until the last minute of the American occupation he fought a battle for justice and sought to hinder the destruction of Fortress Ehrenbreitstein at Coblenz," the Allegemeine Zeitung continues. "Coblenz ought to erect a tablet inscribed: 'To the American, General Allen, who tried to prevent the senseless destruction of this historic landmark by the French.' It would be a recognition of his fairness and a truly honorable memorial to the deceased."

NICARAGUAN CONGRESS SITS

Special Session to Consider Fiscal Reforms, Including Loan Bank.

By Tropical Radio to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Sept. 1.—President Moncada this afternoon sent a message opening a special session of the Nicaraguan Congress to consider new projects for economic reorganization, the most important being the opening as soon as possible of a loan bank to aid the country's coffee growers.

President Moncada points out numerous improvements in public buildings and means of communication that have been made during his administration, stating that the Nicaraguan Government has felt it better to reduce government salaries rather than to stop work on public improvements, which work gives employment to thousands.

24 PARTIES PLACED ON GERMAN BALLOT

Eight Fewer Qualify Than for Last Reichstag Election, at Least Six Being Rejected.

MANY NEW SPECIAL GROUPS

Nominations Again Go to Veteran Politicians—Intellectuals Make Appeal to Non-Voters.

By GUIDO ENDERIS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 1.—Twenty-four parties or individual political groups today qualified for a place on the official ballot for the Reichstag elections to be held Sept. 14, while at least half a dozen other applicants were rejected by the Federal Election Commission because their petitions failed to conform with the requirements of the election law.

Although the ballot will list eight less parties than were placed at the disposal of the voter in the election of May, 1928, the assortment of parties is no less piebald. It not only reflects the prevailing confusion of political ideas and aspirations in the ranks of the German electorate but also exhibits some of the inherent shortcomings of the existing ultra-liberal system of suffrage and the proportional method of allocating votes.

When it is recalled that under the German electoral system 500 eligible voters can organize a new party and that existing economic and social conditions in Germany are highly favorable to the promulgation of new political formations and party shibboleths, voters in other democracies may find a partial explanation for the intricacies of the German election.

Many New Parties.

Seventeen parties represented in the last Reichstag again appear on the official ballot, although only ten of these comprised major units, the rest constituting minor groups with anywhere from three to six representatives each.

Among the parties whose petitions were today approved by the election commission are such new formations as the Landlord and Householders' party, the Anti-Alcohol party, the Free Union of Artisans, Craftsmen and Retailers; the Party of War Cripples, and the National Minorities of Germany, who believe the cause of the former German nationals left behind in the ceded areas requires special representation in the Reichstag.

As not one of these isolated groups can hope to poll the 60,000 votes in any of thirty-five electoral districts required for one mandate, it is already evident that probably 1,000,000 votes will be wasted in the coming election.

The problem of mobilizing 10,000,000 non-voters is now being tackled by a committee of thirty-eight representatives of art, science and literature, who in a non-partisan manifesto demand that the new Reichstag receive "the stamp of intelligence."

The Call to Vote.

"Many men and women whose judgment commands respect abstain from voting because of an aversion for prevailing political machinations," the manifesto says. "Thereby they prevent the strengthening of responsible parties, and the result is that our entire politics remains spineless."

Among these intellectual leaders are Gerhardt Hauptmann, Thomas Mann, Heinrich Mann, Bruno Frank, Ricarda Huch, Bernhard Kellermann, Max Liebermann, Max Slevogt, Professor Sauerbruch, Professor Bier and numerous other well-known artists, scientists, writers and academicians.

While the executive boards of most of the old Reichstag parties have renominated former Deputies and party wheelhorses, the newly-founded State party, which succeeds the liquidated Democratic party, appeals for support with a list of entirely new candidates, with the exception of several former well-known Democratic Deputies.

As the task of selecting candidates for the various party lists is the sole prerogative of the various party boards, the nominations have again been allocated in a manner which will insure mandates to the veteran politicians, and it is this monopoly that effectively eliminates the younger generation from politics.

HEYE EXPLAINS RETIRING.

Reichswehr Chief Denies It Is Due to Political Pressure.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 1.—Sensational reports purporting to discover deep political motives behind the approaching retirement of General Heye from the active command of the Reichswehr, which was announced recently, were effectually laid to rest today by a statement signed by him in which he declares, "My retirement has nothing whatever to do with political questions."

Several newspapers here had appeared to be convinced General Heye was being forced out because he had refused to accede to the wishes of some of the more militant groups, who allegedly want to develop closer cooperation with the Soviet Army.

General Heye's statement today confirms an announcement when the subject was first brought up that reasons of health were the true motive for his retirement. He declares he first mentioned his desire to retire to President von Hindenburg and the Minister of Defense, General Groener, at the beginning of June and they agreed he should leave his post after the Autumn manoeuvres at the end of this month and selected Nov. 30 as a suitable day.

"He who has served forty-two years in the army, as I have, and who has spent twenty of them, as I, in positions of the heaviest responsibility in war and peace time will understand my wish to hand over the leadership to a younger man," General Heye says. "I have never busied myself with party politics and have no intention of doing so in the future.

"It is conscious or unconscious misleading of public opinion to speak of any political views of the Reichswehr."

The General administers a sound reproof to those newspapers which have carried extravagant assertions of "goings on behind the scenes," and concludes:

"As I leave active service I take with me the firm conviction that the army in all its members carries out its duties to the nation and people selflessly and faithfully. If this fact were better appreciated in public criticisms it would be better for the army and the general public interests as well."

FINDS NEW LAND IN ARCTIC.

Danish Expedition Returns With Collection of Fossil Fish.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 1.—The Danish Polar explorer, L. Koch, today returned to Copenhagen after a successful expedition to Greenland, bringing with him a large collection of fossilized fish.

The expedition discovered and mapped extensive land between Scoresby Sound and Denmark, one fjord covering 8,000 square miles, with banks reaching an altitude of 700 feet. The earth appeared to hold coal veins and copper deposits. Traces also were discovered of a warm period in Greenland's history after the glacial period.

THIRTY HURT AS TRAIN HITS BUFFER IN LONDON

Marshall Field 3d and Lord Rothermere Escape Injury in Euston Station Crash.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 1.—Marshall Field 3d of Chicago and his bride, the former Mrs. Dudley Coates, now on their wedding trip, and Lord Rothermere escaped injury today when a Scottish express train crashed into the buffers at Euston station. Thirty persons were hurt. Lord Rothermere was flung down by the sudden impact, and several passenger coaches were derailed and telescoped.

The train, which was nearly three-quarters of an hour late, was traveling at a speed estimated at between fifteen and twenty miles an hour when the crash occurred. The two engines drawing the train and four coaches were derailed.

The most severely injured was the driver of the first engine. The others hurt were mostly returning vacationists in the first three coaches. The third coach telescoped into the second.

Volunteers rushed to the shattered coaches and released the passengers from the wreckage with pickaxes and crowbars. The station platform was turned into a first aid station with cushions dragged from the train compartments spread over luggage to make temporary beds for the injured. Some of those taken to a hospital had been cut by broken glass. Others had been crushed by luggage, which rained down on them from the racks. Many were hurt when flung down in the corridors or thrown across compartments.

This is the third time in two years that an express train has crashed into the buffers at Euston Station.

ALBRECHT SEEN IN PLANE.

It was understood Albrecht will meet King Alfonso, who is now visiting with the former Empress Zita of Austria, and will request him to intervene for his wife, the former Irene Rudnay, and ask an annulment of her marriage to the Hungarian Minister at Sofia.

mobs whose members, the police say, carried pockets filled with stones, to plundering and violence. Villas of the wealthy were among their objectives.

In the Podmaniczku Utca the gendarmerie were attacked by a mob which snatched a rifle and bayonet from one man and ran him through. The troops then shot in the air and finally into the crowd, on which they trained machine guns. The mob scattered but was soon rallied by the Reds and overturned an ambulance car, beating the chauffeur. A coal cart was overturned and its contents used as ammunition against the police.

"For a few hours at midday the horrors of the Communist revolution of 1919 were reborn," said one eyewitness, who lived through the atrocities of the Bela Kun régime. "The moderate Socialists did their best but lost all control."

The most alarming feature of today's violence for those able to read the signs of the times was the extent to which the Communist extremists gained the ear of workmen embittered by economic distress.

Blame Police Brutality.

While the official account praises the police moderation, other eyewitnesses state the police behaved with unnecessary brutality. Although officials deny the police were responsible for the violence, the Socialists declare that they were and will demand in Parliament the retirement of the Deputy Minister of the Interior and the Police Chief of Budapest, who, they allege, gave orders to the police leading inevitably to provocative action.

Some renewal of the disorders this evening was instantly suppressed, and it was hoped the night would prove uneventful, but the police and military are maintaining full emergency measures until tomorrow morning.

How the disorders in the main assembly point, the city park, arose is not yet clear. Some 40,000 demonstrators arrived there and chanted in chorus "Give us work, give us bread!" When the Weingruber restaurant was attacked the police proved powerless, so the troops and tanks were called out and orders were issued to suppress the disorders ruthlessly. The troops opened fire on the barricaded workers while mounted police charged, wheeled round and charged again and again.

The Radical Democrat Deputy, Zolxn Klar, who had motored to the city park to beg the police to spare the demonstrators, was dragged from his car by the mob, which misunderstood his intention. With shouts of "Down with the traitor!" he was severely beaten and his car overturned, set afire and completely burned.

American Has Close Call.

An American journalist accompanied by two Budapest journalists in the car behind was also attacked by the mob and had a narrow escape, the three being obliged to run for their lives. The Socialist leader, Ernest Garamyi, was reported another victim.

After the military attacks thousands in the city park endeavored to flee toward the inner city. The majority of the roads were blocked by the police, and the retreating crowds streamed back down the broad Andrassy Utca, where the defeated Reds took revenge on the hated bourgeoisie. Shop after shop was wrecked and plundered, and every window in two fashionable cafés, the Western and the Edison, was shattered, as well as the windows of the museum near the city park.

On Dob Street the police were fired on from a house. They stormed it but were unable to capture their assailant. Although other shots, here and there, were fired at the police, the rioters appeared to possess very few firearms, and were armed with clubs and stones. Other barricade fights occurred in the interior of the city.

During the afternoon the troops, tanks and police succeeded in clearing the streets, and by 5 P. M. reported that order was restored. This evening, however, the city was filled with big patrols of police and troops determined to repress with the utmost severity attempts to recommence the disorders under cover of darkness.

For the solid citizen today has been a day of panic. It is now allayed, but the wreckage in the city park and many streets, which look as though they had been submitted to a bombardment, show how near the capital was to a great disaster.

Socialist demonstrations to demand unemployment relief were held in many other cities and towns. They were not accompanied by any disorder, as the Red agitators concentrated their revolutionary effort on Budapest. The exception was the town of Gyoer, where there was a little unimportant rioting.

EXPLAINS "ARREST ORDER."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 1.—In reply to letters from Count Johann Zichy and Count Apponyi to Premier Bethlen demanding explanations of the orders issued on St. Stephen's Day for the arrest of Archduke Otto and his mother, ex-Empress Zita, if they returned to Hungary, Count Bethlen, through Minister of the Interior Vass, issued another letter today.

The letter gives what the Legitimists call the lamest evasion of the issue. It is stated therein that while the government never for a moment had imagined that the cool-headed Legitimist leaders or high dignitaries of the Church would attempt violence or a coup, rumors to that effect were persistent abroad and the government was obliged to provide against the unexpected as well as the expected.

The statement declares, however, that the government never authorized the issuance of the notorious order to arrest "a young man, slender and 18 years old, and a lady dressed in widow's weeds," which the Legitimists had described as an order to arrest the "King of Hungary" and his mother.

The only instruction authorized, the government says in the letter, was for observation to be maintained as to whether such persons should arrive by motor car or plane and for a report to be made if they were noticed.

PEKING GOVERNMENT IS FORMED BY REBELS

Yen Hsi-shan Is President and Three Manchurians Have Places in Cabinet.

CHIANG ORDERS OFFENSIVE

Nanking Informed by Mukden of Manchurian Moves, but Chang Fails to Disclose Motives.

By HALLETT ABEND.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 1.—The Nanking Government's attitude toward the assumption of control of the territory around Peking and Tientsin by Manchurian forces today became more optimistic when Chang Hsueh-liang formally telegraphed the Nanking State Council notifying it of the movement of four divisions of Mukden troops southward and asking that the shift be recorded, but without explaining his motives.

This seeming submission to the Nanking Government's rules of procedure is somewhat negatived by news from Peking telling of harmony between Chang Hsueh-liang and Yen Hsi-shan and the formation of a Northern government. The foreign, navy and education portfolios go, respectively, to Dr. Wellington Koo, Admiral Shen and Tan Ger-ho, all Manchurians; finance and communications to Shans men; war and home affairs to Feng Yu-hsiang adherents, and industry and commerce to Kwangsi province representatives. It is understood that Yen Hsi-shan is the titular head of the new Northern Government, Wang Ching-wei having a voice in the dominant policies. The Legislature was organized soon after the calling of the people's conference.

Nanking's reply to these moves is a crisp order by Chiang Kai-shek to all his commanders to prepare to launch a major offensive war beginning Sept. 5 on the Lunghai and Peking-Hankow railway fronts in the hope of eliminating Feng Yu-hsiang's armies. Thus, the crippled Northerners would have to throw the brunt of the succeeding campaign upon the Manchurians, if they would actively oppose the Nanking Government.

While the politico-military situation has assumed the gravest aspect since the capture of Peking by the Nationalists more than two years ago, the Communist menace south of the Yangtse is increasing. The capture of Changhsa again by the Reds is considered by foreign observers to be a matter of days, although 1,500 government reinforcements have arrived there. Most of the Hunanese troops have not been paid in many months, and their morale is low. Hankow reports the arrival of more than 50,000 refugees from Changsha who have abandoned their lifetime savings and investments.

To Have Eleven Ministers.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PEKING, Sept. 1.—A decision to form a new government here under the leadership of Yen Hsi-shan as a rival to the Nanking Government was reached at a meeting tonight of leaders representing dissenting factions of the Kuomintang.

It was announced that the new administration would be composed of eleven ministers and would be directed by a State council consisting of Yen Hsi-shan, chairman; Tang Shao-yi, who was the first Prime Minister of the Chinese Republic; Wang Ching-wei, Kuomintang Left Wing leader; General Feng Yu-hsiang and Hsieh Chih of the Kuomintang Right Wing.

Political observers here feel that the success of the project hinges largely on the attitude of Chang Hsueh-liang, whose participation in the present stage of affairs is considered highly improbable.

One American Stays at Changsha.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 1 (AP).—A lone American missionary, the Rev. Allen Cameron, remained in Changsha today after all other foreigners had left the city in the face of a threatened Communist attack.

Mr. Cameron, a member of the Faith Mission, declined to leave the city. All other Americans were taken aboard the United States gunboat Palos and the gunboats of other nations received their respective nationals.

Wireless advices said the situation remained uncertain, with machine-gun and cannon fire going on outside the walls and a Communist army deployed about the city.

The arrival of additional government troops was reported, making the total defense force in the Hunan capital about 15,000. Because of the increase in defense forces a Red attack was considered unlikely for the present, although the loyalty of many government soldiers was regarded as questionable. Other Red groups, meanwhile, were roving over parts of Hunan and Kiangsi Provinces, capturing and looting villages.

A Red army seized and partly burned Changsha a month ago.

Mrs. Coonahan was taken to a room in the Grand Hotel and placed under the care of a special nurse and doctor.

British Artillerymen Mistake Boat for a Target but Miss

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 1.—Fishermen in a boat off Sandown, Isle of Wight, today were startled by a shell whistling over their heads.

They learned later that Lancashire and Cheshire territorials competing for the King's prize in an artillery contest had fired at them from Yaverland Fort. The marksmen had laid their gun on the fishing boat instead of a target 5,000 yards out.

The chief umpire immediately stopped the competition.

AROSEMENA OPENS PANAMA CONGRESS

President Reads Message for First Time—Hopes for Free Exercise of Suffrage.

ASSEMBLY WILL BE BUSY

Extension of Session Likely Because of Debate on Reforms in Election Laws and Finances.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PANAMA, Sept. 1.—For the first time in the history of Panama the Presidential message was delivered by the President himself when Florencio, Harómdio Arosemana gave today an account of the two years of his administration at the opening session of the National Assembly. Heretofore the message has been delivered by the Secretary of Government and Justice, who is the ranking Cabinet officer.

The Cabinet, Supreme Court, Diplomatic Corps and hundreds of spectators heard the President deliver his message. No mention was made of the pending treaty with the United States which failed to be approved by the previous Assembly. However, he referred to relations with the United States, "with which Panama is closely allied by circumstance and public treaty." He added that the most cordial relations were daily growing more comprehensive, logical and sincere. President Arosemena said Panama in her relations with the Canal Zone maintained always the best understanding and frank cooperation.

Hopes for Free Elections.

Regarding the popular request for reform in the election laws, he expressed the hope that the next elections would be conducted with absolute freedom and asserted he was disposed to give all guarantees necessary for the free exercise of suffrage. Apparently he does not favor postponement of the election by the General Elections Board, as suggested by those who seek reforms.

The President commented briefly on the report of the investigation commission of experts headed by George E. Roberts, vice president of the National City Bank. He called attention to the fact that Panama does not produce enough products for local consumption and suggested that local capital be invested in the development of natural resources or that foreign funds be procured.

He recommended a law placing a surcharge on parcel post importations to compensate the government for loss in consular fees and other charges on importations by freight.

Señor Arosemena said the financial situation was not alarming, despite a deficit of $31,552 and a floating debt of $700,000. He said the nation's income showed a surplus over the budget estimates. The President emphasized the need for continued economy, explaining that two years was not sufficient to carry out the program of his administration.

Problems Before Assembly.

Special Correspondence, THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PANAMA, Aug. 29 (By Air Mail).—The regular session of the National Assembly will probably have as its major tasks the consideration of the report of the fiscal investigation made by a committee of experts at the request of the government, the enactment of a new elections law, and the authorization of a loan of $1,000,000, for which negotiations are now under way.

The experts' report is contained in a book of more than 400 pages, and it gives a complete picture of the financial condition of the government at the time of the investigation, which was carried out early last year. The report discusses the geography, topography, natural resources, population and economic possibilities of the republic, practically every activity of the government and the relations between Panama and the Canal Zone.

There is also submitted with the report a budget bill and a bill providing for the organization of an office of fiscal control and accounts. There are other suggestions for reform and legislation which are being studied by the Cabinet. President Arosemena has informed the local press that the Cabinet Ministers will probably prepare for submission to the Assembly legislation pertaining to their departments based on the findings and recommendations of the investigating committee.

Recent agitation for reform of the elections law, started by the newspaper El Tiempo, and followed by a petition to the President signed by a number of prominent citizens, will probably result in discussion of the question in the Assembly. There has been some opposition to changing the present laws, but a majority seems in favor of reform. What happens will depend on the pressure brought to bear on the members of the Assembly by the two factions concerned in the proposed legislation.

The floating of a $1,000,000 loan, announced recently, is for the purpose of paying off short-term loans and for the construction of a palace of justice, plans for which have been approved. This building will house the Supreme Court and the Superior Court, and will provide a meeting place for the National Assembly. The present session of the Assembly is being held in the National Theatre, because the chamber formerly used in the National Palace has been taken over by government offices. It is understood the proposed loan is to be secured by land taxes and will run approximately five years.

It is unlikely that treaty relations between the United States and Panama will be taken up at the present session, because the negotiations appear to have been dropped for the time being.

The Assembly is authorized by law to extend its sessions for thirty days in case it is necessary, and any extensions after that must be by decree of the President.

JAPANESE DEDICATE MEMORIAL TO QUAKE

Great Hall Is Opened on Site Where 33,000 Perished in Disaster of 1923.

GIFTS TO SPIRTS PILED UP

Flowers, Watermelons, Cakes and Incense Heaped in Mounds by 500,000 Participants.

By WILFRID FLEISHER.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

TOKYO, Sept. 1.—The seventh anniversary of the great earthquake which devastated Tokyo and Yokohama was marked today by the dedication of the new Earthquake Memorial Hall, erected in the Honjo district of Tokyo on the site of the former army clothing depot, where 33,000 persons were burned to death in the fire which followed the quake. An impressive service was held in the new million-yen [about $500,000] structure, which was attended by Premier Hamaguchi, all members of the Cabinet, Mayor Nagata of Tokyo and other high officials.

It is estimated that 500,000 persons made the pilgrimage to the memorial hall today. From early morning until late tonight all roads leading to the hall were jammed with crowds coming and going. Offerings to the spirits of the dead were piled in huge mounds in the compound in front of the hall, the offerings consisting of flowers, watermelons, cakes and incense.

The dedication ceremony began at 9 o'clock this morning and lasted two hours. A thousand invited guests packed the hall, while other thousands stood outside in the compound. Both Shinto and Buddhist serevices were held, more than 100 priests participating in the latter in gorgeous robes. Speeches were made by the chief priest, Premier Hamaguchi and Mayor Nagata.

A tablet to the spirit of the dead, the central object of worship, is enshrined in a small temple built in the wall facing the entrance to the hall. A pair of silver vases donated by the Emperor stood each side of the tablet and many floral gifts and wreaths were piled before the altar. In a vault beneath the building are 262 urns containing the ashes of those who perished on the site of the former depot.

As has been customary every year since the earthquake, all traffic was stopped at 11:58 o'clock this morning and the people observed two minutes of silence. Factory whistles blew and temple bells were rung. Special firemen's drills also were held in various parts of the city.

Today's ceremonies marked the completion of the seven-year reconstruction program which cost Tokyo 840,000,000 yen [about $420,000,000].

It is expected that the reconstruction board, which has been cut from several thousand employes to 600 as the work progressed, soon will be completely disbanded.

BRUSSELS, Sept. 1 (AP).—Count de Broeckhoven, 22-year-old member of the Belgian nobility, was shot by a 20-year-old waitress in a Brussels café today and died shortly after being admitted to a hospital.

The waitress, who is alleged to have fired the shots in a fit of jealousy, was held by the police. Her name is Marie Scheer. She attempted to commit suicide, but succeeded only in wounding herself in the thigh.

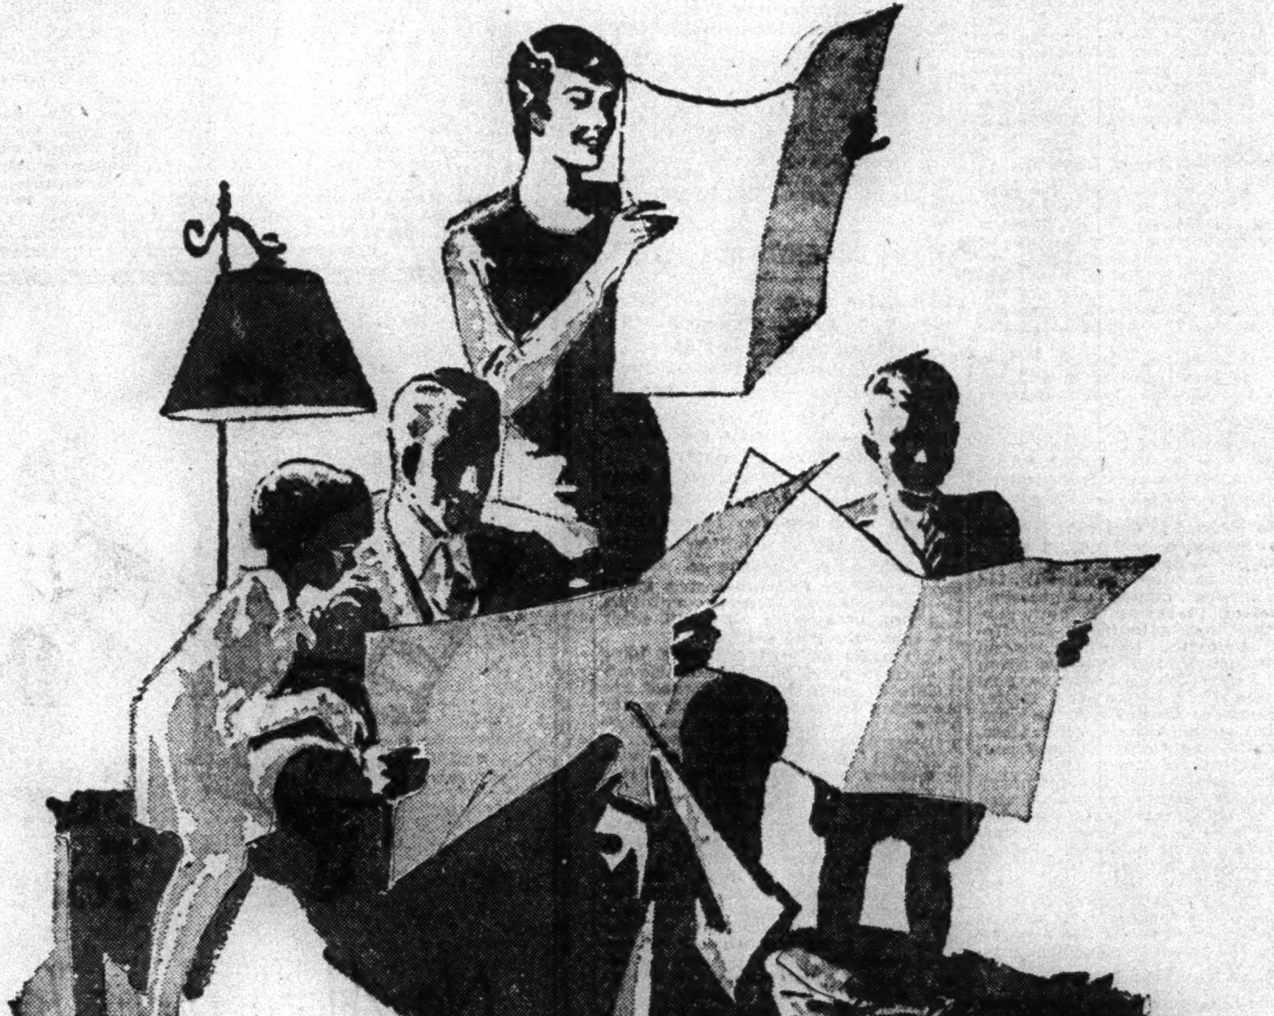
Who are these 2,000,000 readers?



THE very fact that nearly 2,000,000 people buy and read the Journal every evening indicates the extent to which the Journal is preferred.

Advertisers who are impressed by this vast preference naturally have a very businesslike interest in the quality of this great circulation—the largest of any evening newspaper in New York and all America.

They ask, "Who are these 2,000,000 readers?" The Journal is very happy to answer that question with particular definiteness, because the Journal is proud of its reader following.

These nearly 2,000,000 readers of the Journal are all New Yorkers or their neighbors.

The entire Journal circulation of more than 650,000 copies daily is absorbed by families living within the 50-mile circle of Greater New York and its suburbs.

This means that of the 9,000,000 people who live and buy in the Metropolitan Trading Area—the world's richest concentrated market—practically one out of four is a reader of the Journal.

Another fact that reveals who these readers are is that the Journal's circulation reaches all classes.

Two million is too many to be contained in any one group or class limit. Two million New Yorkers means bankers, motormen, physicians, janitors, teachers, millionaires, wage-earners, salesmen—every kind of substantial, purposeful, gainful citizen.

In the same way, 600,000 homes are too many to be all of a kind. The Journal goes into mansions, Park Avenue apartments, and many humble homes. The Journal has long since demonstrated to its consistent advertisers that neither buying power nor brains is a matter of the size of the house or its location. What does count is nearly 600,000 substantial homes where the Journal is the favorite newspaper.

THE JOURNAL GOES MARCHING ON

Further light on who reads the Journal is shown by the character of the communities in which the Journal dominates.

In the Borough of Brooklyn alone—a community of 2,240,000, and the traditional Home City of America—more Brooklyn editions of the EVENING JOURNAL are bought than all the Brooklyn newspapers combined.

In suburban Long Island, THE EVENING JOURNAL delivers almost four times as many papers as any other one evening newspaper.

In Westchester County, the richest trading area of the New York market, THE EVENING JOURNAL delivers more than twice as many copies as any other evening newspaper.

In suburban New Jersey, THE EVENING JOURNAL delivers almost four times as many papers as any other evening newspaper.

So it goes in every section of this community of 28 communities—the Journal dominates by reason of the preference of nearly 2,000,000 people who pay 3 cents a copy daily and 5 cents a copy Saturday for the Journal. With the power to choose and the money to buy what they choose—they choose the Journal in numbers double any other evening newspaper.

If you want to reach them—sell them—use their newspaper, the Journal. 107

MEXICO OPTIMISTIC AS CONGRESS OPENS

ORTIZ RUBIO SEES PEACE

His Remarks Indicate Program Will Follow That of Obregon and Calles.

FINANCIAL PACT STRESSED

Montes de Oca Describes Gains Won in Negotiations With International Committee of Bankers.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 1.—President Ortiz Rubio opened Congress this evening with the usual ceremony and in the presence of the House of Deputies, diplomatic representatives and high judicial, military and other authorities.

The President rode from Chapultepec Castle to the Chamber of Deputies escorted by the Presidential Guards and was received by a special committee of Deputies. The streets near the chamber were lined with infantry and well-drilled cadets from the military college. The chamber was ablaze with lights, the sombre garb of the legislators contrasting with the colorful costumes and decorations of the foreign diplomats, whose gallery was filled.

President Reads Message.

President Ortiz Rubio, on his arrival in the Chamber, proceeded to the forum followed by his headquarters staff. The first step in the ceremony was the roll-call and the declaration that the Chamber was duly installed. Thereafter the President read his message to the gathering, which was followed by the reports of the Cabinet Ministers, outlining the work of their respective departments.

The President said his most important report was that Mexico had entered definitely on an era of peace, reconstruction and hope, and that she should be inspired by the most patriotic optimism.

Discussing foreign affairs, President Ortiz Rubio said Mexico had been consolidated as a free and sovereign country, respectful of herself and all other nations. He indicated that Mexico as a debtor country would comply with her obligations, evidently referring to the recent international debt agreement closed by Finance Minister Montes de Oca.

The President stressed the liberty possessed by the Mexican press. He referred to the attempt on his life the day he took the oath of office by saying this had delayed his taking charge of his administration for sixty days.

The President's remarks left no doubt that the program of his administration will be on the lines laid down by President Obregon and continued by President Calles. He indicated the Church and State troubles were over and not likely to recur as long as the Church observes the laws.

Finance Minister's Report.

Finance Minister Montes de Oca in his report to President Ortiz Rubio on the past year's work dealt with the labors of his department in great detail. The fundamental task, he said, was to maintain an equilibrium between income and expenditure without heavy taxation. He stressed that income should be sufficient for indispensable public services and public indebtedness, internal and foreign.

New tariff legislation is recommended in the reorganization of the republic's finances. Customs duties have been grouped into one payment as against the previous certification of consular invoices abroad, direct import duties and a 10 per cent surcharge for the public debt. A new export tariff is under consideration to stimulate the exportation of national products.

The report next deals with the United States tariff law affecting Mexican products which have enjoyed a big demand in the United States. A reduction of Mexican imports is recommended as a partial remedy.

The industrial crisis has not been remedied, it continues, because it is largely due to exterior causes not easily modified by the government. To assist the petroleum industry and various mines the Minister pointed out that reductions were made in taxation and other concessions were granted.

Señor Montes de Oca said he had followed loyally the plan of his predecessors in limiting public expenditure to sums indispensable for efficient operation of the various sections of the government. He said Mexico had a budgetary system as advanced as any in the world. He stressed that the vice of amplifying budget appropriation had almost disappeared.

Amplification of the original budget in 1925 amounted to 30.8 per cent, in 1926 it was 16.9 per cent, in 1927 it was 6.7 per cent, in 1928 it was 1.7 per cent and in 1929 was eighty-one one hundreds of 1 per cent. Señor Montes de Oca said increases in appropriations in recent years have been allowed only in cases where new sources of income were found, thereby avoiding deficits at the end of the respective years.

Hopes for 1931 Surplus.

Despite the expenditure to suppress rebels, the 1929 report points out that due to strict economies and the intensification in tax collections at the end of the year the government had a surplus of $12,000,000. Five million pesos (about $2,500,000) has been appropriated to create a reserve fund. From the same excess income $5,000,000 has been appropriated to be paid in accordance with the foreign debt agreement signed on July 25. Despite the magnitude of those sums, Señor Montes de Oca said, the treasury was confident the end of 1931 would show a cash surplus.

"It is convenient to express clearly and frankly," Minister Montes de Oca continued, "that as long as the Mexican Government does not pay its debts, both external and interior, there is no real financial equilibrium."

He read the decree of Jan. 25, 1929, which provided for reorganization of the national public debt and methods for meeting it.

Señor Montes de Oca described the negotiations with the international committee of bankers which resulted in the agreement last July. Under the agreement Mexico will pay for the next five years sums ranging from $12,500,000 to $15,000,000. The capital of the old indebtedness is $274,669,277, the accumulated interest to the end of 1930 $211,107,944, a total of $485,777,221. All interest is canceled under the new agreement.

"The internal debt, banking indebtedness, agrarian debt and the claims of foreigners under treatment by the Mixed Claims Commission will be subject to the general plan for their payment, which I will present to Congress at an opportune moment," is one of the most significant observations in the report.

The report discusses reorganization of the National Railways of Mexico, stating that the latest international pact, including the foreign debt and the mortgage indebtedness of the National Railways, has resulted in relief to the national economy of about $352,000,000.

Foreign Minister's Report.

Foreign Minister Genaro Estrada made a lengthy report to Congress indicating he is working on a plan to establish durable relations with the nations of the world. He reviewed in detail Mexican efforts toward rehabilitation of Mexico as a world power. He emphasizes the importance of an increased number of consular agencies in Latin America and the United States and the cordiality toward Mexico.

President Ortiz Rubio, speaking in Señor Estrada's report says:

"My visit to the United States last January as President-elect of Mexico produced most satisfactory results. It made for a sincere understanding, guiding the relations between our countries. It cemented the friendship between the two lands of great and mutual interests. The American Government offered every kind of courtesy, especially during my visit to President Hoover, from whom I received attentions which have been appreciated not only by me but my country. Also when I took office all friendly nations sent special Ambassadorial missions, indicative of great international courtesy."

Señor Estrada refers in his report to the closing in the early part of this year of the custom house at Laredo, due to the constant difficulties of the passage of Mexicans to the United States. He said he found satisfaction in recording that the United States' official disapproval of the acts leading to the closing resulted in the immediate reopening of that important entry for international commercial interchange.

Explains Ousting of Russian.

Señor Estrada also details the happenings which led to the virtual expulsion from Mexico of the Russian Minister during the early months of 1930. He said there was virtually undisputed evidence that Moscow had been responsible for attacks and insults offered to Mexican Legations and Consulates throughout Latin America.

Regarding the commissions reviewing claims between Mexico and various world powers, Señor Estrada says:

"Between Mexico and Germany, after four periods of sessions extending over four years, during which time seventy-five meetings were held, the work was completed. The claims against this country amounted to 6,169,086 pesos, the decisions against Mexico totaling only 508,912 pesos.

"After the resignation of the third arbitrator in the Mexico-United States general claims commission, Dr. Zindball of Denmark, both governments resolved to name Dr. Horacio of Panama. The next session is fixed for Mexico City as from August last. Meetings will be held here presently. The special claims commission for Mexico and the United States is momentarily in recess, but Mexico has for sime time past been ready to resume work."

On the question of the boundary limits between Mexico and the United States, Señor Estrada said the commissions have worked in perfect harmony. Every point on the Rio Grande east of El Paso has been visited, and the international line has been worked out by expert engineers. That question will be subject to a new treaty after approval of the experts' views by the respective governments.

Report by War Minister.

General Joaquin Amaro, Minister of War, in a report to the Chief Executive, expresses the highest satisfaction with the Mexican Army, saying it was now convinced of its true mission. Every individual in it, he said, had no other ideal than the public display of his patriotism and that his desire for moral, intellectual and physical improvement should be known.

"An army made for war labors for peace," said General Amaro.

Sport has been one of the features of Mexico's army during the last year, he continued. The Olympic games in Havana, football in the United States and Mexico's polo triumph in Texas have been leading sport features.

General Amaro said the army in the current year's budget had shown a sincere desire to cooperate with the restricted expense program and that troops have done hard work on road and bridge constructions without loss of their principal mission of vigilance. Nevertheless, continues the report, many Mexican officers are abroad in various countries studying the latest methods of war.

Reorganization of Mexico's rural sources of production has been the main task of the Department of Agriculture, according to Minister Trevino's report. Agrarian reforms according to the spirit of the revolution have been continued in an effort to solve that problem in the shortest possible time. So the country will become self-sustaining agriculturally, economic problems have been studied in the hope of the rehabilitation of agricultural credit and to enable communal grants to be really productive, Señor Trevino said.

A vigorous continuation of the national irrigation program initiated by ex-President Calles has been made and special attention has been paid to the development and construction of agricultural schools. Attention has also been paid to an agricultural charting of the entire republic and more than twelve thousand Mexicans are enrolled for agricultural studies.

The report says 819 agrarian grants have been signed by the President covering more than 4,000,000 acres and benefiting more than 100,000 heads of families. The Mexican States principally affected thereby are Tlaxcala, Colima, Aguascalientes, Zacatecas and San Luis Potosi.

The Ministry of Industry, Commerce and Labor, according to Luis León's report, has been organizing cooperative societies of ex-laborers and in many cases mines are being worked successfully instead of being closed. In industries in general special efforts have been made to protect women and children. On the question of petroleum the report says that during the period under consideration 319 concessions have been granted, covering about 22,000,000 acres. Petroleum exploitation has remained limited to that of recent years, mainly due to economic causes, but hope is held of development next year in view of the disappearance of a number of causes for overproduction in the United States.

Mexico's mining industry, says the report, recently suffered from the drop in prices of silver, copper, lead and zinc, but satisfaction is found in certain cases of increased operations, especially in the mercury mines in the States of Guerrero, Chihuahua and Durango, while manganese production also shows favorable development.

Railways Said to Improve.

The Ministry of Communications and Public Works reported that the railways continue to improve and that the civil aviation law has done much to improve the interchange of passengers and mail between Mexico and the United States. There are more than fifty landing fields in the republic and 180 more are under construction.

In road construction special attention has been given to the road between Mexico City and Nuevo Laredo, that being the most important from the viewpoint of tourist traffic. Mexico City authorities report that close to 200,000,000 square yards of asphalt paving and roads have been laid down, against 123,000,000 last year.

KUNDT DEFENDS ACTIVITIES.

Ex-Bolivian Army Chief, in Berlin Radio Talk, Denies Playing Politics.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 1.—General Hans Kundt, German organizer of the Bolivian Army, who arrived here today, tonight broadcast the story of his experiences in South America.

He said he deeply regretted leaving the country, where he had done pioneer work for the past twenty years, not only as a military organizer but as a director of mining operations, in which he was aided by a number of German engineers and former officers. All left after the revolution, he said.

This must be regarded as a blow to German prestige, he said. Nevertheless German firms at present are preparing to develop Bolivia's water power, indicating that the anti-German sentiment is not nation-wide.

General Kundt declared he was completely surprised to see a revolution break out, as he was convinced Bolivia was going to develop peacefully. "I have been accused of playing a political rôle," he said, "but I occupied myself not at all with politics as it was not my task. As the chief staff General I had to obey the President, who simultaneously was the highest commissioner of the army. To avoid bloodshed I led the loyal troops back to the barracks after a portion had joined revolutionists, although I was master of the situation in La Paz throughout. Later I resigned."

General Kundt said Bolivia hitherto had been ruled by a number of prominent families, but that now the middle classes want to take a hand. He asserted also that Communist propaganda has begun to stir up unrest in all South American countries.

PORTO RICO POST FOR LOPEZ

Roosevelt Names A. F. of L. Aide Commissioner of Labor.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, Sept. 1.—Organized labor today was recognized with the appointment of William D. Lopez, former cigar maker and for twenty-seven years a member of the American Federation of Labor, as island Commissioner of Labor to head the government's reorganized department.

Governor Roosevelt announced the appointment at a special Labor Day convention which approved his program for the island's industrialization and rehabilitation, which he outlined in the day's chief address.

DIAMOND ARRESTED AS BELGIANS BAR HIM

Diamond posed for press photographers but declined to answer any leading questions, evading informative responses.

When no warrant for his arrest was produced he became more cheerful, but he looked uncomfortable when the detective piled his baggage into a taxicab and asked him to accompany him. The cab drove off to the aliens' office at the City Hall, whence the police sent a query as to Diamond's status to the Minister of Justice, who was on a holiday and was the only person competent to act on the case.

Meanwhile Diamond spent a long, dismal day at the beck and call of the police. He looked pale toward the end of the afternoon, for he had refused any solid food.

The Minister of Justice finally was reached and sent word Diamond could be set at liberty on the condition that he leave the country immediately and under escort, as there was nothing against him except that Belgium considered his presence undesirable.

In company with plain-clothes men, Diamond left the City Hall this evening in a taxicab, his baggage being conveyed to the station in another cab.

Says He Used Own Name.

ANTWERP, Sept. 1 (AP).—Jack Diamond told newspaper men here: "I do not understand what is going on. I embarked from New York under my own name, and not for one moment have I concealed my identity. I wonder who imagined I was traveling under the assumed name of Knowland or Nolan. I left the States to take a rest on the Continent, where I was years ago, and I even have a French identity card dating from my first visit three years ago.

"It is not my intention to remain in Belgium more than a day or so. I am suffering from my stomach, and I want to go to Vichy immediately to cure myself."

Diamond Not Wanted Here.

The only communication the New York Police Department has had with any foreign Police Department regarding John T. (Legs) Diamond was to advise the Belgian police Saturday in response to a query that he was not wanted here, it was said at Police Headquarters last night.

The murder of Harry Western, still only a probability in that his body has not yet been found, was linked to Diamond through the discovery of a bloodstained automobile stored in a garage near the Army Base in Brooklyn. The automobile was definitely proved to be Western's through tracing the engine number, and it was found on information supplied detectives by the four prisoners arrested at the alleged Diamond arms cache in Brooklyn early last week.

When the ownership of the car had been traced, the New York police called Mrs. Western at her husband's roadhouse, the Chateau, at Lake Katrine, near Kingston, N. Y. She told them that her husband had left Kingston on the night of Friday, Aug. 22, to go to New York City, and had been missing since then.

Information gained later brought out that a telephoned order to visit Diamond's home at Acra, near Catskill, had caused him to start the trip.

DICKEY ON ORINOCO GAINS HEADWATERS

LOCATES NEW TRIBUTARIES

Ferocious Indians Prove Frightened—Party, Back at Ciudad Bolivar, Sails for Trinidad Tomorrow.

By Dr. HERBERT SPENCER DICKEY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CIUDAD BOLIVAR, Venezuela, Sept. 1.—Our expedition arrived here today haggard but happy after a trip of more than 2,000 miles by outboard motor to the headwaters of the Orinoco and back.

The Orinoco originates in at least three streams. On July 30 we reached a point on the main stream fifty miles higher than the previous attainment of white men, in Lat. 2 degrees 19 minutes 13 seconds N. and Long. 64 degrees 22 minutes 51 seconds W.

We found here a wall of gigantic boulder through which vestiges of the river ran in rivulets. We made a compass traverse of the previously unexplored main stream and of two unmapped important affluents and located two more hitherto unrecorded tributaries.

Ascending one of the former which enters the Orinoco from the southeast we found a region remarkable in fauna and flora. There were miniature ducks the size of quail, crimson morning glories as large as saucers and jet black parrots.

The Guaharibos Indians, notoriously ferocious, proved meek and frightened. They are not white but a saffron yellow naked folk living in the Stone Age and provided a unique collection of ethnological material.

We sail for Trinidad en route to New York on Wednesday.

Dr. Dickey and his party, on its leader's third attempt to reach the source of the Orinoco, had not been heard from since the end of June, when an amateur radio operator at Lima, Peru, was in communication with the expedition and a letter from the explorer, received here by Hawthorne Daniel of the American Museum of Natural History, described the unusual hardships encountered on the jungle river journey.

Dr. Dickey, accompanied by his wife and representatives of the American Indian Heye Foundation, for which he gathered material, sailed from New York on March 20 for Trinidad. The party was held up at Port of Spain when the river steamer on which it was to proceed suffered a broken paddle, and was further delayed at Ciudad Bolivar, 225 miles from the mouth of the river, by low water.

Leaving Ciudad Bolivar in a small sailing vessel early in June, the expedition reached San Fernando de Atabapo, two-thirds of the way up the river, on June 21. At that time Dr. Dickey was confident he would arrive at the headwaters by Aug. 15.

REPORTS VAST TRADE IN ILLEGAL NARCOTICS

Chief of League Board Indicates Traffic in 1929 Far Surpassed 640,000,000 Doses.

By CLARENCE K. STREIT.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, Sept. 1.—The world's illicit traffic in morphine, cocaine and heroin in 1929 far surpassed fourteen tons, which represents about 640,000,000 doses, according to estimates based on figures which L. Arthur Lyall, British chairman of the League of Nations Permanent Central Opium Board, gave to the press here today.

Mr. Lyall said the total internal and customs seizures of narcotics throughout the world represented probably less than 5 per cent of the illicit traffic. He said the 1929 customs seizures amounted to 321 pounds of morphine, 790 of cocaine and 264 of heroin, a total of 1,375 pounds.

If this represents a twentieth of the illicit traffic, then it totaled fourteen tons. Counting internal seizures, for which Mr. Lyall gave no figures, the total would far exceed fourteen tons.

The figures Mr. Lyall gave for 1929 concerning seizures of raw materials and less dangerous narcotics follow: Raw opium, 19,562 pounds; prepared opium, 748; raw cocaine, 81; Indian hemp, 4,846; hashish, 81,884, all but 3,295 pounds of the latter being seized in Egypt.

Mr. Lyall said all League machinery for curbing the narcotics traffic was doomed to failure unless public opinion in countries which are centres of the illicit trade is aroused to bring pressure on the governments there. Aside from energetic governmental action, he believes limitation of manufacture is the best means to check the traffic in narcotics.

HOLMAN SETS RECORD; PAGE IN FATAL CRASH

MARINE DIED SAVING CROWD

Page Sought to Avoid Hitting Throng as Motor Failed and His Plane Dived to Ground.

GLADYS O'DONNELL WINS

Women's Derby Victor Captures McCormick—Ben Howard's Home-Made Plane Takes Prize.

From a Staff Correspondent of The New York Times.

CURTISS-REYNOLDS AIRPORT, Chicago, Sept. 1.—Captain Arthur Page, marine entrant in the Thompson Trophy race, was fatally injured when he crashed today on the seventeenth lap of the 100-mile speed classic, the closing event of the National Air Races for 1930. He had been averaging 205 miles an hour and setting a terrific pace on the tiny five-mile triangular course.

He was rushed unconscious to the field hospital, where naval surgeons attended him, and then to Evanston General Hospital, where he died late tonight.

The race was won by C. W. (Speed) Holman of Minneapolis, who averaged 201.91 miles an hour in his Wasp-powered Laird that left the factory this morning. James Haizlip of St. Louis, in a Whirlwind Mystery-S Travelair was second, with an average of 199.80 miles an hour, and Ben O. Howard of St. Louis, in his Howard Special, was third, averaging 162.80.

Holman's time set a new record for the event.

Captain Page was flying a revamped machine, the same Curtiss-Hawk that had carried him to first place in the Curtiss-Marine event at Washington last May. However, its lower wing had been removed and a special Conqueror motor had been substituted for the old CX D-12, with its power almost doubled, and a wing radiator put on in place of the old frontal cooler.

The racers were sent off at 10-second intervals for safety, and Page was sent away first. Before he had flown a mile he was going more than three miles a minute, and for sixteen laps he held the speed that carried him past other contestants twice before he had flown twenty miles.

As he came down the stretch on the seventeenth lap his engine almost stopped. The heavy machine, deprived of its 800 horsepower, wavered, but still sped on at 180 miles an hour over the throng of 75,000.

Ahead of the flier was one end of the stands, and Captain Page saw no hope of landing there without crashing into the crowd. He swung around the home pylon and then deliberately turned his crippled machine downwind as if trying to come around again in the open field into the wind for a landing.

But he could not hold it. As the other racers whizzed past, the blue and gold marine racer hung unsteadily in the air for a tenth of a second, then settled swiftly. Directly across the field from the central stands it struck on the nose and left wing with an impact that raised the dust and dirt like a bursting shell.

Captain Page suffered concussion of the brain, a fractured jaw, a twice-broken leg and many lacerations. A blood transfusion failed to help him. His death brought the fatalities in the eleven-day tournament to four, the other casualties being Lieutenant J. P. De Shazo, Louis Weinert, a spectator killed when De Shazo crashed, and Captain George Fernic of New York. Twelve were injured during the races.

Captain Hawks Forced Down.

Captain Frank Hawks followed Captain Page into the air and for one lap flew close behind him. On his second lap he lost speed noticeably and came in to land at the end of the fourth round.

Captain Hawks said his motor temperature rose and cut revolutions down so fast that he knew something was wrong and landed to avoid trouble sure to come. It was the same engine with which he established his transcontinental record.

Ben Howard in his Howard Special was next off, then Haizlip, then Erret Williams in a Wedell Williams Special, then Holman and finally Paul Adams, flying a Travelair Speed Wing.

Williams dropped out in the eighth lap, the pace too swift for him.

With Page eliminated, the race settled down to a fight between Haizlip and Holman. Both men had fast ships and both men are finished race pilots and fighters. They jockeyed for place both vertically and horizontally on the all too short straightways and dove for the turns at tremendous speeds.

Holman's speed at times must have been four miles a minute with the Travelair right beside him and thus they fought it out for a hundred miles.

Howard's third prize of $2,000 brings his earnings to $5,750 for the meet, which is about what his machine cost.

Women's Race Thrills Crowds.

Although the crowd had come to see the Thompson Trophy race, it was perhaps as much thrilled by the women's free-for-all for a purse of $2,500 and the trophy donated by Mrs. Robert R. McCormick.

The winner of this race, a fifty-mile event, Mrs. Gladys O'Donnell, winner of the Women's Pacific Derby, gave a splendid exhibition of race flying in her taper-wing Whirlwind-powered Waco. She made the turns like a Doolittle and flattened out with the least possible loss of speed on the straightaways. Her average speed for the fifty miles was 149.00 miles an hour.

May Haizlip of St. Louis was second in a Warner-Cessna with 148 miles an hour and Mrs. Opal Kunz of New York was third in her Whirlwind-Travelair, with 145 miles an hour.

Miss Ruth Nichols of Rye, N. Y., flying a Chevrolaire-powered Laird, flew a fast race, but trying to avoid a crash with Phoebe Omlie of Memphis, cut a pylon and was disqualified.

With the exception of Mrs. O'Donnell none of the seven contestants was able to make the banks and turns that indicate good airmanship.

Mrs. Kunz flew a business-like race, taking her turns high and wide.

In addition to the trophy, the winner received a cash prize of $1,250.

Ben O. Howard of St. Louis added a fifth race to his string today in his home-made plane when he won the Shell Ohio division race at 155 miles an hour. Will Long of Kansas City, in a Warner-powered Cessna racer, and E. Z. Newsome of Little Rock, Ark., flying a Commandaire Cirrus-powered Rocket was third.

The only other race of the day was a contest for sportsmen-pilots with small open cockpit machines, won by A. Hardgrave of Kansas City, who made his twenty-five miles at an average speed of 119 miles an hour in his Warner-powered Inland Sport.

Captain Wilfred B. Moore of Kansas City tonight claimed to have broken the world's altitude record for a flight with one passenger. In the afternoon he went aloft and alighted an hour and a half later with his altimeter recording more than 28,000 feet.

If his barograph upholds this figure when it is officially tested he will be credited with a mark exceeding that of 24,672 feet, held in Germany, for the same type of flight.

Cash prizes and trophies valued at more than $75,000 were awarded the various winners early this evening at the close of the National Air Races.

It was announced that Alford J. Williams had won the Darber and Baldwin trophy for meritorious flying.

Attendance figures compiled up to Friday showed that an average of 37,150 persons were present daily. It was announced all expenses had been met and that today's crowd would make the balance sheets show a profit.

Set Parachute Jump and "Blind Flight" Records in Air Service.

Captain Arthur Hallett Page Jr. was commissioned a Second Lieutenant in the Marine Corps June 29, 1917, soon after he left the United States Naval Academy. He was appointed to the academy from Minnesota, his home State. He was detailed to the aviation section on May 29, 1926, with flying experience which began in 1918.

During his detail as a flier he has taken part in many aeronautical experiments. On Oct. 24, 1929, he was one of five officers who made a simultaneous parachute jump from a tri-motored transport plane above the Naval Air Station at Anacostia, D. C. Five days later he and eleven other officers established a multiple parachute jump record.

Captain Page finished second in the race for the Tenth Curtiss Marine Trophy on May 25 last, but was disqualified for cutting inside the pylon at the turns. His plane attained an average speed in that race of 151.30 miles an hour. In June he made a "blind flight" record, with a hop from Omaha to Washington, guiding a hooded-cockpit plane solely by radio and instruments.

Great secrecy was maintained regarding the details of the special Curtiss Seahawk monoplane, which was powered with a Curtiss Conqueror motor, said to be able to develop close to 600 horsepower, which he drove yesterday as the only Marine Corps entrant in the Thompson Trophy free-for-all race. The builders of the plane had hoped it would attain a speed of 300 miles an hour in the race.

Pilot Arrives on the Tuscania—Ship Delayed by Hurricane, Five Hurt.

Among the passengers who arrived yesterday on the Cunarder Tuscania was Harold (Bert) Hinkler, Australian flier who, in February, 1928, beat all records flying from Croydon, London, to Port Darwin, Australia, making the trip in a one-man plane in fifteen and one-half days.

Mr. Hinkler is making his first visit to this country, and will remain here a few weeks to study aviation conditions before continuing on his way to visit his mother in Bundaberg, Australia.

The Tuscania arrived eight hours late from Southampton and Havre, having been delayed by fog and a hurricane from the northeast on Thursday.

Five of the passengers were injured during the storm and were treated by the surgeon. Miss Laura May Lehman of Johnstown, N. Y., was thrown down the companionway and received a fracture of the left arm. The others received minor hurts.

According to the log the storm began at 10:06 P. M. and was at its height at 10:46, when the barometer dropped two-and-one-half-tenths in 20 minutes.

The captain put the ship around to head into the storm, which had been preceded by twenty-fours of heavy rain. By midnight the wind had moderated to a gale of about sixty-five miles, and further decreased by 2:30 A. M. Friday, when the Tuscania resumed her course at full speed.

SOVIET LAUNCHES DIRIGIBLE

First Ever Built in Russia to Be Used as Training Ship.

MOSCOW, Sept. 1 (AP).—The Soviet Government launched a new dirigible balloon here today, the first ever biult in Russia. Its completion was timed with preparations for receiving the Graf Zeppelin here soon.

The airship, which really is a blimp with a capacity of 2,500 cubic meters [88,285 cubic feet] cruised over Moscow to the astonishment of many thousands of the population who never before had seen a similar craft. It flew over the Kremlin and the headquarters of various government branches.

The new dirigible was built by the Students' Aerial Mechanical Institute and will be used not for military purposes but exclusively as a training ship.

Villagers Flee in Terror When Chichonal Belches Smoke.

PICHUCALCO, Chiapas, Mexico, Sept. 1 (AP).—Reports from the village of Ostuacan said tonight that Chichonal Volcano had begun to belch columns of smoke and steam, causing the villagers to flee in terror.

The volcano hitherto had been inactive as far back as the inhabitants could remember.

Wins State Fair Opening Air Race.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 1 (AP).—J. E. Thropp Jr. of Trenton, N. J., flying a Waco plane, won the Albany-Syracuse race marking the opening of the New York State Fair here today. Conrad C. Blom of Amsterdam, N. Y., who also flew a Waco, was second, and Charles Hoenes of Syracuse was third. Others entered were John J. Pindle, Bridgeport, N. Y., and George Wachtel, Cohoes, N. Y.

ARMY FLIER DROWNS IN CRASH OFF COAST

HIS COMPANION RESCUED

Taken Off Wreckage, Cut and Dazed by Fishing Launch—Accident Laid to Fog.

Special to The New York Times.

SANDY HOOK, N. J., Sept. 1.—Hundreds of promenaders at Highlands Beach saw an army plane plunge into the ocean at 7 o'clock tonight, a half mile off shore between Highland and Sandy Hook, carrying its pilot to death, and witnessed the rescue of the observer in the plane.

The pilot was Lieutenant William A. Harbold, 25 years old, of Lexington, Ky., attached to the army air station at Mitchel Field, L. I. The observer, Lieutenant Donald A. Baxter of Philadelphia, is in the hospital at Fort Hancock, suffering from shock and submersion.

Spectators of the crash thought the accident was due to the fog that hung over the ocean. They saw the ship speeding over the hills at Navesink, past the Navesink light, and then heard a loud crash as the hurtling craft hit the waves.

The screams of the women on the beach and along the Boardwalk brought out larger crowds and in a few moments the rocks lining the breakwater at Highlands were thick with spectators. Johnson Sandlass, a hotel proprietor, telephoned the Coast Guards at Sandy Hook and rescue parties prepared to shove off.

Edward Rossbach, 21 years old, of Highlands, and two companions managed to get a dory out through the breakers and started rowing to the spot where the plane had hit. Visibility was poor on account of the fog, but the people on shore could see that the plane was rapidly sinking.

Wrecked Plane Sinks.

Half-way out to the wreck Rossbach's dory capsized and its crew was thrown into the water. They immediate righted the craft, however, and resumed their race toward the plane. Just as they got to the spot the heavy weight of the motor carried the wrecked ship down.

At the same time a moss bunker fishing launch reached the scene and came upon Lieutenant Baxter. He was dazed and cut from the crash, but he was clinging to one of the plane's landing wheels, which kept afloat because of its inflated tire. He was hauled into the fishing boat.

Rossbach and one of his companions dived several times in an effort to get at the body of Lieutenant Harbold, but they were unable to locate it. The plane had splintered when it hit. Its wings had been ripped away and the water all around was strewn with wreckage.

Coast Guards soon reached the spot and more dories came out from Highland Beach to aid in the search, but by this time darkness had closed down and the work had to be carried on by the beams of searchlights. The efforts were kept up until 11 P. M. and then were abandoned until tomorrow morning.

Victim Strapped in Plane.

Lieutenant Baxter told the authorities that his flying mate was strapped into the pilot's seat and apparently was stunned by the crash and unable to free himself before the plane went down.

Neither Baxter nor Harbold was married. Harbold was a graduate of the army training school at Kelley Field in Texas and Baxter was graduated from Brooks Field. Both have been attached to Mitchel Field the past year.

The men left their home station in the Curtiss Falcon biplane two days ago on a service flight to Bolling Field, Wash., and left the capital at 4:15 this afternoon on the return flight. Coming up the Jersey coast they were wrapped in the fog and apparently were seeking a way out when the ship crashed.

TWO KILLED AT ELMA, N. Y.

Buffalo Pilot and Photographer Die in Plane Crash—Third Man Hurt.

BUFFALO, Sept. 1 (AP).—Two men were killed and a third seriously injured today in an airplane crash in the township of Elma, about twelve miles from Buffalo. The dead were Donald Aldred, pilot, of Buffalo, and Robert E. Bell, a photographer for the Buffalo General Electric Company.

Edward K. Aldred, 18, a brother of the pilot, is in a hospital seriously injured, but is likely to recover.

The trio left the airport in a rented biplane about noon for the reported purpose of taking pictures of property owned by Mr. Bell near Elma. The plane went into a spin and crashed. Bell was dead when witnesses reached the scene. Aldred lived until he reached a hospital.

CLUE FOUND IN OLD MURDER

Arrest Expected Soon in Slaying of Dorothy Kaufman in 1923.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Sept. 1.—New information reaching the sheriff's office today in connection with the murder on July 4, 1923, of Miss Dorothy Kaufman, Scarsdale governess, has caused county authorities to expect an arrest soon. Since the time of the killing the police have been searching for a Negro, who is believed to have stabbed the 23-year-old governess to death with a butcher knife.

It is said that word now has been received that the missing Negro was recently seen in Elmsford. A close watch is being kept there. Fingerprints obtained at the scene of the crime form the main part of the State's case.

THIEVES' LOOT FOUND HERE

Articles Stolen From Mount Vernon Apartments Traced—Man Seized.

The police of Mount Vernon recovered yesterday more than $1,000 worth of jewelry, clothing and other loot stolen from two apartments. It was found in New York, where Detective William McDonald had been working on the case for several days.

Most of the loot recovered was stolen by a dumb-waiter burglar from the apartment of Harold D. Toomey, a lawyer, of 514 Gramatan Avenue, Mount Vernon. The rest had been taken from the apartment of J. J. McCormack at 2 North Ninth Avenue, Mount Vernon.

One man is under arrest and the police are looking for a second.

PARAGUAYANS ALLEGE BOLIVIANS RAIDED FORT

La Paz Denies Attack by Troops, but Says Indians Destroyed Outpost on Frontier.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ASUNCION, Paraguay, Sept. 1.—The Ministry of War announced today that it had confirmed reports that a force of 100 Bolivians had attacked Fort Falcon on the Rio Verde on Aug. 22.

Fort Falcon is only an observation outpost with half a dozen soldiers. These are reported to have retired in the face of superior attacking forces.

President Guggiari called a special Cabinet meeting to consider the situation.

Despite the War Ministry's official statement, many are inclined to believe the attack probably was made by Indians instead of Bolivians, as the region around Fort Falcon is inhabited by several tribes of savage Indians.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LA PAZ, Sept. 1.—The General Staff of the Bolivian Army received this afternoon a report from the garrison on the Paraguayan frontier that the Paraguayan Fort Falcon near the Bolivian Fort Arce had been destroyed by savages belonging to the Indian tribe of Chulupias.

According to the report, Paraguayan soldiers had killed several Chulupias, and in revenge the Chulupias attacked and destroyed the Paraguayan fort.

Reports from Asuncion, Paraguay, that Bolivian troops had attacked and captured Fort Falcon were denied today by the Bolivian Foreign Office. Inquiries in military circles show no action was taken by Bolivian forces along the border.

FLIER'S WIDOW RELEASED.

Mrs. Morlote Leaves Havana After Spy Charge Is Dropped.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, Sept. 1.—Mrs. Martha Lane Morlote, widow of Lieutenant Morlote, who was held for forty-eight hours in the city jail at Marianao, a Havana suburb, on a charge of high treason, spying and attempting to sell to the United States and Colombia the secret code of the Military Flying Corps of the Cuban Army, was freed this morning by order of Judge Vianelle. She left soon afterward by airplane for Miami, en route to New York and the home of her father at Longmeadow, Mass.

After the declaration of Captain José Espino of the Army General Staff that revelation of the alleged secret code could not harm the country, Mrs. Morlote's release was ordered. Captain Espino said the document was nothing more than the code the aviation forces used in communication with land stations. Judge Vianelle said the accusation was greatly exaggerated.

Investigation by Secret Service men revealed that two civilians who backed the accusation were men with police records.

Private Marti, accused with Mrs. Marlote, has been placed at the disposal of army courts.

MIAMI, Fla., Sept. 1 (AP).—Allegations that she was held by Cuban authorities on false charges of high treason in order to curtail her pension from that government were made here tonight by Mrs. Martha Morlote, has been placed at the displane from Havana.

"I never knew a secret code existed in the Cuban Air Corps," she said.

She encountered difficulty in passing immigration authorities at the airport here when she was unable at first to identify herself as an American citizen.

UTILITY'S PROFITS RISE.

Pacific Gas and Electric Reports $721,084 Gain in Half Year.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 1.—A statement given out by the Pacific Gas and Electric Company today reports net earnings for the six months ended June 30 amounting to $6,530,432, after charges but before accrued dividends on common stock, equivalent to $1.60 a share on the average of 4,082,947 common shares outstanding during the first half of the year. As compared with the first six months of 1929, this shows an increase in net profit of $721,084.

During the first half of this year, the statement says, the company experienced a satisfactory increase in the volume of electricity sales, notwithstanding the lessened activity in many lines of business. Kilowatt hours of electricity sold increased 2.61 per cent during the six months.

Upwards of 6,000 conversion barners for the use of natural gas in furnaces previously burning other forms of fuel have already been installed, the company reports, and industrial gas contracts have been signed yielding an estimated annual revenue of approximately $1,500,000. Those classes of business represent additional outlets which would not have been available to artificial gas.

BOY, 18, BELIEVED SUICIDE.

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., Sept. 1.—One of the many endurance contests which recently swept the country had a tragic aftermath here today in what the police called the suicide of George Finn, 18 years old, of State Street. His clothes were found on the dock at the foot of Front Street and in the pocket of a sweater the police found a note which said:

"Dear George: I am tired of living and am going to take my life. Please forgive me. I forgive everybody. Please bury me in a coffin and put boxing gloves on my hands. Your pal, George."

The police say they believe the note was intended for George Oliceo of Wayne Street, who with the missing youth participated in a bicycle endurance contest around City Hall Park recently. The boys had pedaled 2,900 miles in 700 hours, but before they could break the record the contest ended in a quarrel.

The Finn boy had been disconsolate since and has been missing from home for a week. Staten Island Sound is being dragged for his body.

BALLOON RACERS OFF AT CLEVELAND

Six Teams Representing Four Nations Soar Away for the Gordon Bennett Cup.

SIX DRIFT TO THE EAST

Approach Pennsylvania-Ohio Line Near Lake Erie in Hazy Midnight Sky.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Sept. 1 (AP).—Six balloons, representing four nations, floated away from the Cleveland Airport into a leaden sky late today to compete for the Gordon Bennett Cup in the eighteenth renewal of the international classic.

Trace of their progress, obscured by a hazy night, the six balloons were believed floating a few miles west of the Ohio-Pennsylvania line, near or over Lake Erie at midnight tonight.

The last definite reports before the haze closed in 8:30 came from Geneva, where it was said three balloons were seen, floating eastward north of the city, which is four miles south of the lake.

These were believed to be the City of Detroit, City of Cleveland and the Belgian entry, Belgica. A little earlier the other three racers, Goodyear VIII, French Pierre Fishbach and German Barmen, were sighted over East Cleveland, about thirty-five miles from the starting point.

Two of the balloons were reported as seen by residents of Erie, Pa., heading out over Lake Erie around midnight, but identification was impossible because of the darkness.

The City of Detroit, the sixth entry and the first balloon to weigh off, struck an air current from the start that blew it due northeast toward Lake Erie in the direction of Toronto.

A crowd of from 50,000 to 100,000, some in the grand stand and others lining the spacious airport for miles around, watched the 80,000 cubic feet bags drift into the sky.

If the predictions of aerologists and the hopes of the pilots come true, forty-eight hours will elapse before the winner will be known, and the distances traveled may exceed 900 miles.

The City of Detroit, piloted by Edward J. Hill, with A. C. Schlosser as his aide, was reported in the lead early tonight. The balloon was sighted over Willoughby, Ohio, forty miles northeast of Cleveland Airport, at 7:10 P. M.

Drifting to the east over Cleveland housetops at about the same hour, but far in the rear of the Detroit balloon, was the Goodyear VIII, piloted by Ward T. Van Orman, last year's winner.

In the heavily laden basket borne by the Belgian balloon were Ernst de Muyter, consecutive yearly winner of the trophy from 1920 to 1924, and his aide, Leon Coeckelbaerg.

The Barmen, the German entry, was piloted by Dr. Hugo Kaulen Jr. of Elberfeld. Carl Goetze Jr. of Duesseldorf was flying with him as aide.

The crew of the French balloon comprised Albert Boitard of Paris, a war pilot, and Jean Herbe, also of Paris, his aide.

200,000 VIEW CHICAGO FIRE.

Loss on Pier Warehouse, Near Michigan Boulevard, to Be Millions.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—The most spectacular Chicago fire in years tonight swept the warehouses of the Goodrich Lines, the Commissary Department and the Criss Craft Speedboat Corporation, on Ogden Slip, near the Chicago River-Michigan Boulevard Bridge, endangering nearby structures.

Three fire boats augmented the land fighting machinery, but late this evening little progress was being made in bringing the flames under control, and it is thought the property damage will run into several millions of dollars.

Near-by buildings included The Chicago Tribune Tower, the Furniture Mart, one of the largest buildings in the world, and several hotels. Approximately 200,000 people watched the work of the firemen.

The new Lindbergh beacon atop the skyscraper Palmolive Building for a time sought to play its secondary light of 3,000,000 candle power on the crumbling structure in an effort to aid the firemen, but failed to penetrate the smoke pall that covered the city for miles around.

At Cicero, a suburb, thirty-five elevated railroad cars, with a total value of nearly $1,000,000, were destroyed by fire today.

ANNUAL WAGE PLAN PROPOSED BY GREEN

Such a System Needed for Seasonal Unemployment, A. F. of L. Chief Says.

PRESENT IDLENESS AN 'EVIL'

It Calls for Action by Industry and Government, He Asserts at Syracuse State Fair.

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 1.—A plan for an annual wage system for industrial workers was urged as one measure to meet unemployment conditions by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in an address at the State Fair here today.

Depressed conditions, with their menace of poverty for workers' families, emphasized the fact that America, for all its economic progress, had not solved the problem of forced idleness for labor caused by seasonal drops or the displacing of workers by machines, Mr. Green stated.

Asserting that this idleness was a "social evil," he said that guilt lay upon the nation's industrial and governmental heads until they acted to remedy basic conditions.

Edward W. Edwards of New York, member of the State Industrial Commission, accompanied Mr. Green here. They were met by Albert W. Sherman, vice president of the State Federation of Labor, and Chairman William Goff, secretary of the Syracuse General Trades Assembly, and other labor leaders. Mr. Green and Mr. Edwards were guests of a labor committee at a Labor Day luncheon.

Mr. Green's Address.

Mr. Green said in part:

It would be impossible for the people of the United States to participate in the celebration of Labor Day this year without giving special attention to the overshadowing problem of unemployment. For more than a year many people in practically every community have had the blighting hand of poverty laid upon them. Its origin and crushing weight can be directly traced to enforced idleness. This distressing situation attracts our attention to the problem of unemployment and to the necessity of finding and applying a remedy for this great social evil.

We observe a most distressing and contradictory condition in industry. Equipped with all the facilities for efficient and economic production, ready to produce in volume sufficient to meet all human needs and social requirements, industry is idle or partially idle simply because a consuming market, represented by millions of workers, cannot buy, absorb and use all the goods which industry produces.

Such a situation calls for balance and equilibrium; the application of a remedy which will cause to be set in motion the buying power of the masses of the people, who not only need but who are eager to buy all the goods which the market can supply.

There is no reason for the existence and continuation of such a false and unsound economic condition. The cause of such a state of affairs is directly traceable to human failure to seek and apply a remedy for unemployment. Employment in private industry can be stabilized through the application of scientific production and sales methods and through systematic planning over longer periods. This would require special consideration and application in overdeveloped industries which have not fully recovered from the effects of the World War.

The consuming requirements of industry are very great. Interruption in the consuming power of the people is immediately reflected in the reduced volume of goods sold. This in turn results in unemployment and economic confusion.

Steady Employment Essential.

Steady, continuous employment with an annual income for wage earners would overcome this condition. Workers would buy and use if they knew they would be guaranteed continuous employment with annual income. They would plan over the yearly period rather than the daily period. They would avail themselves of credit facilities, and thus their annual buying and consuming power would be exercised beyond their annual earning power. Here is where management can serve industry through the application of orderly planning of production over a yearly period. This can be done, because it is being done by some progressive employers. If some can do it, all can do it, exclusive of the purely seasonal industries.

In purely seasonal industries unemployment funds can be jointly created out of which workers can be paid weekly income during the forced period of seasonal unemployment. All of this can be supplemented by the application of scientific and systematic planning in the expenditure of public funds for building construction and for government improvements. The vast public undertakings of flood control, road building and construction enterprises in Federal, State and municipal governments can be initiated and launched when an advance survey of the drift of economic conditions indicates a recession and a reaction in private industry.

With all our vast resources to draw upon and with a will and determination to regularize and stabilize private industry so that a steady, fixed annual income can be guaranteed to workers, the problem of unemployment can be overcome. The continuation of this uneconomic state of affairs stands as a challenge to our ability and resourcefulness to grapple with and to successfully deal with problems which unremittingly call for a just and rational solution.

Workers Displaced by Machines.

There is another phase of employment which is just as tragic as any other form of unemployment. This character and form of unemployment are ever present and are becoming more and more acute. Through the development of mechanical processes, hand labor and individual workers have been displaced at a most rapid rate until it has become a serious social and economic question.

In 1920 there were 2,022,832 employed upon the railroads of the country. In 1930 this number has been reduced to 1,565,056. Here is a decrease of approximately half a million men within a ten-year period, but notwithstanding this reduction in the number of men employed the railroads are now handling a vastly increased tonnage and business. In manufacturing a million and a half less workers are now producing an amazing increase in manufactured products and commodities. Factories are producing more and our railroads are transporting more now than they did in 1920 with a million and a half more employes.

Through the introduction of power and machinery the producing capacity of the average wage earner increased 11 per cent in the twenty years from 1899 to 1919, but in the short space of ten years, from 1919 to 1929, half as long, it increased 53 per cent. This form of industrial progress and scientific industrial evolution, resulting in the displacement of thousands of workers, has destroyed craftsmanship, skilled trades and mechanical training.

Mechanical improvement, however, means greater human progress and the creation of enlarged opportunities for the enjoyment of leisure. The price paid for the substitution of mechanical processes for hand labor and human service has been and is very great.

Art, as represented by the musicians, is undergoing a tremendous change. The legitimate theatre is struggling for existence and in its stead we find the sound picture and mechanical music. We find ourselves unceasingly asking the question, What is to become of these artists, musicians and actors, with their artistic attainments? This presents a most serious problem. How are we going to meet it?

Permanent Solution Needed.

Those who dismiss this problem of technological unemployment by stating that some undefined influence operating in industry and in society will take care of the workers and the artists who are displaced manifest a lack of understanding of the seriousness of the problem as it now exists. No serious attempt has yet been made to deal with the problem of technological unemployment or to extend assistance through expert advice and information to those who are the victims of mechanical displacement. Only recently has the subject been discussed to any appreciable degree.

No one can foresee the development of a new industry, within the near or remote future, comparable to the automobile industry, which, during the last decade, called for the employment of hundreds of thousands of workers. This industry, with the airplane, radio and other industries, smaller and of less importance, has absorbed thousands of men who were displaced during the last two decades through the introduction of mechanical processes and the extension of the use of power.

But we cannot reason that because that development took place during the last two decades the same thing will happen during each additional two decades. The point of absorption will inevitably be reached while science, invention and human ingenuity will continue to find ways and means through which and by which machinery will displace working people.

While participating in the celebration of Labor Day the minds of the workers turn to a series of other problems in which labor is interested and which constantly command their best thought and attention. The question is repeatedly asked, What is society going to do about the policy of discrimination applied by the managers of many large industrial enterprises to the middle-aged worker? If the limit of human service is to be fixed at 40 or 45 years of age, then society must be prepared to face the problem which such a standard is bound to create.

This serious problem is but another phase of the unemployment and consuming question. If forced retirement is imposed upon workers twenty years in advance of assumed physical incapacity, then retirement annuities must be provided which would adequately meet such situations through the enactment of a practical and comprehensive plan of retirement legislation. I cannot believe that the people will willingly submit to such a situation. They will not permit industry to force middle-aged workers into retirement, with all the dire consequences which such retirement might mean to society. Only an aroused public opinion can supply the remedy for such an indefensible, uncivilized practice.

Old-Age Pensions Sought.

The objective sought in the consideration and enactment of old-age pension legislation is the care of those who are incapacitated because of age and infirmity. The widest opportunity to work, serve and earn a livelihood should be given to all individuals until they reach that age in life when it is impossible to continue their daily vocation. The American Federation of Labor has sought and is seeking the enactment of old-age pension and relief legislation to care for the aged and the infirm worker as one of its chief aims and purposes.

The question of leisure through the adoption of the five-day week and a progressive reduction in the hours of labor is of supreme importance to the working people of the United States. They have found that in theory and practice the enjoyment of increasing leisure makes for efficiency, increased productivity and a corresponding reduction in the cost of manufactured products. The acceptance and application of the principle of leisure and recreation in industry will be constantly sought by the workers through their respective organizations.

But over all and above all, transcending all other questions in social and material importance, is the development of the cultural and spiritual life of the masses of the people. No set policy for the relief of unemployment, for the promotion of social justice or for the expansion of the enjoyment of leisure would be worth while unless it emphasized the importance of intangible human values and sought, as a glorious achievement, the promotion and advancement of those things which are spiritual and eternal.

WALSH CONDEMNS MERGERS

Tells Rhode Islanders Certain Types Are "Economic Crimes."

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 1 (AP).—"Economic crimes" of recent years have contributed to the "terrible conditions existing today," Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts declared in an address at the Labor Day rally of the Rhode Island State branch of the American Federation of Labor, held at Crescent Park, near here, today.

Senator Walsh criticized public officials for making a campaign issue of prosperity when "that prosperity was empty, a fake, based on unsound policies." Consolidations which are founded on a desire to cut costs of handling and selling and lessen overhead were declared by the speaker to be a "crime against industry."

"The indifference of public officials has allowed stealing and robbery to go on unchecked, and has been largely responsible for this economic collapse," he asserted. "We must have more government supervision if we are to preserve a steady condition of employment."

4,000 REDS CHEER AND BOO IN UNION SQ.

55 POLICEMEN ON GUARD

Leaders of Labor Day Rally Score Socialism, Capitalism and Tammany —Cable Greetings to Moscow.

Communist adherents and sympathizers estimated by the police at 4,000 and by themselves at 30,000 held an orderly mass demonstration at noon yesterday a. the north end of Union Square. They denounced the wealthy, booed Tammany Hall and the Socialists, cheered Communist leaders dead and alive, passed set resolutions by acclamation and then dispersed.

Fifty-five policemen, ten of them mounted, who kept guard under Deputy Chief Inspector James S. Bolan, had little to do. Cheering and songs constituted the greater part of the Labor Day manifestation. There were no arrests or disorders at the square itself, but just before the meeting began four Communists were arrested and charged with parading without a permit when they refused to break up a march from Manhattan Lyceum, 66 East Fourth Street, to the square.

Songs Interrupt Speakers.

The Labor Day outpouring of the Communists was apparently a field day for the more vocal and athletic elements of the party. While twenty-five or thirty orators spoke from seven platforms during the hour and forty-five minutes the meeting endured, great sections of the crowd devoted their efforts to singing and responding to the college type of cheer leader egging them on to denunciation of capitalism in general and the American Federation of Labor, the Socialist party, Mayor Walker and Tammany Hall in particular. A general good nature permeated the crowd which communicated itself to the police guard.

Placards and banners in profusion, carrying the familiar Communist "Down With" or "Long Live" slogans, dotted the crowd. Very few seemed to listen to the speakers, almost all being intent upon making an impression upon the photographers and the reporters.

J. Louis Engdahl, secretary of the International Labor Defense, and Sam Darcy, his assistant, were the principal speakers. Mr. Engdahl invited the poor and unemployed to take the houses away from the rich living on Fifth Avenue, Park Avenue and Riverside Drive.

"They give us municipal lodging houses," he shouted. "Do you want them?"

"No," responded the crowd.

"Well, then," came Mr. Engdahl's shouted reply, "let us go up Fifth Avenue and take their houses away from them. Let us go up Riverside Drive and take their houses away from them. Let us go up Park Avenue and take their houses away from them."

No one, apparently, cared to act upon the suggestion.

When the speakers wearied of reiterating their denunciation of things as they are and of institutions in power they resorted to calling for cheers or boos, as the case might be. There were boos for William Green, president of the "American Fakeration of Labor," at Mr. Engdahl's behest, and cheers for Karl Marx and Nicolai Lenin.

Young Pioneers Demonstrate.

Young Pioneers sang "The International" and "The Red Flag." The children wore red, white and blue middies and khaki. Youthful Porto Ricans, Filipinos, Chinese and Negroes mixed with the white children and behaved in schoolboy style.

The keynote of the meeting was "fight or starve."

By acclamation it was voted to send the following cablegram to the Fifth World Congress, Red International of Labor Unions, now in session in Moscow:

"Thirty thousand workers demonstrating Union Square jobless day, Sept. 1, send fighting greetings to Fifth World Congress. Pledges struggles against imperialist war and defense of Soviet Union, as part of struggle against unemployment, speed-up, wage cuts, for the seven-hour, five-day week and for unemployment insurance. Condemns class peace policy and Fascist leadership of American Federation of Labor and Amsterdam International. Hails Red International of Labor Unions on tenth anniversary as leader of world's revolutionary trade union movement. Long live the solidarity of the world's workers."

The cablegram was signed by J. W. Johnstone, executive secretary of the Trade Union Unity League, which arranged the meeting. The Communists were unable to explain how they estimated the crowd, which failed to fill the north end of the square, at 30,000.

After the meeting several hundred persons assembled on the sidewalks in front of Communist headquarters at 28 Union Square East and remained there for several hours. No effort was made by the police to disperse this gathering.

The four arrested parading before the meeting started were David Dorenz, 20 years old, of 434 East Fifty-ninth Street; William B. Robinson, 40, a Negro, of 17 West 133d Street; Philip Olchowi, 34, of 227 East Fourth Street, and Caetano Riggo, 36, of 25 South Street. They were all taken to Night Court, charged with disorderly conduct, but all were freed by Magistrate Weil on their counsel's plea that they had assembled peacefully.

URGES CUT IN WORK WEEK.

Pressmen's Official, in Arkansas, Says It Would Aid Employment.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Sept. 1 (AP).—A shortened working week and legislation to prevent competition in labor between children and able-bodied men were urged as a solution to business depression in a Labor Day address here today by George L. Berry, president of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants of North America.

Mr. Berry laid prevailing business conditions to the invention of labor-saving devices, the "extraordinary ingenuity in financing business," which has "created a complex economic situation," and the "post-war arrogance of American business, which has reduced export trade."

"The finishing insult to world trade," he said, "came in the adoption of the Hawley-Smoot tariff measure.

"I think a most dangerous development is taking place nearly every day. It is dangerous in that the minds of people are being inoculated with the claim that prosperity is just around the corner. This is not true."

LABOR GROUP MAPS JOBLESS INSURANCE

Brookwood Discusses Federal Fund of $100,000,000 to Refund Third of Cost to States.

PUTS BURDEN ON INDUSTRY

Employers to Pay All Premiums to Protect Their Workers—Would Form State Bureau to Handle It.

From a Staff Correspondent of The New York Times.

KATONAH, N. Y., Sept. 1.—Two bills embodying provisions for State and Federal unemployment insurance, drawn up by the Conference For Progressive Labor Action, were made public today for discussion at a week-end meeting at Brookwood Labor College. The Federal bill called for a governmental appropriation of $100,000,000, which would be used as a subsidy to return one-third of the insurance expense to States adopting similar legislation.

Under the provisions of the proposed State bill, unemployment insurance would be a charge on industry similar to workmen's compensation. The payments into the fund would be made solely by the employer.

Contributions to the fund would be graduated so that industrial establishments having a high rate of unemployment would be compelled to pay a higher premium than those whose unemployment rate was lower. It was explained that this provision was intended as an incentive to encourage the stabilization of industries.

The unemployed worker would receive 40 per cent of his prevailing weekly wage, with 10 per cent additional if he were married and 5 per cent additional for each of his children, but the maximum would be 60 per cent of his prevailing wage.

Unemployment insurance would be paid twenty-six weeks a year. A worker employed a short time and receiving less than 40 per cent of the prevailing wage would get the difference between his curtailed wage and 40 per cent of his prevailing wage. In no case would he receive more than if he were unemployed twenty-six weeks.

Eligibility for sharing in the fund would be based on employment in the State and payment by the employer into the fund for fifty-two weeks.

Workers who enjoyed the unemployment benefits under this plan would have the right to refuse employment where a strike might be in progress or where they would be asked to work for less than the prevailing wage. The waiting period before payment of benefits would be one week.

A bureau of the State Department of Labor and an advisory board of five members, two each from labor and employers and one representing the public, would administer the State fund.

The Federal bill to subsidize one-third of the expense of the State funds would place the administration of the appropriation in the United States Department of Labor.

The discussion was concerned with details of the working out of the proposed bills, possibility of evasion by employers and methods of penalizing industries which failed to stabilize employment.

Abraham Epstein, secretary of the American Association for Old Age Security, approved modeling the proposed measures on the principle which led to the adoption of the workmen's compensation laws.

In concluding the discussion on this phase of the meeting, A. J. Muste, chairman, announced that the proposed bills would be sent back to bill-drafting experts and made available later to those trade unions and progressive groups which would be interested in offering them to Legislatures for enactment.

Francis Gorman, vice president of the United Textile Workers, in a letter read at the meeting, reported that there were indications that the textile field in North Carolina might again be the scene of an industrial struggle. His reference was to conditions in Leaksville, N. C., where the United Textile Workers were protesting a wage cut scheduled to go into effect today.

INDIAN PEACE TALKS HALT.

Complete Breakdown of Move Is Feared After Allahabad Failure.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ALLAHABAD, India, Sept. 1.—The conversations of Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru and Mr. Jayakar with the imprisoned Nationalist leaders, the Pandits Nehru, have ended in failure, and it is feared the whole India peace movement set in motion by the Viceroy, Lord Irwin, in July has broken down. It is authoritatively stated here that the talks between the Moderates and the Pandits Motilal and Jawaharlal Nehru were unsatisfactory. Sir Tej left for Poona this morning with a letter to Mahatma Gandhi announcing the breakdown of the negotiations. He will sail Sept. 20 for the round-table conference in London, and will be followed by Mr. Jayakar a fortnight later.

It is expected that the correspondence of the six weeks' negotiations will be released Wednesday or Thursday after the mediators have had a final meeting with Mr. Gandhi in Yerovda prison at Poona. Already there are signs that both sides will soon be busy fixing the blame for the failure.

The Nationalists now say the Pandits Nehru were able to disclose details of the conversations to the Congress organization, despite the mediators' secrecy.

KILLED BY AUTO CRASH.

Rouses Point Man Fatally Injured in Collision With Newark Car.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., Sept. 1 (AP).—His automobile caught broadside by another as he drove out of a filling station roadway near here today, George E. Burris Jr. of Rouses Point, was fatally injured as the machine was hurtled into Lake Champlain, and his father and his 3-year-old daughter Bernice were critically hurt. The car landed in shallow water.

James J. Moore of Newark, N. J., was the driver of the automobile that struck Burris's machine.

15 Errant Army Mules Munch Grass on Newport Golf Links

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 1.—About fifteen army mules got away from Fort Adams this morning and decided immediately to take up golf. After ambling out of the government reservation, the mules, attracted by the bright green links of the Newport Country Club just across the road, nosed a way through the stone wall.

They were having a grand time munching the grass in the rough about the eleventh, seventeenth and eighteenth holes when they were discovered. As none of the animals trod upon any of the greens, the damage that they did was not extensive.

But if the green had not been spared, the annual Count di Turin Cup tournament could not have been completed this afternoon.

NEW HEAD IS NAMED FOR BANK OF SPAIN

Institution Had Refused to Work With Government—Son of Primo Rivera Attacked.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MADRID, Sept. 1.—Minister of Finance Wais verified tonight that the Subsecretary of Finance, Señor Bas, had been named governor of the Bank of Spain in place of Count Gamazo, who has resigned.

The Bank of Spain had refused to cooperate with the government as law demands, and the naming of Señor Bas is regarded as making cooperation in the government's schemes more likely. Numerous other minor changes in personnel have been made, evidently to place adherents of the government's policies.

Shouting "Death to the King!" and "Long live the republic!" a crowd in Corunna today attacked a son of the late General Primo de Rivera and two of the dictator's Ministers. The police forces used their swords in breaking up the mob.

In Don Rodrigo near Ciudad Real police fired into a crowd when violent rioting and shooting at the police followed their refusal to allow a bull fight in the public square instead of the arena. The official list put the wounded at four, although it is believed more were probably hurt.

While the Cordoba strike ended today and Spain as a whole was quiet, these affairs are significant. The United Republicans have organized every hamlet in Spain and are trying to enlist the cooperation of the Union of General Workers and the Socialist Union, one of the three leading Socialist leaders, Señor Besteiro, today pledging his aid.

REICH FASCIST CONVICTED.

Dr. Paul Goebbels Faces 6 Weeks in Prison for Libel in His Paper.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 1.—Dr. Paul Goebbels, National Socialist member of the Reichstag and leader of the Berlin Hitlerites, was sentenced to six weeks in prison today for three instances of libelous statements in his Fascist newspaper, in which Dr. Bernhard Weiss, Assistant Police Commissioner, was accused of using his office for political purposes.

Since the dissolution of the Reichstag Herr Goebbels has been without immunity and he has been answering charges of slander and libel almost daily, many of the charges having resulted in fines up to $250. Recently he faced a charge of having insulted President von Hindenburg but was acquitted when the President let it be known he had no interest in seeing a judgment given because he was convinced Herr Goebbels meant no harm but was merely conducting a political campaign.

His newspaper, the Attack, is one of the most violent inciters in the whole list of radical papers. Many cases for which Herr Goebbels is now answering go back to 1928 and earlier but nothing could be done until his immunity expired. He made no defense today but it is expected he will appeal the sentences.

WANTS PILSUDSKI ON TICKET

Polish Government Party Asks Him to Be Sejm Candidate.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WARSAW, Sept. 1.—Marshal Pilsudski, the Premier, has been asked by the government party's electoral caucus to allow it to place his name on the party's list in the coming Sejm election.

The Speaker of the Sejm, M. Daszynski, is certain to head the anti-Piluduski Democratic bloc, while the former Sejm and Senate marshal, M. Trampczynski, will be the first candidate of the Nationalist party.

Two former Premiers, M. Slawek and M. Switalski, together with Prince Januszi Radziwill, organized the campaign for a Pilsudski bloc.

At the bedside of the Sejm's Deputy Speaker and present leader, M .Dabski, attacked on Friday by officers, the decision was taken that the common ticket of the left and centre groups be called the Democratic bloc.

Five Communist Deputies were arrested immediately after Parliament's dissolution since their immunity had expired and others fled as soon as they heard Parliament had been dissolved.

DESTROYER HITS LAUNCH.

Four on Small Craft Are Hurt in Crash in the East River.

The thirty-five foot motor launch Mary Ellis, owned by Dr. Marshall E. Ross, a Negro physician of 70 West 128th Street, and carrying a party of twenty Negro friends of the owner, was struck by the stern of the destroyer Bainbridge in the East River off the Brooklyn Navy Yard late yesterday afternoon. The launch was slightly damaged and four of her passengers were bruised and shaken.

The launch was drifting helplessly with her motor dead as the Bainbridge, escorted by the naval tug Vigilant, put out to sea. The destroyer made her way about the craft but was caught by the tide and her stern swung into the launch, demolishing part of the bow rail. The Bainbridge continued to sea after signaling the Navy Yard to send help, but other boatmen who had seen the mishap quickly went to the assistance of those aboard the launch.

MORRISON STRESSES NEW LABOR TRENDS

In Baltimore Address, A F of L. Secretary Notes Changed Conditions to Be Met.

AFFECT SALARIED WORKER

Mergers and Results of Depression Force Unified Economic Program, He Asserts.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 1.—Warning that the effects of the economic depression called for a constructive unity of action by business and industry, organized labor and the unorganized and salaried workers of the country was given in an address here tonight by Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor.

Mr. Morrison stressed the sociological changes taking place in the country, both from new business concepts such as led to mergers, chain-store systems and mass production, and from the effects of the depression. Mergers, he noted, forced upon salaried, "white collar" workers the same problem of displacement that the use of machinery forced on manual labor.

He spoke at a Labor Day celebration under the auspices of the Baltimore Federation of Labor, the address being broadcast over a nation-wide radio network.

Establishment of Labor Day.

Mr. Morrison, after discussing the establishment of Labor Day, suggested by Peter J. McGuire, a union carpenter, in 1882, adopted by the American Federation of Labor in 1884 and since made a holiday by action of Congress and the States, turned to social and economic changes brought about by and affecting organized labor in this country.

"We are at the beginning of a new era because of mergers, combines, labor-displacing machinery and centralized banking that controls credit," he said. "These combines have the same effect on so-called 'white collar' workers and supervisors of all grades as the labor-displacing machine has on workers.

"The same forces are operating in retail business, where chain stores are placing the small store owner, his clerks and other employes on the street.

"More unemployment is the result of general labor displacement. This means additional non-consumers. mergers and automatic machinery throw additional goods on the market, which cannot be purchased because unemployed cannot buy.

"The reason for the present business depression is evident. Former depressions were sectional, but in this instance the farmer is subject to the same forces that confront urban citizens.

"Seventy-five years ago three-fourths of the people lived on the farms, but opposite figures, in the very near future, are being discussed by observers who note the mechanization of farms, the displacement of labor and the movement of farm owners to the cities to compete with job-seeking wage earners.

"These changed conditions have brought new viewpoints, and people no longer claim that a displaced worker can secure employment in another industry or calling. It is now realized that the forces that displaced such worker are operative everywhere and that no industry is escaping the general tendency toward mergers and mechanization.

Labor's Principal Demands.

"This summary of present-day conditions and tendencies that are indicative of profound changes in our social and economic life is an additional reason why labor's demand for shorter hours, higher wages, abolition of child labor, old-age pensions and other demands should be approved."

On the subject of old-age pensions Mr. Morrison said:

"The mergers and combines, the mechanization of industry, the abolition of farm life and the chain stores system have no place for the men over 40 and 45 years. Their lives, in many instances, are hopeless. They become a charge on society through the poorhouse system, which government reports show are a failure because of excessive upkeep, or through charity organiaztions or welfare societies.

"To call an old-age pension an incentive to pauperization and an additional burden to society, while ignoring the tremendous wastes and humiliating failures of our poorhouse system and our institutionalized charities is a reflection on our reasoning abilities and even on our boasted tendency to reckon values from a materialistic standpoint. * * * I venture the opinion that an old-age pension system in this country is inevitable."

Mr. Morrison took up in the same manner the specific labor point of view toward the five-day week and shorter work day, which he believed would be put into force generally as industrial production was balanced to consumption.

As to organized labor's demand that wage standards be maintained he said:

"This Labor Day is marked by another unusual situation. It is the first time that a business depression is not featured by charges that wages are 'too high.' Labor's long effort for the people to realize the value of high wages and the disastrous effect that low wages have on industry is finally accepted."

He concluded with a summarization of the gain made by organized labor in the past year. Among these he numbered the Supreme Court ruling against the "yellow dog" contract in the case of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen versus the Texas & New Orleans Railroad; progress toward laws barring the use of injunctions in labor disputes; the five and a half year agreement in the anthracite mining field, and advances in the unionization of industry in the South.

BRITISH UNIONS COOL TO SPEECH BY CHIEF

Radicals Denounce His Rejection of Slogan "Socialism in Our Time" and His Praise of MacDonald.

By CHARLES A. SELDEN.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

NOTTINGHAM, England, Sept. 1.—An uproar from Left Wingers followed a remarkable speech by President John Beard today at the opening of the British Trade Union Congress here, in which he asserted there was "no present substitute for capitalism."

Mr. Beard's speech questioned not only the Left Wing's slogan of "Socialism in our time," but also the usefulness of 100 per cent free trade in present-day Britain.

Shouts of "Shame!" arose from the hall when he said he was not appalled by the present unemployment figures in Great Britain, and only twenty of the hundreds of delegates applauded when he defended Premier MacDonald against the Labor party Left Wing.

There was another demonstration against Mr. Beard when J. W. Banfield of the Operative Bakers and Confectioners' Union proposed a vote of thanks for Mr. Beard's speech, which he admitted would not give satisfaction to every one.

Calls View on Jobless a Disgrace.

"I want to protest," one member said, "against the president's statement that 2,000,000 unemployed does not appall him. It is a disgrace."

On behalf of England's 4,000,000 trade unionists Mr. Beard said they were not committed either to free trade or protection, but that he sought the most practical means of establishing better economic relations with other countries, and he expressed hope that progress would be made in that direction at the forthcoming Imperial Conference.

President Beard attributed unemployment in England chiefly to the world's failure to absorb goods produced under the capitalistic system. But he was quick to disclaim any desire to get rid of capitalism and assured the delegates that the Labor Government was not based on any expectation of "socialism in our time."

"We might, of course, end capitalist production," said Mr. Beard, "and if glib talk would do it, it would end in a year or two, but I am not certain there is any kind of organization capable of working the change without tremendous dislocation of the social and economic life of the nation.

"I make the statement advisedly in reply to those who desire to be serious in regard to socialism in our time. They have not given consideration to the change of mind that must take place among the people before it is possible for the dream of William Morris to come true. As I interpret the dream, it means that every man and woman shall not merely have the good things of life, but all the pain and trouble which are still the lot of humanity; that each must put in the common store more than he takes out, that all take a turn at the unpleasant jobs which still have to be done for the common good, working in mines and sewers, emptying dust bins, and that women take their turn washing and scrubbing floors.

"Can socialism based on the principle of sharing all these things come in our time? Is there any evidence of desire for it, even in the Labor movement? I want to say emphatically, there is not."

The task of the Labor movement, Mr. Beard explained allegorically, is to build a new road for progress without obstructing the traffic on the old road, and he denounced as obstructors the radical Left Wing members of the Labor party in the House of Commons, who were continually nagging at and embarrassing the government at the last session of Parliament.

Expresses Faith in MacDonald.

"For myself," the president added, "I still fully trust the Labor Government, and in these times of tense danger stand by the captain—James Ramsay MacDonald."

Concerning the Imperial Conference coming next month and future fiscal policy, the president of the trade unionists gave the following cue for their congress deliberations:

"We have expressed the opinion that if the British Commonwealth could be organized as an economic unit there would be a gratifying reaction on the unemployment situation. We do not say it is possible to establish these closer links with the dominions. That must, obviously, depend on them as well as us. What we do say is that the matter should be explored in consultation with those overseas communities.

"Let us keep the ideals we always have held, but let us be realistic with regard to the actual world situation. I do not think there is the slightest likelihood the trade union movement ever will adopt a policy of all-round protection. On the other hand, I do not think the trade union movement ties itself or ever will be itself any rigid doctrinaire for the free trade theory.

"Those who look upon the issue of free trade and protection as a matter of vital principle are bad economists and bad specialists. It is as foolish to make a fetish of free trade as it is to maintain that tariffs will cure all our industrial ills.

Points Out Link in Principle.

"Our union is formed to prevent so-called free trade in labor. As trade unionists and Socialists we believe in interference with so-called 'immutable economic laws.' There is nothing new or strange in our refusal to tie ourselves down to an extreme form of free trade dogma. But that does not mean we have declared in favor of a tariff policy.

"The opposite of free trade is not tariffs, but regulated trade. There are many ways of regulating trade and therefore many methods of establishing economic links with other countries."

Reversing the old attitude of organized labor against industrial combinations, Mr. Beard said amalgamation was a force that could not be resisted because, "whether we like it or not, nobody can set up a claim to spend more time on a job than is required nor justify making goods not wanted.

"But we must face this problem and not leave new inventions which reduce the necessity of man-labor to the sole control of employers. As workers we have as much right to live as they have; also a right to share in the results of increased production from new machinery or better organization of industry.

"I want to suggest workmen should be assured of annual incomes so that when there is a sufficiency of goods for use or sale the remaining time should belong to the worker for use within law and reason as he saw fit. This use could be safely attached to payment by results. Workmen should have their holidays, the same as managing directors, professional men and school teachers. Under such a system workmen could give a machine full play and invite the inventor to go on inventing until he knocked every scrap of toil out of every job. Such a method might upset the labor market, but it ought to be upset as something discreditable to civilization. It would limit the liberty of the individual, but that ought to be limited whenever it is found in the interest of the nation to do so."

Stylists Predict Return of Women's "Bob;" "Beauticians" Plan Instruction in "Charm"

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1. — The "bob" is coming back, and will be more popular than ever as American women increasingly refuse to graft 1830 modes of hair dressing upon their 1930 personalities, according to the prediction of J. R. Hirschfield and other stylists who arrived here today from all parts of the country for the annual convention of the National Hairdressers' and Cosmetologists' Association.

Instead of looking backward for inspiration, the "beauticians" in session here are exploring the possibilities of the newest and most progressive methods by which to develop the personality and individual charm of the modern woman.

Hair, they say, should be and will be worn long or short, straight or curly, according to the client's "type." But they predict a complete revolt from any but a temporary reversion to the fashions of bygone days.

In fact, the delegates were discussing extension of their functions to include lessons in personality cultivation, and the prospects are that hereafter a charm instructor may be found occupying a booth beside that of the permanent wave operator, masseuse and manicurist.

"As the American woman visits the beauty parlor to become beautiful," H. L. Franklin of Cleveland, managing director of the organization, said to the assembled delegates, "where else should she go to acquire her correct poise and the more subtle forms of feminine charm if not to this same agency?"

This question, and the problem of styles in hair dressing for the coming season, will be decided during the discussions of the next two days and announced at the Thursday night session.

More than 1,000 members of the association, representing 3,000 beauty shops in every part of the country and all the Eastern and Southern States, and including fifteen delegates from New York City, registered today and executive meetings opened the week's sessions.

BROOKHART SCORES CAPITAL

Tells Chicago Labor Gathering It Dodges Depression Burdens.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—More than 35,000 persons attended the Labor Day celebration at Soldiers' Field today. A thousand children participated in a field and track meet.

Senator Smith W. Brookhart, Republican Farmer-Labor leader of Iowa, was an unexpected guest at the celebration. Called to the speakers' stand, he said:

"In times of depression capital to preserve itself puts the burden upon labor by discharging men and cutting payrolls. But capital is not so important as humanity. Some method must be worked out by which the laborer must be preserved in his job. It is not so important to preserve capital, which is merely accumulated wealth."

Agricultural troubles are the nation's chief ones, he said. The farmer's income now is $700 a year, he said, which destroys his potentiality as a buyer.

1,000 STRIKERS PARADE.

Children's Dressmakers Stage Mass Picketing Demonstration.

One thousand striking children's dressmakers participated in a mass picketing demonstration yesterday in the garment zone. The strikers, chiefly women, paraded through the streets bounded by Fifth and Eighth Avenue and Thirty-fifth and Thirty-eighth Streets. Extra police were in the district but there were no disorders.

Following the demonstration, which lasted from 7:30 to 9:30 A. M., the strikers were dispersed to resume their picketing activities this morning.

Harry Greenberg, strike leader, declared yesterday that individual settlements with independent manufacturers would begin today, despite the fact that no understanding has yet been reached with the group of employers organized in the Infants', Children's and Junior Dress Association.

Mr. Greenberg declared that David Dubinsky, secretary-treasurer of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, would have an important announcement today concerning the union's future dealings with the association. Independent settlements will be made beginning today with raincoat manufacturers who are opposing the wage-cut policy of an organized group of manufacturers, against whom a strike of 1,200 raincoat makers is now in progress.

Taxicab Driver of New York Is Mortally Hurt When Machine Skids in Peekskill.

Five persons were killed and many others injured in automobile accidents in and near the city yesterday as roads throughout the metropolitan area were congested with the holiday traffic. In one crash at Hammonton, N. J., a man and wife and their year-old daughter were killed by a railroad train.

Luria struck the lad and the car plunged up on the sidewalk, knocking down four other persons. No one was seriously hurt, however.

An unidentified man about 40 years old was killed last night by an interurban bus which struck him as he was crossing Amsterdam Avenue just south of Ninety-sixth Street. Robert Gould of the Hotel Martinique, driver of the bus, was held on a technical charge of homicide.

DAVIS LAUDS SLUMP ACTION.

Tells Pennsylvania Labor Day Hearers How Cooperation Helped.

CLEARFIELD, Pa., Sept. 1 (AP).—The present depression is the first business slackness in the United States in which it was deliberately sought to offset its effects by keeping workers as fully employed as possible and without the old-time policy of general reduction of wages, James J. Davis, Secretary of Labor, said today at the Labor Day celebration at the Clearfield County fair and homecoming.

"On this Labor Day," he said, "we may congratulate ourselves because of the spirit of cooperation that generally prevails between American employers and workers during one of the trying times in our economic history.

"The old sweeping layoffs and wage slashes have not been resorted to in this period of depression.

"The leading employers and the leaders of labor called into conference by President Hoover agreed to maintain employment and to institute no new wage demands. It was a mighty effort at stabilization and while it did not stave off some measure of the depression, it did prevent the country from hitting the bottom, as in every instance before.

"No man has faced down more discouraging circumstances than those confronting the President," said the Secretary. "In the long run the very difficulties he has had to face will win him the support of the country."

Wife Held for Shooting Man.

TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 1.—John Peters, 65 years old, of 236 Dickenson Street, was shot in the abdomen tonight following what the police said was an all-day drinking bout which culminated in a fight with his wife, Ann, 65. The police arrested Mrs. Peters on a charge of attempted murder. Peters was removed to the McKinley Hospital where the bullet was extracted. His condition was reported critical.

SEES SHORTER HOURS AND FEWER WORK DAYS

Joseph Ryan, Labor Council Head, Says Attitude of Employers Is Changing.

Labor's demand for shorter hours of work each day and fewer days a week ultimately will win the support of employers, just as has workmen's compensation, said Joseph Ryan, president of the Central Trades and Labor Council of Greater New York and vicinity, in a Labor Day address broadcast last night from WNYC, the municipal radio station.

Mr. Ryan made this prediction in commenting on the changing attitude of employers toward labor in recent years.

"The employers' liability legislation," he recalled, "was at first opposed by the employers on the ground that it would impose such a tax on their industries that they would have to move away. But after they had had practical experience of its operation they saw that we were right. I predict the same result after they have had experience with the shorter day and the shorter week, for they will increase home consumption and so stimulate industry.

"Labor must receive high wages for its hours, no matter how short, and its days, no matter how few. These wages then will be spent by the workers on products to be enjoyed in their leisure hours."

Mr. Ryan urged also the establishment of unemployment and old age insurance systems and expressed his gratification at Governor Roosevelt's expressed attitude on these problems. He advocated also the prohibition of the use of the injunction in labor cases without trial by jury.

"The unemployment problem and the present business depression must be considered by representatives of all the units of our social system," Mr. Ryan went on. "Unemployment insurance must be urged, not as a charity, but as a right due 'the worker from industry.'"

The union chief strongly assailed communism and other so-called radical movements, particularly when they tried to bore into the labor organizations "in the hope of using the mantle of labor for their own purposes." He expressed pleasure at the rejection recently by the New York State Federation of Labor of a suggestion for the formation of a labor party.

Mr. Ryan condemned A. J. Muste, president of Brookwood Labor College and vice president of the American Federation of Teachers, who assailed the American Federation of Labor at the State Federation's convention last week.

As to the implication that unions were the tool of racketeers, Mr Ryan said:

"If there are evil practices in any local union they can be cleaned up just as they have been in the past."

HOWARD ASSAILS PAY CUTS

Says at Houston Prosperity Depends on Masses' Buying Power.

HOUSTON, Sept. 1 (AP).—Labor is more upon the defensive than at any time during the last decade, Charles P. Howard of Indianapolis, president of the International Typographical Union, declared here today.

"Organized workers recently have been confronted with demands for wage and hour reduction and have suffered from unemployment," he explained.

"During the past year the unorganized worker has suffered greatly from the application of the moth-eaten industrial philosophy that wage reduction and increased hours will return prosperity. These workers must depend for protection upon the conscience of their employers, and business has no conscience.

"Men now observe that business prosperity is inseparable from the purchasing power of the masses. The opportunity to sell depends upon the ability of the workers to buy, and the ability of the workers to buy depends upon the employment and wages.

"Outstanding industrialists have declared that reducing wages or depriving workers of employment is not a remedy for business depression."

Plane Crash Victim Dies.

Special to The New York Times.

SALEM, N. J., Sept. 1.—Julius Needham, 29 years old, of Deep Water died in the Salem County Memorial Hospital here today from injuries received in an airplane crash near Pennsgrove last night. He was known as an amateur pugilist and baseball player. Howard Turpin Jr., 18, of Deep Water, pilot of the plane, and Charles Reybold, 30, another passenger, are in a serious condition at the hospital.

URGES LABOR PARTY HERE.

Louis Waldman at Forest Park, Pa., Points to Britons' Experience.

FOREST PARK, Pa., Sept. 1.—Speaking before an audience of several hundred who crowded the auditorium of the Unity House here today in his Labor Day address, Louis Waldman of Brooklyn, who is the Socialist party candidate for Governor of New York, urged that a political labor party be organized in this country along the same lines as the Labor party of England.

"In my judgment labor has not been dynamic in its efforts to become an influence on American life," Mr. Waldman said. "Labor should not lag behind the leadership of the Liberals and the Socialists. It might secure for workers security against the ordinary risks incident to modern industrial organization. This labor cannot do as a purely economic organization. The British labor movement tried it thirty years ago and found it a failure.

"The most significant difference between labor here and in England is that in this country more than 2,000,000 civil service employes are outside the labor movement and are not considered legitimate members of the organization.

"Organized labor of this country must make strenuous efforts to enlist the workers of the basic industries. Above all it must establish a reversal of its present policy and make the civil service employe an intimate part of its membership."

Liner President Wilson Arrives.

The President Wilson of the Dollar Line arrived yesterday with 156 passengers on the regular round-the-world voyage through the Mediterranean. She passed safely through the storm last Thursday.

VACATIONIST ARMY POURS BACK TO CITY

100 extra trains, in addition to the regular schedule, were run over the New York Central and New Haven.

A similar situation existed at the Pennsylvania Station, when hundreds of thousands of vacationists returning from the New Jersey seashore, the Delaware Water Gap, Baltimore, Pittsburgh and points south, began to arrive in the early afternoon, the travel peak occurring between 9 and 9:30 P. M. Porters and baggage agents were overwhelmed. The Pennsylvania ran forty-nine extra trains in addition to regular trains.

Added to the volume of passenger traffic of the Pennsylvania system was the holiday travel that flowed over the Long Island Railroad into the Pennsylvania Station from the north and south shores of Long Island, and notably from Long Beach, the Rockaways and points further east. The Long Island Railroad during the peak of the rush in midevening ran trains on a minimum headway.

The Trek Through Hudson County.

The return through Hudson County of more than 250,000 Labor Day vacationists by railroad and automobile taxed railroad lines almost to capacity and caused marked highway congestion.

The railroads with terminals in Hudson County, including the Lackawanna, the West Shore, the New York, Ontario & Western, the Central Railroad of New Jersey, the Lehigh Valley and the Erie lines each ran an average of twenty extra trains to carry vacationists back from mountain and shore resorts.

The extras began to roll in at 5 P. M. and arrived steadily through the evening. The peak period was between 7 and 8 o'clock. The number of passengers carried by the railroads during the day was said to have been slightly larger than last year.

The street traffic was heavier through Hudson County than at any other time this year and long lines of automobiles waited at the Holland Tunnel and at ferry entrances. Automobile movement was slowed down, over the main highways, at times to fifteen miles an hour.

Congestion was particularly marked on the Newark Turnpike, where there were frequent total stoppages when the jack-knife bridge over the Hackensack River was raised to let ships through. The bridge was raised three times between 5 o'clock and 7.

Heavy Traffic in Holland Tunnel.

Officials of the Holland Tunnel reported that the homeward rush of motorists had started as early as 2 P. M., when motor cars were passing through the tunnels at the rate of 1,900 an hour. By 5 o'clock the movement was at the rate of 2,000 an hour and growing continually. At that time the number of cars that had passed through the Holland Tunnel exceeded 25,000 cars, and tunnel officials expected that by midnight the total might exceed the record for the Summer, although they did not expect it to reach the record of 56,154 made on a Sunday last Spring. Up to midnight last night 51,596 automobiles had moved through the tunnels.

With all the highways to New York carrying an enormous volume of holiday motor travel five motorists were killed and many injured in automobile accidents throughout the metropolitan district.

On the new air line which runs every hour on the hour between Newark and Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington, all records for intercity air travel were broken when on twenty-two planes in each direction 225 persons made the trip.

Motor traffic through New Jersey to northern Manhattan became so heavy at 5:30 o'clock that the Fort Lee Ferry and the Electric Ferries abandoned schedules and made trips as rapidly as they could be loaded and unloaded. Seven ferries were in operation and they carried an average of forty to fifty motor cars an hour.

The automobile traffic over the Staten Island municipal ferries, between St. George and the foot of Whitehall Street, Manhattan, and St. George and Thirty-ninth Street, Brooklyn, was so heavy in the afternoon and evening that it required the services of thirteen ferryboats. Nine boats were operating on the St. George-Manhattan line on an eight-minute schedule and four on the Brooklyn line on a ten-minute schedule. The bulk of the traffic came over the outer-bridge crossing between Perth Amboy, N. J., and Tottenville, S. I., and the Goethal Bridge, between Elizabethport and Howland Hook. The threatening weather kept the crowds of visitors to South and Midland Beaches down to 50,000.

Ten extra traffic policemen assigned to duty on the Queensboro Bridge, also on the bridge plazas, kept traffic moving as fast as possible, and the police estimated that 92,000 automobiles had crossed the bridge in the twenty-four hours at midnight, approximately 12,000 more than on an average Sunday.

Seeking to avoid congestion on the Queensboro Bridge and the Ninety-second Street Ferry, thousands homeward bound from Long Island vacations crossed from Clason Point, the Bronx, to College Point, L. I., and in the early evening they so overtaxed the seven ferryboats that the lines of automobiles extended for two miles back of the ferry slip.

Traffic police on Pelham and Bronx River Parkways kept traffic moving rapidly and in line along the main arteries of the Bronx. Motor travel was heavy on Jerome Avenue due to detours from the Grand Concourse, which is torn up by subway construction.

Squads of police were assigned to all the bridges across the Harlem River and they reported that there was heavy northbound as well as southbound traffic, due presumably to the return of Westchester vacationists from New Jersey and Long Island. Northbound traffic was particularly heavy over the 225th Street Bridge from Broadway. There was congestion on the Bronx River Parkway at Woodlawn, where construction of an underpass necessitates a detour.

Returning tourists started crossing the Bear Mountain Bridge in the forenoon, their number increasing steadily all day, according to bridge officials who had not made a count, but estimated that the total for the day would be between 11,000 and 13,000.

Three main automobile highways between Peekskill and Yonkers bore a continuous procession of motor vehicles. Chief of Police Henry Burke of Peekskill estimated that during the 24-hour period ending at midnight 50,000 motorists, including traffic over Bear Mountain Bridge, would have passed through Peekskill southbound. The New York City and other travelers through Peekskill proceeded south by way of the Albany Post Road, and the Saw Mill River and Bronx River Parkways. The traffic in Ossining, Dobbs Ferry and Yonkers was the heaviest of the Summer, according to Captain D. A. Cooper of the Yonkers Traffic Bureau.

Motor travel along the Connecticut shore of Long Island Sound flowed in solid lines on the Boston Post Road, and from the Berkshires additional streams of traffic poured down the Harlem Valley. The Connecticut traffic converged upon the Bronx via Pelham, the Hutchinson River and the Bronx River Parkways.

Report Record Motor Traffic.

The police of Washington Heights reported that incoming motor travel last night was the heaviest they ever had seen. In Harlem, where thousands of returning vacationists were dropped by New York Central trains at the 125th Street station of the New York Central on Park Avenue, there also was unusually heavy motor traffic.

The Dyckman and Englewood Ferry Company, operating four ferryboats on a five-minute headway from 6 o'clock yesterday morning until 2 o'clock this morning, likewise reported that travel, for the most part from the Palisades Interstate Park, was the heaviest ever carried. From the ferry slip a line of waiting automobiles extended all the way back to Englewood, N. J.

The crowd at Coney Island was reduced to approximately 350,000 from about 750,000 the day before by yesterday's threatening skies. The crowd at the Rockaways remained at about 350,000. Many of the Summer vacationists were staying over until the end of the week to await the opening of school next Monday.

There was no drowning at either Coney Island or the Rockaways, but at Coney Island there was one death of heart disease. Two bathers with heart attacks were taken to Coney Island Hospital. Gus Seemer, 40 years, 324 East Thirteenth Street, a waiter, collapsed at 1,330 Surf Avenue, and was dead when Dr. Angelo of Coney Island Hospital arrived with an ambulance.

Ray Randolph, 40, a machinist, 490 Sixty-second Street, collapsed in the steam room of the Raven Hall Baths, Boardwalk and Twentieth Street. Police Emergency Squad 11 administered oxygen, and the patient was rushed to the Coney Island Hospital in a critical condition.

Edward Kingel, 24, an accountant, of 601 West 151st Street, Manhattan, collapsed of a heart attack on the beach at Brighton Beach and was taken to Coney Island Hospital.

The police arrested forty-three peddlers at Coney Island, where Labor Day does not mark the end of the season. Mardi Gras will start on Sept. 8 and the season will come to an end on Sept. 14.

600,000 at Long Beach on Week-End.

Over the week-end 600,000 persons visited Long Beach, L. I., according to the police estimates, and the records showed no drownings or serious accidents.

Atlantic City, N. J., providing amusement for more than 350,000 visitors, was overhung with a heavy fog bank most of the day, according to reports from that resort. More than 800 hotels and rooming houses were filled. Approximately 10,000 cars were parked in the streets, because all garage space had been occupied. Despite overcast skies, thousands of bathers enjoyed the surf, and equal numbers strolled on the Boardwalk.

Asbury Park and neighboring New Jersey shore resorts reported that cloudiness had been responsible for the decision of thousands of excursionists to start home early. By mid-afternoon the railroad stations were jammed and trains were moving out of the resort towns at frequent intervals, and all highways carried unending streams of motor traffic.

Members of the pickpocket and gang squads were assigned to railroad terminals and ferry slips to protect unsuspecting travelers, and other plain-clothes men were assigned to watch notorious criminals who were expected to try to sneak back into New York City in the holiday rush. From Police Headquarters orders were sent out canceling days off for all traffic policemen until after Labor Day travel had subsided.

AIRLINE TRAFFIC A RECORD.

225 Ride on Inter-City Trips on First Day of Travel.

All records for intercity air passenger transportation over a one-day period were broken yesterday when the New York, Philadelphia and Washington Airways opened its hourly passenger air service to those cities and carried 225 passengers on its first day's schedule of twenty-two trips.

The planes used by the line hold ten passengers each and every seat was full on all except two of the trips. The first two planes, one from each end of the line, carried aeronautical notables from civil, military and governmental circles, while the balance of the passenger lists were made up of holiday travelers. The planes averaged slightly less than two hours' flying time between New York and Washington, the longest run being a few minutes longer than two hours and the fastest trip being made in an hour and fifty minutes.

Major Gen. James E. Fechet, Chief of Air Corps, former Assistant Attorney General Mabel Walker Willebrandt, J V. MacGee, formerly vice president of T. A. T., and members of the Washington Board of Trade made up the list of the first eastbound plane. Captain Ashley C. McKinley of the Byrd flight over the South Pole, Ruth Nichols, Louise McPhetridge Thaden, both prominent women pilots; George Palmer Putnam, Ruth Hale and George Agnew Chamberlin traveled over the first route west from Newark Airport to Washington. Landings are made en route at the Camden Airport, which is only ten minutes from the centre of Philadelphia.

An army Sikorsky amphibian followed the first plane out from Washington and landed at Newark to return Major Gen. Fechet to the Capital. It was piloted by Captain Ira Eaker, pilot of the army refueling endurance plane Question Mark and of the dawn-to-dusk flight from Miami to the Canal Zone, who recently broke one of his ankles when he was forced to jump from a spinning pursuit plane which refused to come out in level flight during a series of tests in the army.

Captain Eaker amazed other fliers at Newark by exhibiting his newly-set ankle and demonstrating his new method of flying with it by using a specially constructed duralumin brace for working the rudder pedals from a point near his knee.

RABBIS CALL FOR DRIVE TO END UNEMPLOYMENT

Labor Day Message Will Be Read From Pulpits on Jewish New Year.

A message for the Jewish New Year was released yesterday by the Commission of Social Justice of the Central Conference of American Rabbis as a Labor Day pronouncement. It stressed "the deadly effect of unemployment, not merely upon material possessions but upon all the values of life, raising the struggle against unemployment as a sacred duty." The message also praises other religious groups which have "resolved upon an intelligent attitude toward birth control. The New Year does not begin until the latter part of this month.

The statement, which will be read from Jewish pulpits throughout the country, declares:

"Weighty is the obligation to consider the various expedients deemed helpful; for instance, the steady raising of the age below which children are kept in school and out of industry; mothers' pensions to reduce the number of women and minors seeking work; old age pensions for those no longer acceptable to a machine industry which rejects age with its fidelity for youth with its vigor; a perfected system of employment exchanges eliminating waste, delays and errors in the linkage of workers needing situations with situations that need workers; unemployment insurance, already tried in foreign lands and in some American industries with good results; prosperity reserves on the part of the governments, and the planning of public construction in such wise as to offer a maximum of public employment when there is slackness of private employment; such bureaus of economic observations as will issue timely warnings against the approach of economic decline, and counsel measures of forestalling it. Add to this ampler educational facilities and institution care for those temporarily or permanently incapable of work."

The message also comments with approval upon the spread of the five-day week and higher wages, through the activities of organized labor, and expresses gratification over the fact that other religious groups have "resolved upon an intelligent attitude toward birth control." It says that "birth is one of the many forces of nature which like steam, air, gravitation, electricity and chemical valence, succumb to human control as civilization progresses. When the intelligent regulation of birth can avert suffering and degradation, the voice of mercy speaks. That voice should not go unheeded. It went not unheeded among the sages of the Jewish past."

The junior swimming meet at the Southampton Beach Club, under the direction of Fred Lundholm, instructor, attracted a large gallery. Mr. Lundholm was the starter. Silver cups for the winners were provided by members of the club.

The gallery reached a high peak of enthusiasm when a swimming exhibition was given by two 3-year-old children, Bettina Landstreet and Rosemary O'Brien, who swam the width of the pool, twenty-five feet. In the diving contests the children showed beautiful form and the judges experienced difficulty in selecting the winners. They traveled very little at night, making most of the journey between sunrise and sunset.

After spending a few weeks visiting friends here Mr. and Mrs. Smith will return to Crescent City for the Winter.

VAN HOOGSTRATEN SAILS FOR EUROPE

Director of Stadium Concerts Will Spend Month's Vacation on Lake Near Munich.

TALKS OF "CANNED MUSIC"

Says Radio Should Promote Study of Operat—Malglaive Also a Passenger on the Paris.

The French liner Paris sailed at 4 P. M. yesterday for Havre via Plymouth with 300 passengers, of whom 95 were in the first cabin. Among them was Pierre de Malglaive, for seven years resident director of the French Line in this country, who will be assistant managing director in France. He was accompanied by Mrs. de Malglaive and Felix Lachesnez-Heude, the general passenger manager of the company in the United States.

Another passenger was Willem van Hoogstraten, musical director of the Portland (Ore.) Symphony Orchestra, and regular director of the Stadium concerts. He is going to spend his vacation on a large near Munich, where he has a large sailing yacht, and will return next month to open his sixth season at Portland.

Mr. van Hoogstraten, in discussing the demonstration which greeted his statement at the Stadium Sunday night that there was a place for regular music and "canned" music, he said he did not want to discourage radio and phonographic music, believing that the new type was here to stay. But, he insisted, it was a mistake to improve the new kind of music at the price of real, creative music itself.

At the present pace, the director said, eventually there would be no musicians to record "canned" music, as there were few now studying the piano or violin. He insisted that the money being spent to advertise the "canned" music should be used to promote the study of opera and concert music.

FOG AND RAIN CURB NEWPORT ACTIVITIES

MOONLIGHT FETE PUT OFF

Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney and General Vanderbilt Leave for New York on Their Yachts.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 1.—It seems strange that Labor Day, the last big day of the Newport season and for which many events are planned, is almost invariably a signal for bad weather. True to form the city was covered early today with a thick blanket of fog which later turned to rain and more fog, causing the postponement of virtually all out-of-door events.

The "Dancing in the Moonlight" entertainment scheduled in the garden theatre of Beacon Hill House, the estate of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Curtiss James tonight for the benefit of St. Columba's Berkeley Memorial Chapel of Middletown, had to be postponed and is planned now for Thursday evening.

The inclement weather stopped tennis at the Casino and as a result there were but few to gather there.

Only a small group of holiday guests gathered at Bailey's Beach.

Although Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney has left for New York on her yacht Whiteway, the Whitney home on Bellevue Avenue will remain open for another week.

Mr. and Mrs. F. F. Fowler of New York, Miss Natalie Lloyd of Boston, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Neiffer of Harrisburg and Mr. and Mrs. George R. Holmes of New Haven are guests at the New Cliffs.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Allen gave a dinner at Rosetta Cottage and Mrs. Eugene S. Reynal, who is closing her season at Beachmound this week, gave another dinner there tonight.

Former Governor and Mrs. R. Livingston Beeckman also entertained at Land's End.

General Cornelius Vanderbilt and Arthur Curtiss James returned to New York tonight on their yacht.

Mr. and Mrs. Goodhue Livingston left for New York today, concluding a visit with Mrs. James B. Duke at Rough Point.

The weather made today one of home luncheons for the members of the Summer colony. Among those entertaining were Mrs. J. Philip Benkard, Mrs. Robert D. Huntington, Mrs. Walter B. James, Mrs. Richard Van Nest Gambrill, Mrs. Harry Payne Bingham, Mrs. Augustin L. Humes, Mrs. Herman Oelrichs and Mrs. William F. Whitehouse.

Members of the Clambake Club gathered yesterday noon for a member's bake, after which the marksmen got out their shotguns for a trapshoot, despite the poor visability, for the cup that had been offered by Treasurer Walter S. Andrews.

THE PLAY

By J. BROOKS ATKINSON.

Manhattan Trivia.

UP POPS THE DEVIL, a comedy in three acts, by Albert Hackett and Frances Goodrich. Staged by Worthington Miner; setting by Rollo Wayne; produced by Lee Shubert. At the Theatre Masque.

John	James G. Morton
Biney	Albert Hackett
Polly Griscom	Mildred Wall
Drunken Man	Henry Howard
Anne	Sally Bates
George Kent	Brian Donlevy
Mrs. Kent	Florence Auer
Steve Merrick	Roger Pryor
Subscription Boy	Lester Salkow
Kelly	Jack Klendon
Luella May Carroll	Janet McLeay
Gilbert Morrell	John Marston
A Laundryman	Spencer Barnes
Mr. Platt	G. W. Callahan
Mrs. Platt	Mabel Montgomery

Although the dramatics pull a needlessly long face, the trivia of "Up Pops the Devil," which popped up at the Masque last evening, are endlessly delightful. For the good of a blandly amusing evening in the theatre let it be here advertised that the trivial rollicks over the dramatics most of the time. When it was hovering on the outskirts of Manhattan, this light-footed comedy by Albert Hackett and Frances Goodrich, who are both actors, could not decide whether to be known as "Let's Get Married," "Too Many Friends" or "Everybody Welcome." Any title will do in a storm of heedless gayety. It may be true, as the authors insist, that writing a novel is the devil, and that young love flies out of the window when unpaid laundry bills come in at the door. But most theatregoers will be contented to know that the dialogue is merry and that the young folks of Manhattan who people the play are good company as long as they keep on the surface of things.

They are newspaper writers, press agents, authors' agents, dancers and hangers-on. They keep open house in a Village studio apartment. Although Steve Merrick and his wife pay the rent, no one is particular about the necessities, and any one who knocks at the door is likely to go out with a skinful. When "Up Pops the Devil" is most heartily entertaining it lets this sort of mocking irresponsibility run a free course of exits and entrances, melodramatic speeches with an ironic ring and brisk retorts. Such wry pokes as The New Yorker takes every week at the ribs of this giddy metropolis the authors of "Up Pops the Devil" have sprinkled generously through their play. Sometimes they lug in the humor by its ears, which is one of the best ways yet discovered to get humor on the stage.

Aside from its humor, "Up Pops the Devil" is a comedy with a plot and a vintage. When he is employed by an advertising agency for pay, Steve Merrick finds himself a thwarted genius. He cannot write his novel on Sunday mornings after a Village Saturday night. Determined to make a man of him, Anne, who becomes his wife after a twelvemonth temporary arrangement, hires out to Roxy's as a member of the chorus and stakes him to leisure and literature. But being a kept man, as for the purposes of drama he calls it, gets on his nerves and hers. They quarrel for a good second act curtain, and go separate ways. Their unborn child brings them together two or three months later. Whereupon the comedy is over.

As a plot it binds the humors together without destroying your interest in the play. But the pangs of art are singularly ungrateful topics for stage composition. The perspiring author who pulls madly at his hair and crumples up one piece of paper after another does not transfix the playgoing breast any more than the debonair artist who paints with the back of the easel toward the audience. In "Up Pops the Devil" the wrangle about the social status of the kept man is hardly more authentic. These villagers who use another man's apartment like a club and charge liquor to him without so much as a by-your-leave are not likely to be touchy about appearances. Steve Merrick's fit of temper is stage nerves. It is good for nothing except bringing the curtain down.

Only students of the drama will care about that. So long as the good lines pop up devilishly often the principles of dramaturgy and the fine points of ethics can enjoy a holiday. Under the sapient direction of Worthington Miner the performance is light and frolicsome. Having written his share of the play, Albert Hackett is careful not to let it down in his acting. As a crackbrained press agent who knows the value of gravity in uttering funny lines he is half the total humor. Roger Pryor gives a substantial performance as Steve Merrick, and Sally Bates is both charming and discerning as the wife. For minor pleasantry there are Mildred Wall and Brian Donlevy, both resigned to the better half of sophistication, and Janet McLeary as a Southern émigrée to Greenwich Village who hopes that what she has heard about the Left Bank is true. What there is in this comedy Mr. Miner and his actors neatly force out, adding something of their own for good measure.

MINISTER TELLS OF THREAT.

Norfolk Police Seek Men Who, He Says, Kidnapped and Menaced Him.

NORFOLK, Va., Sept. 1 (AP).—Police armed with warrants tonight were searching for three men said by the Rev. Benjamin B. Carlisle of Norfolk to have been among several who kidnapped and threatened him with death last night.

Mr. Carlisle's story was that he was accosted near a tent where he held Gospel meetings, gagged, driven fifteen miles into a thinly-settled section and warned that unless he left Norfolk at once he would be slain. He said he recognized three of his assailants, whose names and descriptions he furnished the police.

Mr. Carlisle said his tent previously had been burned down, but that a $200 fund had been subscribed immediately for purchasing a new tent.

COL. GREENE'S PLAY TO BE PRODUCED HERE

"When Johnny Marched Home," by Superintendent of Public Works, Tried Out in Albany.

"When Johnny Marched Home," a play by Colonel Frederick Stuart Greene, State Superintendent of Public Works, is announced for production here next month under the management of Thomas Kilpatrick, who has been interested in several Broadway presentations. The company which will bring forth the play has been formed by Colonel Greene and a number of his friends, according to reports from Albany. Rehearsals are announced by Mr. Kilpatrick's office to start in a few days.

The play was written by Colonel Greene about two years ago during a brief illness. Last March it was tried out by an Albany stock company, at which time several New York theatrical people journeyed to Albany to see it. After the tryout, the author did some final rewriting before submitting the play to Broadway producers.

The New York managers who read the play disagreed in their opinions of it, Colonel Greene declared yesterday in Albany.

"The first producer who read the script said it was a fine, thoughtful play, and that he would put it on without hesitation were he not afraid that 'Journey's End' had taken the edge off," Colonel Greene said in Albany. "The second declared that as 'Johnny' was not a war play but a post-war play, 'Journey's End' would help it. Another producer said the first act was great, but he didn't like the second and third enough to buy the script. The fourth told me the second and third acts were the real thing, but that I should rewrite the first act. From such direct contradictions I concluded they were all guessing and that possibly I could guess as well as they did."

GOOD HOUSES FOR MATINEES

Nine Plays Draw Capacity—Evening Crowds Fall Off.

Although business in the Broadway legitimate playhouses yesterday afternoon was better than the most sanguine manager had expected, the attendance dropped off considerably in the evening. Out of the nine entertainments which had matinees, five were listed at bargain prices in the cut-rate ticket agency. A canvass of the theatres showed that most of the nine had virtually capacity houses despite the warm weather. One musical comedy on Forty-second Street played to more than a hundred standees.

Tickets for eight of the seventeen attractions now running on Broadway were available in the cut-rate agency for the evening performances. According to one veteran manager, business for Labor Day evening is usually off because of the large number of people returning to and departing from New York.

RALPH BELLAMY HAS ROLE.

To Take Part Intended for Walter Huston in "Borned in Texas."

Ralph Bellamy, an actor from the West, who is said to be new to Broadway, will have the rôle originally intended for Walter Huston in "Borned in Texas," the Lynn Riggs play which Arthur Hopkins is now preparing. Mr. Huston is under contract to the talking pictures and is unable at the moment to get away for stage appearances.

Frederick Burton has also been engaged for "Borned in Texas," which Mr. Hopkins expects to open on Sept. 22 in New Haven. The play will also be seen in Hartford before coming to Broadway.

'American Tempo' Premiere Put Off.

The Broadway première of "American Tempo," which had been scheduled for Sept. 10 at the Liberty Theatre, has been postponed. The play, the work of George Manker Watters, who collaborated with Arthur Hopkins on "Burlesque," was presented in Great Neck on Saturday night and will conclude the current week's engagement in Newark before being withdrawn. Vivienne Osborne has the leading rôle.

NEW MAPLE DISEASE FOUND

European Variety Noted in Connecticut—Spread Held Unlikely.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 1.—Paul R. Bowen of the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station today described a maple leaf disease, which he believes is now occurring for the first time in this country, although known in Europe.

The disease is caused by the fungus Cristulariella depraedans, and was discovered two years ago in North Stamford when leaves, injured by the fungus and appearing to be affected by a sun-scorch wilt, showing soft areas, as if scalded, revealed tiny white fruiting bodies on the under surface.

Mr. Bowen found that wilting was so severe that many leaf blades hung limp and a slight shaking of the trees caused the infected leaves to fall badly. Later the same condition was observed on maples at Hartland. Dr. G. P. Clinton, head of the botany department of the station, today said, however, that the disease is not likely to prove serious in Connecticut.

Dr. Florence McCormick, plant pathologist of the station, obtained in pure culture a fungus which Mr. Bowen identified as the cause of the maple disease.

THE SCREEN

By MORDAUNT HALL.

M. Menjou et Mlle. Colbert.

L'ENIGMATIQUE MONSIEUR PARKES, with Adolphe Menjou, Claudette Colbert, Emile Chautard, Adrienne d'Ambricourt, Sandra Ravel, Arman Kaliz, Jacques Jou-Jerville, Andre Cheron and Frank O'Neill, based on the American film, "Slightly Scarlet"; "Screen Snapshots," "Le Sexe Fort," Laurel and Hardy in "Brats." At the Fifty-fifth Street Playhouse.

The American film, "Slightly Scarlet," in which Clive Brook and Evelyn Brent were featured, has been put into French form under the title of "L'Enigmatique Monsieur Parkes," with a French speaking cast, headed by Adolphe Menjou and Claudette Colbert. It is a narrative quite well-suited to France inasmuch as the action takes place on the Riviera and in Paris. In its new guise it is still an intriguing production and it proves that the only way to make a foreign language picture is to have a native cast or those who are as familiar with the language as Mr. Menjou is with French.

It is, of course, rather amusing to perceive a Frenchman impersonating a nouvenu riche from Chicago and to observe the gestures of his wife. But as good as Miss Colbert and the others are in their rôles, it is Mr. Menjou who shines in this production. He is just as competent in this picture as he has been in his American silent films. It is his third talking picture. His first audible venture was "Fashions in Love," and his second was one produced in Paris and called "Mon Gosse de Pere." This current offering was made in Hollywood and the director had the distinct advantage of having witnessed the production in American form.

It is the story of two polished crooks, Mr. Parkes and an American girl posing as the widow of an Austrian count, who are eager to steal a valuable pearl necklace owned by Mrs. Sylvester Corbett. Until the last episode the Countess imagines that the enigmatic Mr. Parkes is a detective, but he eventually explains that he does his best to keep at a safe distance from the police. The Countess hopes that the purloining of the Corbett jewels will be her last crime, for she is weary of working for a Russian crook who is known as Malatroff. As Malatroff makes his world's exit in a struggle with Parkes, the author has little difficulty in bringing the Countess and Parkes together and furnishing an ending in which it is to be presumed that Parkes has enough money to warrant his staying away from nefarious activities after stealing the Countess's heart. And the Countess, satisfied that Parkes is not a sleuth, harkens to his soft words of admiration and affection. The Cote d'Azur police help along the triumphal state of affairs by congratulating both Parkes and the Countess on the death of the notorious Malatroff.

On the same program is a French short film, produced by Robert T. Kane in Paris. It is the best of its kind, very amusing and well acted.

GIGLI LANDS, STARTS WEST

Metropolitan Tenor, Back on the Roma, Will Sing in California.

Beniamino Gigli, tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Company, returned from Europe yesterday on the Italia-America liner Roma and started immediately for California, where he plans to sing in several operas. The singer announced that besides his regular appearances in Europe during the Summer he gave twelve concerts in Italy and turned over the proceeds to charitable funds, including those for Fascist war orphans and for earthquake victims.

Because of the holiday many persons were able to meet their friends on incoming ships. At the pier of the Roma, West Fifty-seventh Street, more than 4,000 people, mostly Italians, milled about the entrance, necessitating a special police detail of a captain and ten men to hold the people in order. Several times groups rushed for the entrance to the pier, but the guard held and forced them back.

The Roma came from Naples and Genoa and brought more than 1,600 passengers.

TO HAVE 'SUBURBAN NIGHTS'

Boston Theatre Will Adopt Equity Plan of 7:30 Curtain.

E. E. Clive has decided to put into effect at the Copley Theatre, Boston, the recent suggestion of the Actors' Equity Association regarding a "suburban night" in the legitimate theatre. Frank Gillmore, president of Equity, said yesterday that Mr. Clive intends to start his "suburban night" performances at 7:30 P. M. instead of 8:30. He has informed Mr. Gillmore that since his project was announced he has received thirty-one congratulatory letters and a large number of telephone calls from playgoers in the Boston suburban district.

Several Broadway producing firms, including the Shuberts and the Theatre Guild, have expressed their intention of testing Mr. Gillmore's plan to interest theatre patrons in New York's outlying districts and suburbs, but only one of them, Charles Hopkins, has announced a definite date for the experiment. He plans to hold the first "suburban night" at his theatre on Tuesday, Oct. 7, when "Mrs. Moonlight" will be the attraction.

COUNTING LOSSES BEFORE THEY ARE HATCHED.

Republican leaders at Washington have been making a political "survey." As if it had been done with instruments of exact precision, they let it be known that they expect a loss of thirty-nine seats in the next House of Representatives. This is such a nice calculation that it ought to inspire confidence in the forecasters. Yet if the result should be a loss of only thirty-five seats, or as many as forty-five, doubtless they would not be greatly surprised, nor would any one else. This is a year when anything may happen in politics. Even at the maximum of defeats which the Republican managers are cheerfully admitting in advance, they would still control the House by a majority of fifteen or twenty. In the Senate they do not concede the probability of losing more than "some" contests which are at present much in doubt, but they take a queer sort of comfort in reckoning that if certain regular Republican candidates are beaten, it will be, not by Democrats, but by "insurgent Republicans." Since it is insurgent Republicans who have done most to thwart the Administration and bedevil the Republican party in Congress, this prophecy can hardly be called one of smooth things.

These admissions of heavy losses in the Congressional elections this year might be thought to trouble Chairman FESS of the Republican National Committee. Daily by speech and interview and broadcast he has been maintaining that the Republican party has kept every pledge and given to the country every promised blessing. That being so, its majorities ought to be increased by the party prophets, instead of being cut in half. But we may be sure that none of these things will move Senator FESS. Even if defeat comes, as predicted, he will doubtless have an optimistic explanation of it, and be able to distil the soul of goodness out of things evil. His present rôle is not to make estimates but to pronounce eulogies.

Some of his associates appear to see the need of being more businesslike or realistic in facing their political difficulties. They may properly point out that the usual rule is for the party in power to meet with more or less of a setback in the Congressional elections falling midway of the Presidential term. If they are entirely frank, they will also admit that the prolonged business depression, not in the slightest degree helped by the new tariff which was to cure it all, together with the effects of the drought and of general discontent in several Western States, are almost certain to be hurdles in the election which they cannot leap. But the really surprising thing is that they have so early departed from the sacred political form of "claiming everything" in an election. When they summon their followers to march toward it in the conceded certainty that losses will be large all along the line, they expose themselves to the question: "Call you this supporting your friends?"

A FREE TRADE MANIFESTO.

The free trade manifesto signed by more than a hundred British bankers, manufacturers and politicians is somewhat tardy as an answer to the statement of a dozen eminent bankers in July in favor of reciprocal trade agreements among the Empire nations and the imposition of duties by Great Britain on imports from other countries while keeping an open market for Empire products. Lord GREY'S name, first on the list of signers of the newer document, is a reminder that there is still a Liberal party even if it be divided and the greater number of its followers controlled by another leader. Free trade is the one surviving principle of Liberal unity; yet who knows how much defection there is in the party since the protective infection has spread so rapidly and so widely?

For the Conservatives it is a return to their historic policy. But who would have looked for it in the "City"? The adherence of the Trade Union Congress to it is still more surprising. It has been gaining ground in the Labor party in Parliament, though Mr. SNOWDEN seems impervious to conversion. There it takes the form of bulk purchase, with price stabilization, of primary products from the Dominions and exclusion of competing goods. This is on the agenda of the Imperial Conference to be held at London this month. The first economic subject to be taken up is Empire trade, including the effect of tariffs. Discussion with the Premiers of the Dominions will have to be unpleasantly concrete. The theory of "the Empire as an economic unit" and "intra-imperial trade" is a beautiful dream. What is to induce the Dominions, as badly infected with the protective virus as the home country is getting to be, to remove or beneficially to lower their duties on British goods?

The protectionist patter, familiar enough in this country, is that the Dominions in return for favors from the other side could lay preferential tariffs which would not much increase the cost of manufactures or strangle "infant industries." The United Kingdom voter is told that duties on food and raw materials will not put up prices to the consumer. When we remember that Great Britain obtains but one-third of her imported raw material and two-fifths of her imported food from Empire countries, and that almost two-thirds of her exports are to foreign countries, the British protective "medicine" looks even stronger and more magical than our own.

The signers of the free trade declaration remind the British public of the immense British investments in foreign countries, especially South America. Shall a tax be put on imports by which the interest on those investments is paid? The proposed resort to protection is a doubtful or desperate remedy. How remote now seems the appeal of financial experts in sixteen countries, including the United States, nearly four years ago for the lowering of customs barriers:

> Trade is not a war, but a process of exchange. In time of peace our neighbors are our customers and their prosperity is a condition of our own well-being. If we check their dealings, their power to pay their debts diminishes and their power to purchase our goods is reduced.

Great Britain has long been faithful to the doctrine of free exchange. If she abandons it in a world gone tariff-mad, Americans may learn, if Canada has not by that time helped to teach them, that trade is not exactly jug-handled.

STRESEMANN POLICIES HOLD.

In France and Poland resentment continues to be expressed over the speech of GOTTFRIED TREVIRANUS, Minister of Occupied Territories in the Bruening Cabinet, who brought up the revision of Germany's eastern frontiers. Although TREVIRANUS declared that he was acting strictly within the provisions of the Locarno agreement which permits Germany to work for treaty revision on the Polish frontier by peaceful means, Paris and Warsaw immediately discerned a threat against the peace of Europe by German militarism. Extremists in France lost no time in citing the incident as the first result of the "mistake" in prematurely evacuating the Rhineland. The tactless Treviranus speech was disavowed by the German Chancellor at the time, but not so definitely and completely as in a campaign speech by Herr BRUENING on Sunday. Protesting in general terms against the easy play for popularity by the promise of quick results, the Chancellor went on to state that so long as German foreign policy was in the hands of Foreign Minister CURTIUS and himself as the head of the government no policy of "adventure" would be tolerated. No responsible German statesman would dream of embarking upon such a policy.

It is difficult to see how the Chancellor could dissociate himself more sharply from the fire-eaters in his own country. His statement is all the more impressive because it was not embodied in a diplomatic communication intended to placate foreign opinion but was uttered before a German audience at a political meeting in the course of the Reichstag election campaign. Rejection of a policy of adventure, continuance of the Stresemann policies, would thus seem to be a safe issue on which to appeal to the great mass of German voters, though there is a minority audience for inflammatory propaganda in Germany as there is in every other country. It is the mischief of such provocative oratory, whether intended or otherwise, that it is seized upon and exploited by the interested minorities.

The Treviranus speech fell upon a body of French opinion by no means hostile to Germany but nervous over the effect upon security of the withdrawal of the troops from the Rhine. It is a state of mind which tends to exaggerate Germany's ability to attack France even if she had the desire. It overlooks the solid guarantees of the Locarno agreement by which Great Britain is pledged to the maintenance of the status quo on the Franco-German frontier to the extent of taking up arms against the aggressor in that region. Under the best of circumstances, no doubt, a German proposal to discuss frontier revision in the east will be productive of anxieties and suspicions. And yet a peaceful readjustment of the Polish-German line is not inconceivable if only the matter is left to responsible statesmen acting under favorable auspices instead of being made an issue in fiery election speeches. Lord D'ABERNON'S Diary, in speaking of the "miracle" of Locarno, takes it for granted that if the German proposal which became the basis of the agreements had been published within a fortnight after it was submitted to the Allies, the business would never have come to a successful conclusion.

FIRES WITH A WARNING.

The fire which destroyed the offices of the Federal Trade Commission in Washington is the third to harass government officials in recent months. The other two were in the Executive offices and the dome of the Capitol. At first it was feared that most of the commission's records had been burned up, but the latest reports indicate that many of them can be reclaimed. When our own State library went up in flames some years ago prompt attention to charred and waterlogged papers saved many priceless documents. The Trade Commission's papers are hardly of the same historic importance, but it would have been a pity to lose them. Fortunately, even those which were destroyed can be replaced, at least in some instances, but no one who has not suffered such a misfortune can realize the inconvenience to which the commission will be put, for many months to come, as a result of the fire.

A familiar moral is pointed by this incident. It is short-sighted, foolhardy even, to store valuable public records in flimsy buildings. The papers themselves are inflammable enough, without trebling the risk of conflagration by surrounding them with lath and plaster board. During the war period tinderbox offices sprouted about Washington like mushrooms in a field. It is high time they were replaced by permanent, fireproof structures, for the sake of both documentary and human contents. A central archives building, too, is a crying need, though it could hardly serve to house more or less contemporary records such as those destroyed in this particular case. Fortunately the government is making progress in both these directions under the authority of the current public buildings program.

AUTHORS' RIGHTS.

Before authors became so numerous and important to the great entertainment industries they could hardly get any one to listen to their demands for justice. Now they have enough prestige to get plenty of listeners, even including Congress, but thus far they have not succeeded in getting what plain common sense tells any one they earn and deserve. The American copyright laws are unjust, out of date, years behind those of all the countries belonging to the Berne Convention, as all do with the exception of Siam, Russia and our own. Mr. WILL IRWIN told the House Committee on Patents: "It is as though we were trying to "administer traffic in our cities, to "regulate traffic with the rise of "the automobile, on the traffic laws "of 1894."

He and other authors are quoted by LYMAN BEECHER STOWE in an article on copyright in The Bookman. They are all pushing the Vestal bill, for it will equalize the position of American and foreign authors if it becomes law. To be fully effective it must be passed before the end of this year, as our invitation to join the Berne Convention will be withdrawn at that time. Not being entitled to the rights of members of the International Copyright Union, our authors are at the mercy of foreign publishers and theatrical producers. Books or plays which might bring them a handsome return if protected are usually left to chance for recognition, and when they are made known by a sharp-eyed foreigner, he gets the profits. Of course, a writer can seek the services of a lawyer in Holland, for example, and apply for copyright there, but the cost of such special procedure is prohibitive to the little author, and the big ones find it usually eats up most of the profits.

The principles of the Vestal bill, in line with those of the Berne Convention, make an author's rights in his creations inherent and automatic. His story or play is his as fully as a table he makes or a suit of clothes he buys. At present his writings belong solely to him only so long as they remain unpublished. He must copyright his novel if he hopes to keep his rights in it, and even then a slight error made by a clerk may invalidate the copyright. If no slips occur and he succeeds in getting protection, it is good for only twenty-eight years. At the end of that time he may have it renewed for the same length of time, but after that his possession is his no longer. The young author who writes a book which grows from year to year in popularity is penalized by the withdrawal of his earnings in his old age. The Vestal bill extends the term of copyright to cover the life of the author and fifty years more.

Should the bill be passed later than the beginning of 1931, American authors would still enjoy the removal of a number of unjust conditions. But there is hope that it will be passed in time to give our writers an equal chance with those of the rest of the world.

OUR NATIONAL WEAKNESS.

From the first page of The Evening Telegram of Toronto we reprint the following:

> Hamilton, Ont.—Just twenty-one hours after they walked into the Lottridge and Barton Street branch of the Royal Bank of Canada and held up the staff to the tune of $3,000, JACK NEVINS and NORMAN SHERRATT, both of Toronto, today stood up for sentence in city police court and were committed to the Kingston penitentiary for eight years. Magistrate H. A. BURBRIDGE tacked on an additional penalty of thirty lashes each.

In America, a Catholic weekly review, under the title of "Making Murder Profitable," the Rev. PAUL L. BLAKELY, S. J., tells of the unsolved and even forgotten murder in New York City last December of ELIAS ELLMOND. Headquarters, at one point in Father BLAKELY'S correspondence, even informed him that "there is no record in the files of "this department of any person with "the above name being shot and "killed in this city." Later a precinct found the records, and the District Attorney's office learned from the Homicide Bureau that—

> Two men * * * subsequently taken into custody * * * were discharged for lack of identification. * * * One of these men has been indicted, charged with larceny of the car which some of these witnesses observed leaving the scene of the homicide.

As Father BLAKELY points out, this is probably as far as the inquiry will go. The success of the killers, possibly known to "the unlicked "cubs of the neighborhood, will chal- "lenge imitation." Those familiar with the tanglefoot process of our crime-punishing machine will agree with the priest that here is one of the deep roots of our social difficulty, having a not too distant connection with corruption in public office. Such observers will look enviously toward Canada, where, in a magistrate's court, without delay, technical legal pleadings, political influence and countless appeals, quick justice can be done and the fear of the law put in the hearts of evildoers.

NORMAN THOMAS, speaking Tuesday night on the radio, thinks that "at last the people are awakening; "the old party politicians are frightened." He denounced corruption and mentioned "legal rackets" as being a particularly evil part of the local government system. JOSEPH MCGOLDRICK of Columbia, reviewing the city election of 1929 for The American Political Science Review, mentions the direct primary system—which, for example, kept available Republicans from challenging LA GUARDIA—as one of the checks on the wheel of better government.

These views are sound. But until the American legal machine deals more promptly and effectively with crime—thus automatically tending to dissolve its partnership with politicians—the reforms at the top won't penetrate below the stratum of official scandals to the violent lawlessness beneath.

BRITISH STEEL.

In THE TIMES yesterday was printed a dispatch from Paris outlining a plan for the reorganization of the steel industry in Great Britain. It was drawn up by an American, a retired steel manufacturer, who is by now in England in order to consult with the leading manufacturers there. In general his recommendations are that obsolete plants ought at once to be scrapped; that the separate units and processes in the making of steel should be brought together in a single company so that the manufacture may be "integrated" and made more economical, along the lines followed in the United States; that large combinations be effected and that new blood be brought into the management, even if it means making an end of the old tradition that the business is a family possession, normally expected to descend from father to son.

Such ideas have long been familiar in England. Indeed, the "rationalization," as it is called, of steel manufacture has already made considerable progress. An article in the August number of The Nineteenth Century and After gives a number of details which may come as something of a novelty to American readers. The author, Mr. JULES MENKEN, who writes with full knowledge of his subject, points out that during the past two years there have been several large amalgamations looking to cutting down the cost of production by adopting the most modern methods. He instances no less than six mergers on a large scale, giving the names of the concerns brought together. In addition there has been a reorganization of the heavy engineering and armament industry, illustrated by the amalgamation of VICKERS with ARMSTRONG, WHITWORTH & CO., joined later by CAMMELL, LAIRD & CO.

In a word, the British fully recognize the necessity of modernizing their steel business, and have not been asleep about it. To be sure, as Mr. MENKEN admits, even the biggest of the British combinations are only "pigmies by comparison with "the great German and American "combines." The biggest of the concerns in the new groupings could not turn out more than 2,500,000 tons of iron and steel a year. The United States Steel Corporation alone has a capacity of at least ten times that amount. However, the British steel men are not sunk in lethargy, and while the steps which they have already taken have yet to meet the test of financial results, which will not be known until a year or more hence, "the names of "the concerns involved and the rep- "utation of their sponsors may serve "as a reassurance."

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Groome and the State Police. One must read between the lines of the brief obituaries of Colonel JOHN C. GROOME to get the real significance of his career.

He was born in Philadelphia, served in the war with Spain, organized the Pennsylvania State police, handled prisoners of war for the A. E. F., headed a relief expedition to Russia, was for some years warden of Eastern Penitentiary. Such are the facts, but somehow they do not speak for themselves as eloquently as they should.

What Colonel GROOME accomplished with the State police will ever form a notable chapter in the history of American government. When Governor PENNYPACKER offered him the job of recruiting that force he had no precedents to guide him. The Northwest Mounted Police of Canada and the Royal Irish Constabulary had to deal with very different problems.

Colonel GROOME had to build on new foundations, and he built magnificently. Politics had no place in his organization. Under his men, law and order were restored to rural Pennsylvania. Other States—New York among them—followed its example, to their permanent advantage. "The Pennsylvania State police is a model of efficiency, a model of honesty, a model of absolute freedom from political contamination." So THEODORE ROOSEVELT wrote. It will be a lasting memorial to its founder.

Intelligence Among the Anti-Social. A mental test conducted among 2,000 male inmates of the New Jersey State prison by the National Prison Emergency Committee shows that 57 per cent of the subjects were of inferior intelligence, ranging down to border-line mentality and actual feeblemindedness.

While these findings will not be news to the normally well-informed citizen, it is useful to have them recalled. One still encounters the statement, born out of a mistaken sympathy, that youthful criminals are apt to be recruited from the more intelligent, or at least the more alert, children. It is the high-spirited boy or girl who gets into mischief. It is the "clod" who remains law-abiding, because he has neither the initiative nor the brains to assert his individuality.

This doctrine, which always sought a certain amount of backing in the supposed experiences of mankind, took on special appeal in the post-war era of challenge and rebellion. With self-expression as the chief virtue in the new ethics, it was easy to slide into the assumption that a person at odds with the law was likely to be a "higher" type than the person who conformed. Conceivably, the thesis may still be maintained, but not under the old definition of intelligence. In the main it would seem to be still true that low mentality and delinquency go together.

Gray Squirrels Painted Black. Sturdy emigrants from America, the gray squirrels of England have acquired a bad name. Casual mention of their wicked ways in a London newspaper brings forth eager confirmation from all parts of England.

They swarm in gardens and feast on the choicest fruits, particularly strawberries and plums. They eat the eggs of partridges and pheasants and destroy shoots of the fir. An indignant eyewitness reports that she saw a plump gray squirrel dash across the street from a city park, climb up a building to a window box, and, as if in pure malice, nip off every single blossom and then skip merrily away.

From Surrey comes the report of even blacker mischief. Insulated wires on the back of a wooden fence marking the boundary of an estate have been attacked by the gray marauders. The wires were protected by a continuous envelope of lead, but the squirrels clung to the boards and bit it off.

In all this catalogue of crime it is always a gray, and never a red squirrel, that is the culprit. But a householder in Hertfordshire who has been gunning for the pests reports that he finds they are not really gray squirrels, but a cross between the gray and the red. He believes that the gray squirrels are not killing off the reds, but instead are mating with them. "The resultant cross-bred is an animal larger than either of the parents, colored gray, with a broad band of red on the back, and combining the vices of both races with the impudence of Carolinensis" (the gray squirrel).

This is an interesting theory, but it seems strange that all of the offspring of the red and gray squirrels should prove to be black sheep.

Troubadours Return in Hungary. Report comes from Budapest that the institution of troubadours is to be revived in Hungary, this not by design of the Ministry of Education or the Arts, but by order of the War Minister. The singers and lute players are to aid in heightening the patriotic spirit and in encouraging recruiting.

In the days of the Arpad dynasty and later they had an important part in the life of the nation. They formed an organized corporation and not only took part in court life but were employed by towns and villages for festive occasions. Even in recent years they appear in parts of Hungary at Christmas time and "tell their ancient songs" in expectation of reward.

The early troubadours, according to the late great Troubadour of Britain, ROBERT BRIDGES, were no "hucksters of song." They were reaching after the true form of beauty, the ideal of womanhood. In those days even kings "found honor in rhyme," and knights, churchmen and scholars were "childishly enthralled." Now trained musicians and actor-singers of note, even one of the brightest stars of the Budapest opera, will be engaged in this service, and each at a fixed salary, to sing and play in towns or villages designated by the Minister of War. They will wear the old troubadour costume, but they will not be the glad jongleurs who sang for love, not of country but of beauty, nor "tuned their pipes for fee."

NO MIXTURE ADVISED.

Dr. Fisk Believes Man Will Find Constructive Escapes.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In THE NEW YORK TIMES of Aug. 22 you reported Dr. Eugene Lyman Fisk, vice president of the Life Extension Institute, as saying that intense living has made deep inroads on the lives of middle-aged men, but that he "would be the last to suggest slowing down," and quoting him further as follows:

"Man has three outlets: intoxication, love and work. The chief American outlet is work. Through love, man may gain leisure. It is a good check on both intoxication and work. It's not a bad idea to mix the three about even."

Because of my long personal association with Dr. Fisk I queried him by wireless to the French liner Lafayette, on which he set sail on the day previous to your interview with him, asking whether he had been correctly quoted. Dr. Fisk has replied to me by wireless:

"Deny interview as stated. I quoted a French philosopher on three escapes from reality, but said it is better to love intensely than lead a sterile, narrow life. I did not say mix the three, but said work is the best outlet. Do what you can to correct. I said man employs three escapes, but I had abiding faith that he would find constructive rather than destructive escapes."

As is well known, Dr. Fisk in all his writings, including the book "Alcohol," for which I wrote the introduction, has consistently advocated total abstention from alcohol as a health measure.

After this unqualified statement it might be unnecessary to add that Dr. Fisk has for many years been a convinced prohibitionist, were it not for the currency that has already been given to a statement all too readily seized upon by the exponents of the wet cause. I hope that those who see this correction of his quoted views, which I have made at Dr. Fisk's request, will aid in spreading it among those who continue to misquote him. IRVING FISHER.

The Power Behind the Dollar.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. Gerard's list of rulers of America is admirably designed to increase our belief in the power of the dollar, and to make us forget the power that lies behind this alleged national symbol.

What a list of educators, statesmen, chemists, physicists, biologists, engineers and physicians one could present from whose labor has grown the very power that Mr. Gerard attributes to the dollar-maker!

It was not, to mention but one example, men of the class cited by Mr. Gerard who built the Panama Canal. This great national asset we owe to the foresight and courage of a President, the skill and personality of an engineer and the newly acquired experience of a doctor and his entomological associates; for, in the last analysis, the success of this stupendous undertaking rests not on the power of the dollar, but on our knowledge of the habits of a mosquito! IN ANSWER.

I have no grief for him who far away
  Beyond his native hills saw twilight bring
A quiet closing to his life's brave day,
  The gift of peace through which no thrushes sing.

As lightly as one lifts a latch and sees
  Blue vistas of loved hills beyond the door,
Old loved paths of home, familiar trees,
  He saw content the hills he hungered for.

Deeper than life, the weight of worlds that rest
  Upon the heart, the truth that love reveals;
For we discover at the ended quest
  That dusk remembers what the day conceals!

GRANGER GOES FAR BACK.

Term Applied to Master Farmers in England in 1112.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I was very much interested in the letter in THE TIMES of July 29 from Judson C. Welliver, in which he suggests that the term "granger," as applied to laws limiting or regulating railroad charges, may have been derived from one Flavel K. Granger, who was a member of the lower branch of the Illinois Legislature during the regular sessions from 1873 to 1879 inclusive, representing McHenry and Lake Counties, and not, as popularly supposed, from the organization known as the National Grange of the Patrons of Husbandry.

Mr. Granger, apparently, reappeared in public life some twenty years later, being elected to the Senate of Illinois in 1896. He was born in Wayne County, N. Y., but went to Illinois in 1853, where he was admitted to the bar in 1855, but his principal business seems to have been that of a dealer in grain and live stock. He was Speaker of the lower branch of the Illinois Legislature during the last half of his service.

On the negative side I find that "granger" laws were passed in Illinois and Minnesota in 1871; that is, two years before Mr. Granger's legislative service began. Folwell refers to the Minnesota law as follows:

"Chapter 24 of the General Laws of Minnesota, approved on March 6, 1871, was the first of the so-called 'granger acts.' It declared all railroads in the State to be public highways and prescribed reasonable maximum fares and rates. Passenger fare was limited to 5 cents per mile. * * * The maximum rate on farm produce was fixed at 6 cents per ton per mile up to twenty miles, 5 cents from twenty to fifty miles, 4 cents from fifty to one hundred miles and 3½ cents for distances over one hundred miles. For less than carload lots the rate was 20 per cent higher. The merchandise rate was 25 per cent above that on farm products."—History of Minnesota, Volume III, pp. 40-1.

Moreover, the term "granger" appears to have been applied to master farmers throughout a very long period. The Oxford Dictionary gives references to that effect extending as far back as the year 1112.

USE OF PIANO INCREASING.

Radio Has Not Turned Instrument Into a "White Elephant."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In THE TIMES of Aug. 27 William C. Jones, chief inspector of the Tenement House Department, is quoted as follows:

"Mr. Jones said the inspectors had found that the radio was so popular that families looked upon their pianos as 'white elephants.' In fact, rather than pay $10 for moving them, he said, the modern New York City family leaves 'the piano high and dry in the old apartment for the landlord to worry over.' The old piano is then virtually 'thrown out'; it is shoved into the hallway and there becomes a fire menace. Inspectors in the Tenement House Department have in several instances had to fight the 'piano hazard,' he said. One such instance in Harlem was cited. The piano had been seized by the owner of the building when a tenant's rent was in arrears. The incoming tenant, owning a radio and having no use for the piano, moved it into the hall, and the tenement house inspectors had to remove it."

I have been active in the piano industry in New York for over thirty years and deny the truth of the statement that the popularity of the radio has made New York householders look upon their pianos as "white elephants." I deny that anybody of common sense leaves a good piano of musical worth behind him as junk in a vacated apartment. Worthless pianos, like worthless automobiles, should be "junked."

The fact is the radio has helped the piano industry. The piano is the basic musical instrument of yesterday, today and tomorrow. Our future great musical composers will produce their masterpieces by its aid as in the past. It speaks the universal language understood alike by every race and creed—the language of the soul.

Good pianos are now in demand; more than 2,500,000 children in America are learning to play them; 240,000 piano teachers are instructing these children; our public schools in many States have added piano instruction to their curricula. The future of the piano industry looks bright.

Mr. Jones jumped to a hasty and erroneous conclusion when he assumed that the piano is becoming a "white elephant" amid the lares and penates of any cultured New York home. JOHN J. GLYNN.

Dr. Schmidt Excepts.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There is an impression that I was concerned in a discussion of the political situation in Russia at the International Conference of Agricultural Economists at Cornell University, but I did not wish to introduce any political aspects into the discussion of the conference. The only questions I asked the Russians were purely economical. It is true that attention of the delegates has been called to the fact of the alleged arrest of Chajanoff and Kondratjeff. But it was not I who raised this question. Neither did I head any group that was trying to introduce a resolution against the Russians.

Dr. Alice Masaryk Not Here.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Referring to an article in THE TIMES today entitled "Miss Masaryk Recalls Term in Prison in Plea for Convicts," I beg to draw your attention to the fact that the phrase "now in the United States" applies not to Dr. Alice Masaryk, but to her sister, Olga Revilliod-Masaryk, who was for a short time in the United States on a study trip and left New York on the Ile de France on Aug. 27. It was Dr. Alice Masaryk who was in prison in Vienna.

LEGUIA'S GIFT TO HOOVER.

If It Is an Inca Rug It Cannot Be 2,000 Years Old.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The account of the downfall of the Leguia régime in Peru which appears in THE TIMES of Aug. 26 contains the following paragraph: "Before Mr. Hoover left Lima President Leguia, in the name of his government, presented Mr. Hoover with one of the finest Inca rugs in existence. It was a fabric dating back, it was said, to the Inca kings of more than 2,000 years ago. It was found in the tomb of one of the Inca kings."

Whoever made the statement that the fabric dated back to the Inca kings of more than 2,000 years ago must have been crassly ignorant, for the public of today is well aware that there were no "Inca kings" in Peru 2,000 years ago. At that time the only people in Peru capable of making a "rug" of artistic importance were the so-called Early Chimu folk, who dwelt along the northern half of the Peruvian coast and whose colorful and imposing civilization flourished there from about the time of Christ (or a century or so earlier) to about 600 A. D.

The assertion that the rug was found in "the tomb of one of the Inca kings" is even more comical. The Inca dynasty—not a race, be it noted—began its spectacular rise toward imperial power at Cuzco, in the southern highlands of Peru, about 1100 A. D. From that time until 1530, when Francisco Pizarro and his followers entered the land, a line of twelve rulers governed the ever-growing empire of Ttahua-ntin-suyu (Land of the Four Parts), which, by 1530, was equal in area to that part of our country which lies east of the Alleghanies.

The term "Inca" can never be used correctly to designate a race. In its earlier days it was the name of a small tribe, and later it came to be a title of an imperial dynasty. The word "Inca" is analogous, therefore, to the word "Pharaoh" in Egypt and to the "Caesar" in Rome. Like them, it was a name that had become a title.

Properly speaking, the later rulers of the Inca dynasty had no tombs. They, with their respective coyas or empresses, were mummified and set up in the Temple of the Sun at Cuzco, the Incas being in the fane of the sun itself and coyas in that of the moon, sister-spouse of the sun. To this rule there are exceptions; for the resting-places of the first three or four Incas are not known and the burial places of Huascar and Atahualpa are not recorded because of the tumult arising out of the Spanish conquest.

So far my comment has been of a destructive kind. I would like, therefore, to say that if Mr. Hoover himself or some friend or associate of his will cause a good photograph of the rug to be sent to me I shall be happy to do my best to tell what it really is. My conjecture, in my present state of ignorance concerning the appearance of the fabric, would be that it is not a rug at all, but that, rather, it is a tapestry either of the Tiahuanaco period (600-900 A. D.) or else an embroidered shawl of the Early Nazca period (about 200-600 A. D.). In either case the fabric is far from unique in this country, museums in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, Cleveland, Chicago and elsewhere being rich in treasures of this kind.

PHILIP AINSWORTH MEANS.

Harmony in Ireland.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I had the privilege of visiting Ireland during the Summer of 1929 and found in the places which I visited, Belfast, Monaghan, Killarney and Cork, the people very appreciative of the things they have or are trying to accomplish under the most difficult circumstances, huge taxes, lack of proper facilities, &c.

The people with whom I talked recognized the need for more free schools, with compulsory attendance during the school term, and are correcting a long-standing evil as quickly as their means will allow.

I did not see any night life in Ireland modeled on the café night life of the Continental cities; instead, I found groups of people in the various hotels and restaurants talking about the same things that interest us in this country, mainly the newest fiction, repeating some harmless gossip, teasing each other about the money they won in the Belfast automobile races, and through it all the unfailing sense of humor which makes the Irish people the most courteous, as well as the best loved by those that know them.

The charge that they are unable to agree with each other is refuted by the fact that they maintained their governing body longer than any other country in Europe. Any criticism directed at the government was along healthy lines and should result in constructive improvements, but never was it destructive or intolerant. A. A. CALLAHAN.

Safety for Passers-By.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

While it is fair to assume that the contractors erecting the new City Bank Farmers Trust Company Building, at Exchange Place and William Street, are not unmindful of their obligation to safeguard the public, the recent accident there makes it evident that the protection to passers-by is wholly inadequate on this project. None of the four streets surroundings the building averages more than twenty-five feet from curb to curb, so that no one can pass the building at a distance greater than thirty feet, even by using the outer sidewalks. These sidewalks have no canopy protection. The inner sidewalks have, but during most of the job so far they have been closed to the public, forcing everybody out into the open. SAFETY FIRST.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I read in THE TIMES an article headed "Three Brooklyn Families Raise Own Figs; Trees in Back Yards Yield Abundant Crops."

I have two fig trees in my back yard, one four years old, about 12 feet high, and one about three years old, about 9 feet high. The four-year-old tree bears at least 500 figs and the three-year-old tree bears about fifty figs. PETER CORIGLIANO.

Talks With Witnesses of the Tragedy and With Authorities at Magescq.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 1.—The body of Marcellus Hartley Dodge Jr., who was killed on Friday in a motor accident near Bordeaux, was brought to Paris last night and will be sent to the United States on the liner Ile de France sailing from Havre on Sept. 4, it was announced tonight by the secretary to the Dodge family, Raymond L. Patterson, when he arrived today in Dax, where the body was taken after the wreck.

Mr. Patterson went today from Dax to Magescq to inspect the scene of the accident in which young Dodge's car struck a tree and was practically demolished. The secretary interviewed the village authorities and residents, examined the wreckage of the car and took charge of the baggage and the various effects, all of which were saved with the exception of a suitcase, which was burned. He learned that Dodge suffered a fractured skull and the carotid artery was severed, so that death was instantaneous. He also conversed with Paul Theau Audin and Andre Dupin, young Frenchmen who succeeded in rescuing Dodge's body and his companion, Ralph Applegate, from the blazing car.

At the clinic of Dr. Riberol in Dax, young Applegate is suffering from a fractured leg and other serious injuries but was said to be on the way to recovery, although in a state of mental depression due to Dodge's death.

Photographs of the wrecked car reaching Paris today show that the entire front of the car was demolished and the engine driven tight against the back of the driver's seat.

RIVER CHANNEL DISPUTE IN MIDDLE WEST ENDED

Hurley, at Twin Cities, Says Administration Favors Upper Mississippi Dredging Project.

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 1 (AP).—Reconciliation of the divergent viewpoints on the nine-foot upper Mississippi River channel was announced by Secretary Hurley today after a conference between him and his advisers and representatives of interests of the Twin Cities.

The agreement carried with it the understanding that the Hoover Administration was emphatically in favor of the ultimate construction of a nine-foot channel for the upper river.

Mr. Hurley's contention was that local interests could not expect to bind the administration within the period of the five-year waterways program. Such a program, he said, would be a physical impossibility and supporters of the project agreed in effect.

The agreement, which came after a two-hour conference, ends the outstanding divergent viewpoints between local interests and army officials and is considered one of the most important reached in recent years. Announcement of the agreement was made by the Secretary in his luncheon address, which was broadcast.

"In the past, rivers have been improved with a view to local needs," he said, "but the transportation problem is a national rather than a local one. Agriculture is not a localized industry * * * We must develop a unified national system. Waterways must connect important cities and areas of the interior of our country."

Mr. Hurley tonight was steaming down the Mississippi River aboard the Engineering Department's boat General Allen.

All three were charged with burglary. John Brown was taken to City Hospital in a critical condition. He denied having participated in the crime, but the others implicated him, according to the police.

SWIM ASHORE HAULING FIVE WOMEN TO SAFETY

New Yorker and Friend Tug Dory in Darkness From Damaged Sloop Off Scituate, Mass.

Special to The New York Times.

SCITUATE, Mass., Sept. 1.—Momentarily expecting their thirty-foot sloop, Sea Gull, to sink among the rocks of Long Ledge in a heavy fog early today after it had drifted helplessly all night, Richard Kingsbury of New York, a Scituate Summer resident, and his week-end guest, George Keerstead of Framingham, transferred five women companions into an oarless dory, jumped into the sea and, tugging on the boat's painter, pulled it ashore after half an hour of swimming.

While the men blindly hauled the skiff through the fog blanket in what they hoped was the direction of the shore, the screams of the women aroused Summer residents of Scituate Beach, who rushed to the shore and directed the swimmers to safety by shouting.

Mr. Kingsbury and his party became becalmed early last evening. Attempts to attract attention from other craft were futile, and, as darkness and fog shut them in, their shouts failed to bring help.

The sloop struck the ledge at about 3 A. M. After being towed ashore by the men the members of the party were given stimulants by the beach residents and later returned to Mr. Kingsbury's home.

The women in the party included Mr. Kingsbury's wife, their daughter, Dorothy; Miss Marion Keerstead, niece of Mr. Kingsbury's fellow rescuer; Miss Grace Petersob of Cambridge and Mrs. Arthur Reading of New York.

The North Scituate Coast Guard crew, summoned by telephone, later succeeded in pulling the damaged sloop off the rocks and towing it to Scituate harbor.

ANNE NICHOLS PREFERS CAREER TO A HUSBAND

Blames Ex-Fiance's Breakdown to Her Refusal—He Reaches Her Ranch for Rest Cure.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 1 (AP).—Asserting her erstwhile fiancé, the Marquis William de Lignemare, was suffering a nervous disorder developed after she had broken her engagement to him, Anne Nichols, playwright, today disclosed she had sent him to her Encino (Cal.) ranch for a rest cure.

"It was my fault for breaking our engagement," Miss Nichols told newspaper reporters as an ambulance waited at a San Pedro pier to take the Marquis to the ranch. "I feel morally responsible for what has happened. I must do what I can to make up for it. That is why I have arranged for him to stay at my ranch as long as necessary, in hope rest and quiet will bring about a cure."

The Marquis, former attaché at the French Embassy at Washington, for several years was Miss Nichols's business manager, then her fiancé.

"Our business association led to romance," Miss Nichols said. "We became engaged. And then I realized that if we were married it would mean the end of my career. All my life I have been associated with the theatre, either as an actress, producer or writer. I have been free to work as I wished. And I knew that marriage would make a difference, so I broke the engagement, although I have the greatest respect and admiration for him. He is a wonderful man, but I don't want a husband."

WOMAN'S DEATH A MYSTERY

Body Found in New Jersey Creek Is Still Unidentified.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 1.—Dr. I. E. Leonard, acting county physician, said he had not yet been able to determine whether the woman whose body was found in Hospital Creek, near the Longport end of the Longport-Somers Point Boulevard, yesterday had been the victim of foul play or not.

The body, which is still unidentified, was taken from the creek by Coast Guardmen.

"The woman was expensively clad," said Dr. Leonard, "and gave evidence of refinement. She had evidently been in the water from ten days to two weeks. On the finger of one hand was a costly three-stone green ring, but little else that might serve to identify her."

SIMON FLEISCHMANN, BUFFALO LAWYER, DIES

He Studied in Office of President Cleveland—Held Offices in City Government.

Special to The New York Times.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 1.—Simon Fleischmann, attorney, who had been practicing for forty years, died of heart disease yesterday at his home here after an illness of a month.

He served on important committees of the county, State and national bar associations, having been appointed by Charles Evans Hughes in 1924 to serve on a committee dealing with law reform. Chief Justice Hughes then was president of the American bar.

He read law in the office of Cleveland, Bissell & Sicard and served with the firm for a time after being admitted to the bar. He prepared briefs for Grover Cleveland, who later became President. One of his schoolmates in old Central High School was Miss Frances Folsom, who later became Mrs. Cleveland.

For twenty years he was organist in Buffalo churches and in 1904 was made official organist of Buffalo. He inaugurated a service of free Sunday afternoon recitals.

When the New York State Bar Association met here in 1923, Mr. Fleischmann proposed a plan whereby a man indicted or threatened with indictment under an untested law might enjoin further proceedings until the constitutionality of the law could be settled. He advocated this right of injunction in instances where untested laws are involved as a way to put an end to the "irreparable mischief" caused by hasty, prejudiced or political prosecutions which may cause a defendant misery or even drive him to suicide, even though the law be later declared invalid.

SITE TAKEN BY KAHN FOR OPERA IS SOLD

FOUR BIG BUILDINGS IN PLAN

Central Garden, 80 by 400 Feet, to Separate Structures Designed for Moderate-Priced Homes.

Announcement was made yesterday of the sale by Otto H. Kahn of the property in West Fifty-seventh Street between Eighth and Ninth Avenues purchased by him about three and a half years ago as a site for a new home for the Metropolitan Opera.

Definite abandonment of the plot as a site by the Metropolitan Opera and Real Estate Company, the holding corporation for the Metropolitan Opera, has finally prompted Mr. Kahn, it was said, to sell the property to Henry Mandel of 10 East Fortieth Street, who, together with Mr. Kahn, controls the stock of the Wolab Realty Corporation. A group of modern residential buildings for persons of average means will be built on the land.

The property comprises a plot of 72,000 square feet, extending from 330-60 West Fifty-seventh Street, running through to 333-57 West Fifty-sixth Street, just east of Ninth Avenue. The architects, Farrar & Watmough, have prepared plans for four large buildings, two of which will front on each street, the entire group to contain 1,624 rooms, divided into 582 apartments. The Fifty-seventh Street side of the plot will have two eighteen-story penthouse buildings, while the Fifty-sixth Street side will have two eleven-story and penthouse buildings, the two groups being separated by a great central garden almost 400 feet long and more than eighty feet wide.

Mr. Mandel was represented in the purchase by Edmund W. Van Voorhis and the firm of Maass & Davidson. Mr. Kahn was represented by Strook & Strook. William Zeckendorff, vice president of Leonard S. Gans Company, Inc., was the broker. The purchase price was not announced.

Mr. Kahn's original offer of the property as a site for a new opera house met at first with the approval of the Metropolitan Opera authorities, but opposition, said to have been led by Robert W. Goelet and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, developed later and the property was rejected, largely on the contention, it was said, that the neighborhood was not suitable.

Mr. Kahn announced then that he would hold the site while the opera holding corporation searched for another. He doubted that the building committee could find another place so desirable within the opera holding company's price range, but he expressed a willingness to concur in the selection of an alternative plot if one suitable could be found.

Failure met also subsequent negotiations conducted by the Metropolitan Opera and Real Estate Company for the erection of a new opera on part of the Fifth Avenue property between Forty-eighth and Fifty-first Streets leased by John D. Rockefeller from Columbia University. The sale of Mr. Kahn's property leaves the Metropolitan without any prospective site for a new home, as far as could be learned yesterday.

WARD ACTS TO WIDEN EWALD CASE TODAY

Attorney General Will Confer Here With Bar Leaders on Traffic in Offices.

MACRERY CASE PRESSED

Dr. Norris Says He Is Ready to Exhume Body of Magistrate if Evidence Warrants.

PANKEN ATTACKS WALKER

Asks Socialist Leaders to Meet Him on a Plan to Impeach the Mayor.

With three separate agencies scheduled to resume this morning inquiries into the Healy-Ewald case, former Municipal Court Justice Jacob Panken, Socialist candidate for Congress in the Fourteenth District, said last night that he hoped to call a conference of Socialist leaders today to consider the formulation of charges against Mayor Walker.

If such a conference meets and decides to forward to Governor Roosevelt "charges leading to Mayor Walker's removal from office," as Mr. Panken expressed it, the specifications, he said, would probably be based on "misfeasance in office, neglect and taking orders from Tammany Hall."

Despite the fact that Mr. Panken said that he was in favor of placing such charges before the Governor, if Governor Roosevelt would "take them seriously," it was learned last night that Norman Thomas and other leaders of the Socialist party probably would not favor the formulation of charges.

Mr. Panken declared that the conference certainly would be held "sometime," if he was unable to notify all of the party's leaders today.

Mr. Panken's announcement followed closely a statement by Senator John Knight, Republican leader in the State Senate, who again urged a centralized investigation of the Healy-Ewald case and of New York's judiciary, with powers broad enough to act on all charges of corruption.

Macrery Body May Be Exhumed.

Meantime, Dr. Charles Norris, Chief Medical Examiner, announced that if the evidence presented in the Attorney General's inquiry should warrant it, he is prepared to apply for a Supreme Court order to exhume the body of Magistrate Andrew Macrery and resume his investigation into circumstances surrounding that magistrate's death with an autopsy as a starting point.

Magistrate Macrery died in the office of Dr. Max Greenwald, a heart specialist, at 38 West Sixty-ninth Street on Aug. 21, 1929. He had been taken to the doctor's office in a taxicab from the office of Andrew B. Keating in the Chanin Building. Keating is Tammany leader of the Thirteenth Assembly District and he and Magistrate Macrery and Herman Bitterman, who is associated with Keating in the real estate business, had been in conference during most of that afternoon.

Some weeks after the death of Magistrate Macrery, Edward V. Broderick, who was campaign manager for Patrick S. Dowd, Keating's rival in the fight for the leadership of the Thirteenth Assembly District, charged in a speech that Macrery died of a beating received when he refused to pay the final $10,000 instalment of $30,000 he was to have paid for his reappointment. Broderick asserted he had obtained this story from Wallace Macrery, a brother of the magistrate. No autopsy was performed, Dr. Norris explained last night, because the family opposed it. Moreover, he said, there was no evidence whatsoever to support the theory that Magistrate Macrery had received a beating.

Ward to Begin Inquiry Today.

While Attorney General Hamilton Ward, who has been entrusted by the Governor with the investigation of charges that former Magistrate George F. Ewald paid $10,000 to Martin J. Healy, Tammany district leader, to get his appointment, was on his way here with his first assistant, Thomas Penney Jr., to begin a preliminary examination of witnesses, Senator Knight discussed the scope of the various investigations to date.

Mr. Knight praised the plan of Representative Fiorella H. La Guardia for a general John Doe inquiry into the judiciary of all the five boroughs. Mr. La Guardia's plan called for the appointment of the Attorney General by Governor Roosevelt to supersede the various District Attorneys and for the calling of special terms of the grand jury in each borough before which the Attorney General could present evidence.

Mr. Panken's statement was an amplification of a statement given out by the Socialist party on Sunday, in which he charged that the Mayor knows of the "underhand methods by which the choice of Tammany ward heelers to fill vacancies on the Municipal Court Bench" has been made, and of the general existence of "fixers" in those courts, which he described as "nests of corruption."

If specific charges are formulated, Mr. Panken said, he would group them under three general heads: misfeasance in office in that he reappointed men to public office who had previously been dismissed under charges; neglect, in failure to investigate before appointing magistrates and justices of the Municipal Court, and "taking orders from Tammany Hall" by appointing to public office persons recommended by the Tammany organization.

Mr. Ward will have an important conference today with Charles C. Burlingham, president of the Bar Association and Henry W. Taft, president of the County Lawyers' Association on the scope of Mr. Ward's inquiry. He has been limited by the Governor to the Ewald case, but leading lawyers have held that the special grand jury to which he will begin presenting evidence on Sept. 15 will have the power to investigate the other charges of office buying. More than twenty letters received by the Attorney General accusing Supreme Court Justices, Municipal Court Justices and magistrates of reaching their positions by bribery will also be discussed, it was understood.

Tommaney to Be Questioned Today.

Prior to the conference Thomas T. Tommaney, chief clerk to Sheriff Farley, whose resignation or dismissal from that office is expected today, will be questioned by Mr. Ward or his assistants. Tommaney has admitted getting a loan of $10,000 from Mrs. Bertha Ewald for Healy, just prior to the appointment of Mrs. Ewald's husband as a magistrate. Healy, himself, who it has been reported, will soon step down as Tammany leader of the Nineteenth Assembly District, and Mrs. Ewald are scheduled to appear tomorrow and other material witnesses numbering about twenty, and reported to include both Mayor Walker and George W. Olvany, will be questioned later in the week.

At the same time, Robert S. Conklin, one of Mr. Ward's assistants, will resume his investigation today of charges made in several letters he has received that the death of the late Magistrate Andrew Macrery was caused by a beating administered because the Magistrate failed to pay the last installment on the alleged price of his appointment. Mr. Conklin expects to serve several subpoenas today. Previous investigations have not supported the charge.

United States Attorney Tuttle will begin before a new grand jury this morning an inquiry into Healy's income for 1928 and 1929. Healy has already been indicted for failure to file an income tax return for 1927.

District Attorney Crain will start his examination this morning of the records in the case of Jacob Cash, ousted city marshal, preparatory to the possible institution of a John Doe inquiry into Cash's charge that he paid $2,000 to Healy.

The forwarding of the records to Mr. Crain followed the institution by Cash last week of a $225,000 slander suit against the Mayor.

Air Ride Pleases Woman, 85, Who First Rode in an Ox Cart

Special to The New York Times.

ROOSEVELT FIELD, L. I., Sept. 1.—With snow-white hair and mellowed complexion well concealed behind helmet and goggles, Mrs. Anna Smith, 85 years old, who first traveled on Long Island at a velocity of two miles an hour in an ox cart, was taken in her grandnephew's Bird biplane for her first ride in the air today from this field. Mrs. Smith, who said she could recall four-day trips by buggy made by her father between Amityville and New York some seventy years ago, announced herself converted to aviation. Russell Schultz of Valley Stream piloted the plane.

She lives at 270 Cypress Avenue, Flushing, with her grandnephew. Before going aloft she tried to persuade her great-grandniece, Louise, 3 years old, to go along, but the child refused.

SECRET COMMITTEE TO SIFT QUEENS GRAFT

Central Civic Council Will Pick Five Men in Response to Walker's Appeal.

A secret committee of five representative citizens of Queens will be appointed tomorrow by Henry J. Haarmeyer, president of the Central Queens Allied Civic Council, to investigate all charges of graft against city officials and present the results of their inquiry directly to Mayor Walker. On the recommendation of the board of directors of the council, which represents 59,000 members of civic associations in Queens, Mr. Haarmeyer announced yesterday that "the council is taking Mayor Walker at his face value" and will attempt to give him the cooperation he requested last week from metropolitan civic groups in his investigation of graft complaints.

"We have decided to act for ourselves and not through any Manhattan organization," said Mr. Haarmeyer, "and after a thorough investigation of every complaint we will present our findings directly to the Mayor.

"I have already received several complaints, but in each case I have warned the complainants to go slow. We are not going to act on hearsay. Every complaint must be accompanied by at least one affidavit, and no complaint will reach the Mayor which has not been thoroughly and conscientiously investigated."

The committee will act secretly in the interests of the citizens who make the graft charges, many of whom are unwilling to make complaints in the face of attending publicity, Mr. Haarmeyer said.

"Working secretly, I am sure the committee will be better able to accomplish its work and, when all is said and done, it is the information that counts and not who gets or gives it. We are going to make certain that every charge we make can be sustained in court," he declared.

The personnel of the committee will probably include a lawyer, a business man, a clergyman and two other citizens of Queens whose integrity is of the highest order, Mr. Haarmeyer declared.

He would not reveal the nature of the complaints already made.

Mr. Haarmeyer also appointed a committee of fourteen members, headed by Alfred H. Merz of St. Albans, Queen, to investigate increases in the budget of the Borough of Queens as submitted to the Board of Estimate by Borough President Harvey. The committee will include the chairmen of the committees on health, highways, hospitals, parks, public utilities, public safety, sewers, taxes, transportation and education.

Swims Away, Believed Drowned.

A young man not yet identified is believed to have been drowned in "the Gap," a Hudson River channel off Jersey City at Washington Street. He left a straw suitcase and some clothing at the foot of Washington Street and dived into the water early yesterday afternoon. A ferry operator saw him swimming some distance from shore and then lost sight of him. The police believe he was caught in floating débris and drowned.

Hugenberg Becomes Suddenly Ill.

BOCHUM, Germany, Sept. 1 (AP).—Dr. Alfred Hugenberg, former Minister of Finance, became suddenly ill here tonight and was forced to cancel a political speech. Physicians said that the Nationalist leader's ailment was not serious.

SPEEDY NORSE CREW WINS LIFEBOAT RACE

Americans Finish Fourth, but Break World's Record in Liners' Annual Regatta.

CROWDS LINE RIVER COURSE

Garcia & Diaz Eight Takes Second Place and British Third Amid Collegiate Din.

Thirty-two young men who never had been to college pulled smoothly down the Hudson River yesterday for the lifeboat racing championship of the world. Each desperately earnest young man held the A. B. degree of an able-bodied seaman, and the alma maters for whom they were respectively striving were four ocean-going liners.

A large proportion of New York's home-staying population jammed the shore and packed the sidewalks on Riverside Drive along the two-mile course, giving the regatta the necessary noise and color. Whatever added college spirit was needed came from several thousand cheering sailors on the great gray warships which formed the other side of the lane.

Tooting tugs and scores of smaller craft followed the four unwieldy boats as they moved down the river to the beat of precise and flashing oars. The crew from the Extavia of the American Export Line was running a poor fourth and America's chances of taking the trophy seemed slim in the face of the heart-breaking smoothness of the leading eight, which hailed from the Stavangerfjord of the Norwegian-America Line.

Americans Spurt in Vain.

Not far behind the leader came the strongly rowing crew of the Sud Africano of Garcia & Diaz. The lifeboat from the Cunarder Mauretania ran third and great gaps of open water showed between it and the outdistanced Americans. The cheering of the sailors died down and even the sirens of the excursion steamers and tugs sounded a melancholy note.

In approved regatta style, one of the tugs butted its nose into the racing lane and the Norwegian boat began to shake unsteadily in the wash. But a vigilant police cutter warned the trespasser back into its place, and the struggle went on.

At the half-way mark, just below Columbia University, the Extavia crew began to pull up on its British rival. Inch by inch the gap closed, and, though there was no hope of victory for the Americans, the crowds seized the opportunity to go wild with the desperate fervor of freshmen who had staked their money on a forlorn hope.

The Stavangerfjord's crew pulled up off Eightieth Street, the winner by three good lengths. A few seconds later the Sud Africano's stalwarts swept by the finish line. The American crew was now only a matter of inches behind the British, and the volume of noise was terrific. The two boats strained to the finish.

But the British nosed over first, leaving the Americans only the consolation of having beaten the world's record for the annual race. The winner's time for the two-mile course, from 120th to Eightieth Street, was 13 minutes 48 seconds, far below the record of 17 minutes 11 seconds.

Crowd Sees Trophies Awarded.

The Garcia & Diaz organization, having won two of the previous races, would have come into permanent possession of the Commodore William T. Todd Trophy, if it had won yesterday's race. The Norwegian-America Line now has one leg on the trophy, a large silver cup. In addition to the Todd Trophy, the United Drydocks Corporation donated a cup to the winning crew, and the Neptune Association gave cups to the second and third boats. Gold, silver and bronze medals for first, second and third places also were awarded by the Neptune Association.

The presentations were made immediately after the finish by Miss Jane Milliken, 7-year-old daughter of John F. Milliken, secretary-treasurer of the association, on the pier at the foot of West Eightieth Street. The pier was jammed with cheering spectators, who were kept in hand by a squad of police.

The starting gun was fired aboard the Coast Guard patrol boat 168 at 12:10 P. M. The start was perfect and a few strokes pulled the Stavangerfjord boat into a lead which she never surrendered. Each boat was numbered for the race and could be identified by the company house-flag in the bow and the national flag in the stern. Greasing of bottoms was not permitted this year, and each boat was weighed in before the race and ballasted if under 4,500 pounds.

Those in the winning boat were F. Nexdixe, coxswain; G. Svenden, stroke; K. Andal, L. Mevik, P. Holette, H. Utstrand, S. Olsen, J. Faanes and R. Roertvait.

Robert L. Hague, general manager of the Standard Shipping Company, was referee. The judges were Captain H. Doxrud, representing Norway; S. Paterson, representing Great Britain, and Captain D. J. Sullivan, representing the United States. Paul R. Smith of the Roosevelt Steamship Company was the starter, and Field Brittle of United Drydocks was timekeeper.

In extenuation of the Extavia's poor showing it was said that the Americans had had only two days' notice to prepare for the race and had practiced only three times. The boat was the only metal one in the race and proved too broad and too high out of the water to be handled easily. The Americans have yet to win their first race in the competition.

HOLMES BACKS WALDMAN.

Pastor, Pledging Aid to Socialist, Calls Both Major Parties Corrupt.

John Haynes Holmes, who though a non-Socialist supported Norman Thomas in the Mayoralty campaign last year, will support Louis Waldman, Socialist candidate for Governor, at the coming State election, according to a letter he has sent to Mr. Waldman, who made public the text yesterday.

"What candidates the two other parties nominate is a matter of not the slightest interest to me," the letter reads. "They will in both cases be nothing but respectable show-fronts of the two most corrupt and disreputable gangs of politicians with which any State is cursed at the present moment."

The letter pronounces Mr. Waldman, in contrast, "a devoted idealist pledged to the public weal and one fitted by knowledge and experience for the office of Governor."

Bandits Disarm Two Policemen, Steal $12,000, Including 30,000 Nickels, at Playland, Rye

Special to The New York Times.

RYE, N. Y., Sept. 1.—Two patrolmen gnashed their teeth behind the bars of their own cells in the police station at Playland Park, Rye Beach, early this morning while a few feet away hold-up men armed with sawed-off shotguns made their escape with $12,000 in cash, holiday receipts at Westchester County's amusement ground.

Patrolman Patrick Brudder was standing in the doorway of the station, located in the administration building, at about 4:30 o'clock when a large automobile drew up at the curb. Dawn was breaking, and in the early light Brudder saw three men leap from the car. One of them made straight for him, with a shotgun held at his hip.

"C'mon, get inside!" ordered the man with the shotgun. There was nothing for Brudder to do but obey. He was marched to a cell, and a moment later the iron door clanged behind him. His captor remained outside, commanding silence on the strength of his gun.

Meanwhile the man's two confederates were enacting their part in the plot. One, armed with a shotgun, stood guard beside the automobile, while the third, pistol in hand, entered the door of the cashier's office, ten feet from the entrance to the police station. There Victor Sturgeon, cashier, was preparing the money for the bank.

The safe stood in an inner office behind a locked door. After a few brief remarks to Sturgeon, who stood with his hands high in the air, the gunman ordered him face down on the floor and bound him hand and foot with stout cord. He then broke out a panel in the door leading to the safe, which was open. It contained $5,000 in bills and $7,000 in coin, with 30,000 nickels included in the latter.

It was while the gunman was lugging the cash to the automobile that Patrolman Frank Brown walked into view. The lookout at the automobile was alert and ready. Brown was marched into the police station and became Brudder's cellmate. Sturgeon was locked in another cell.

With the loot stowed in the car, the bandits got into the automobile and the three imprisoned men heard the roar of the motor as they drove off. The patrolmen and cashier were released later by the third member of the county park police who was on duty this morning.

PARKING BAN BACK IN THEATRE ZONE

Police Also Restore No-Turn Traffic Rule Suspended During Summer.

SOME CONFUSION RESULTS

All the Signs Not Changed in Time for Rush of Returning Holiday Motorists.

The no-parking, no-turn regulations during the early theatre hours, which were suspended during the Summer, were put into effect again last night in the area between Thirty-ninth and Fifty-second Streets, west of Sixth Avenue and east of Eighth Avenue.

During the Summer motorists were allowed to park their cars in the theatre district in the early evening, but not between 10:30 and 11:30 P. M., when the theatres were letting out. From now on there will be no parking in the district between 7:45 and 9 P. M. nor from 10:30 to 11:30 P. M.

In addition, no turns, neither right nor left, may be made on Seventh Avenue or on Broadway between Forty-second and Fiftieth Streets. The no-parking, no-turn ban applies to motor buses and taxicabs as well as to ordinary pleasure vehicles, and the restriction against trucks in the theatre district continues.

There was some slight confusion last night when the regulations went back into force because the painters for the Police Department have not changed all the parking signs. On many corners there was no warning against the early evening parking, with the result that motorists kept sliding into the curb, prepared to leave their cars.

Captain McCarthy, head of Traffic D, had 100 men in the theatre district to enforce the regulations and to warn motorists where the Summer signs have not been replaced. The men had orders either to notify motorists that the old regulations had been resumed or to issue summonses.

The traffic force had a warm night of it last night because the city was thronged with thousands of cars pouring in from the country and the seashore, and wherever a patrolman had to explain to a motorist that the old rule against parking had been resumed a long line of impatient drivers became blocked.

The practice of towing in cars that violate the parking regulations in the theatre district has been abandoned. The patrolmen have orders to issue summonses to offending motorists instead. In some instances last night they had to wait for an hour or two to serve the summons.

WOMAN LEAPS FROM PLANE

Miss La Balter Drops 500 Feet Before Opening Parachute.

Special to The New York Times.

TETERBORO, N. J., Sept. 1.—Dropping from an airplane at an altitude of 3,000 feet, Miss Bernie La Balter, 22 years old, of Paterson, who established a world's record for women parachute jumpers yesterday, thrilled a crowd of 3,500 watchers by falling 500 feet before pulling her parachute string.

After a safe landing near the Wright hangar Miss La Balter announced that within two weeks she would try to beat the parachute record for men, which now stands at 25,000 feet. Her jump today was a feature of the regular Sunday and holiday air circus held for visitors to the field.

Hiram Johnson Joins Law Firm.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 1 (AP).—Senator Hiram Johnson today joined the law firm of Sullivan & Barry & Theodore J. Roach. "Apparently Congressional sessions will return to 'normalcy,'" Senator Johnson said. "I doubt if President Hoover will ever call another special session, and thus the full opportunity is afforded me again to engage in the practice of my profession and attend as well to my Senatorial duties."

BELITTLES PERIL TO FLOATING HOME

Lord of 5-Room Craft in East River Admits Taking In Water, but Scoffs at Sinking Reports.

JUST SENDS WIFE AWAY

Keeps Terrier Pet, Ties Up Nearer Shore and Proceeds to Make Repairs for the Winter.

Julius Almstaedt had his floating five-room apartment safely tied up last night at the shore end of the 150-foot pier at the foot of East Twenty-ninth Street, just off the north end of Bellevue Hospital, and was busy making changes for the Winter.

He had assured the marine division of the Police Department that his home was safe and that he, the third Mrs. Almstaedt and Tete, their fox-terrier pet, were in no danger of going to the bottom of the East River, as had been reported. Dr. Rhodin of Bellevue Hospital had seen the Almstaedt home settling in the water Saturday night and had notified the police.

"Sure," said Mr. Almstaedt, as he gnawed at a beef bone, "the water came in pretty bad Saturday night when we were asleep, but that was only because we were out on the deep end of the pier and the hand pump was out of order."

He packed Mrs. Almstaedt off to the country for a vacation, got some men to help him haul the long barge to the shore end and then pumped the water out. When everything is ship-shape he will have Mrs. Almstaedt back.

"I've got the best apartment in New York," said the skipper of the houseboat with a lordly sweep of his hand. "I bought this barge three years ago, put in a dining room, a bedroom, a kitchen, a living room and a sun parlor and we live here nice and healthy, on account of the river breeze."

Mr. Almstaedt looks healthy. Despite his 71 years he is straight—the full six feet of him—and his face is brown with the sun and the wind. Even little Tete, sniffing about with nervous snout, looks chipper and healthier than land-lubber dogs.

Once Mr. Almstaedt was a private detective. Then he became a coal weigher at Bellevue, but now he is retired, living on a trust fund left by a relative. He sat in the glow of the kerosene lamp and told of his plans for the future.

"I'll finish out the Winter here, get the barge patched up, have carpenters build 100 lockers on the deck, all around my swell apartment, and next Summer I'll get me a tow to Great Kills, off Staten Island, and make money renting the lockers to bathers."

Tete's stub tail wagged in agreement.

Police Say Her Fall From Vinson Apartment Was Accident.

Detectives of the East Fifty-first Street station yesterday absolved Joseph Cummings, 31 years old, an attorney, and George Jaeger, 30, a broker, both of Chicago, of complicity in the death of Miss Gertrude Berkowitz, who fell early yesterday morning from the second-floor apartment at 23 East Fifty-fifth Street of Egerton B. Vinson, who is socially prominent.

The death of Miss Berkowitz, who was first described as Miss Burke, was found to have been accidental. Jaeger and Cummings left last night for Chicago, after they had been questioned for several hours.

According to the police, the two men had met Miss Berkowitz and Ida and Nettie Goldman, sisters, of 871 Longwood Avenue, the Bronx, and invited them to the Vinson apartment for a drink. Shortly afterward the Goldman girls left and Miss Berkowitz went to the window to say something to them. She leaned against a wire screen, which gave way under her weight, the police reported, and fell to the street. She died in Flower Hospital.

ROOSEVELT PUSHES POWER TEST CASE

PROFIT WOULD END TAXES

Told That Private Company Had Blocked Practice, Governor Urges Setting a Precedent.

From a Staff Correspondent of The New York Times.

BOONVILLE, N. Y., Sept. 1.—Governor Roosevelt stopped off at the village of Gouverneur during his tour south today to make a first-hand investigation of the town-owned hydroelectric plant there and suggested a method to the village officials to save their citizens many thousands of dollars in electric light and power rates.

After viewing the plant, which uses the Oswegatchie River for its power, the Governor conferred with local officials. They told him that at present the power was used only for municipal purposes because their efforts to sell the surplus to home-owners for domestic purposes had been blocked.

This surplus power, the officials said, amounting to 50,000 kilowatt hours a month, was sold to a private utility company at the rate of only 1¾ mills per kilowatt hour, while the same power was sold at retail to the townspeople for 9 cents per kilowatt hour.

Setting of Precedent Proposed.

Commenting on this remarkable spread between cost at source and sales price, the Governor suggested to the village officials that, under his interpretation of the law, they would have an excellent chance of obtaining the right to sell the surplus power direct to home owners if they made application to the Public Service Commission for such authority.

At the same time it was indicated that if Gouverneur were successful in winning the right to sell public-generated power direct to the consumer, the way would be opened for similar action by a large number of other communities throughout the State, with a consequent large saving in electric light and power rates.

The Governor asserted that the case of Gouverneur was of interest to a large section of the population, and pointed out that in Gouverneur, if the power could be sold direct at 5 cents per kilowatt hour instead of the present 9-cent rate, the entire expenses of the village government could be met by the receipts without the need of any local taxation.

Private Company's Attitude.

The village officials informed the Governor that the plant and the lighting and water-pumping system were put into operation two years ago at a cost of $136,000. It is operated by one man and consists of two turbines generating 100 horsepower each. The power is used to light the streets, the village buildings and an ornamental arch, as well as to pump the water.

But the extra 50,000 kilowatt hours generated each month, according to the officials, have been sold to the Oswegatchie Company, one of the two private companies serving the village. The officials said that the company informed them that they could take the 1¾-mill rate for the surplus or nothing, as the company was not in need of the extra power.

The officials went on to relate their futile efforts to win the legal right to sell the surplus direct for domestic use, and said they were under the impression that they would need legislation at Albany.

The Governor, however, suggested that, according to the terms of the village and public service laws, they would be able to get authority to sell direct by going before the Public Service Commission and requesting a certificate.

Power Could Finance Village.

The officials went on to say that even under the present system about $10,000 a year had been saved by the village, that the project, financed by bonds, had been amortized down this year to $107,000 and that the village would own the plant free and clear in thirteen years.

However, if the method suggested by the Governor to sell the surplus power direct to the retail consumer went into effect, at a 2-cent per kilowatt-hour rate, there would be an increase in revenue of $11,000 a year, while at a 5-cent rate, 4 cents less than the present retail rate, the entire local government costs could be met without the necessity of any taxation.

Roosevelt Explains Situation.

"The Gouverneur experiment," the Governor said afterward, "is being watched with interest by many other communities which are either in a position to generate their own electricity at low cost by hydroelectric plants or by coal plants, or else to buy cheap power from outside sources. The village of Gouverneur is actually saving about $10,000 a year, a considerable figure to its 4,100 inhabitants.

"There seems to be no question that the great majority, regardless of party, want the surplus power, amounting to 50,000 kilowatt hours a month, utilized by the village to furnish domestic lighting for the 1,000 homes in the village.

"At a conference with village officials, I made the suggestion that the obvious reading of the village law and the public service law would enable the village to sell the electricity to homes if authority was obtained from the Public Service Commission. I suggested that such application be made as the quickest way of settling the question and of avoiding appeal to the Legislature."

The Governor added that if the minority report of the special commission formed to revise public service laws had been adopted, problems like that at Gouverneur would have been greatly simplified.

The Governor motored on to Alder Creek, near here, to spend the night with Frank Kernan, chairman of the St. Lawrence River Bridge Commission. He will travel to Rochester tomorrow.

Seek to Complete Zionist Land Fund

The Jewish National Fund of America, 111 Fifth Avenue, the agency of the Zionist movement for the acquisition of land in Palestine, announced yesterday that a special effort to complete the raising of the $500,000 1930 quota for land purchases would be made throughout the United States during the coming Jewish holiday season, beginning Sept. 22, which is Rosh ha-Shanah. To date $342,000 has been raised, leaving $158,000 to be contributed.

Will Rogers Says U. S. A. Doesn't Know It's Lucky

To the Editor of the New York Times:

TAHOE TAVERN, Cal., Sept. 1.—Quit hollering about how poor off we are and look at the real troubles of some of these other birds; down in the Argentine soldiers are guarding their President, Peru just loaded theirs on a battleship and advised him to head for Siberia, Brazil is in a huddle, the Labor Government in England are about to join the unemployed, Hearst has joined Germany, and Brisbane has joined Russia, so it looks like Mexico is about the only one with no trouble at all.

SPIES PUT ON NYE BY MRS. M'CORMICK

Asserts She Has Detectives Watching North Dakota Senator in 'Self-Defense.'

ASKS "WHAT ABOUT IT?"

Campaign Inquiry Committee Set "Spies" on Her After She Filed Full Report, She Says.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—Ruth Hanna McCormick, Republican candidate for the Senate from Illinois, tonight issued a statement saying she had hired detectives to watch the methods of Senator Nye of North Dakota, chairman of the Senate campaign investigating committee.

Mrs. McCormick's statement follows:

"Newspaper dispatches report that United States Senator Gerald P. Nye, chairman of the Special Senate Investigating Committee, is 'indignant' because private investigators have been examining the methods and affiliations of himself and of his agents.

"Senator Nye wants to know who did it. I did it. I am still doing it; and the results have already justified my course. What is Senator Nye going to do about it?

"When the committee began its inquiry into Senatorial primary campaign expenditures, I immediately laid before it a detailed statement of my personal campaign expenditures. It was the most complete statement ever submitted to a Senate committee by a candidate. I voluntarily supplemented that information with another later full report of my expenses incurred by others in my behalf.

"Meanwhile, after the Chicago hearings opened last July and while I still was assisting the committee in every way possible, what took place? Prosecution became persecution. My offices were broken into and my private and business correspondence files were rifled. Spies invaded by living quarters. My residence and office telephone wires were tapped and they are still under supervision.

"In making my own investigation of the Nye investigators I have acted in self-defense. If Senator Nye is indignant, so am I, a Congressman-at-large.

"The men investigating Senator Nye and his agents have made no mystery of their actions. In North Dakota they called on citizens openly, told what they were after and left their cards and addresses. On one occasion one of these investigators attended a meeting of citizens in which Senator Nye's methods were freely discussed.

"I believe that I voice the sentiments not only of the people of Illinois but of the country at large when I express resentment at the methods of Senator Nye. I repeat, what is Senator Nye going to do about it?"

RED WOULD REPUDIATE CITY BONDS TO AID IDLE

Engdahl Also Demands Drastic Cuts in Officials' Salaries to Provide Funds for Doles.

Cessation of payment of interest and principal on New York City bonds and reduction of the salaries of Mayor Walker and other high city officials to a minimum to pay each unemployed resident of the city $25 a week until he or she can find a job was urged yesterday by J. Louis Engdahl, candidate of the Communist party for Lieutenant Governor.

Mr. Engdahl is spokesman for the party while William Z. Foster, candidate for Governor, is serving a term in Hart's Island penitentiary for his part in the riot in Union Square last March.

"While the bill for unemployment insurance proposed by the Communist party for adoption in Congress is pending, an immediate relief fund for over a million unemployed in the State of New York, of whom nearly 800,000 are to be found in New York City, must be established," Mr. Engdahl said.

"The hundreds of millions of dollars collected from the people of the city of New York going to the various bank corporations and other capitalists in the form of payment of interest and redemption of bonds and notes must be turned into a relief fund for the unemployed, conducted by representatives elected by all labor organizations in New York City. Out of this money and also out of the tens of millions saved by cutting wages of the higher city officials and of all judges and magistrates, the unemployed should receive $25 weekly until they can find jobs."

Mr. Engdahl characterized the salaries paid members of the Board of Estimate and judges at a time when thousands of workers and their families were starving as "graft and robbery."

HELD AS JOB SWINDLER.

Self-Styled Head Waiter Accused of Taking "Fees" From Women.

Accused of taking fees of $2 each from women who replied to his advertisement in a morning newspaper, Thomas Spring, 40 years old, of 319 West Seventy-ninth Street, was held in $1,000 bail for trial in Special Sessions when arraigned before Magistrate Jean Norris in West Side court yesterday. He pleaded not guilty to a charge of operating an unlicensed employment agency.

Five young women complained last Friday that Spring had posed as a head-waiter and promised them work as waitresses if they would pay him $2.

LIKELY TO PICK BODY TO FIX B. M. T. PRICE

McKEE STUDIES PROBLEM

With Other Conferees, He Will Speed Up Separate Reports to the Mayor.

ELEVATEDS AN OBSTACLE

Untermyer and Associates Object to Reproduction Cost as Basis of Valuation.

Still far apart in their views as to the proper price to be paid for B. M. T. rapid transit lines sought to be unified with the city's independent subway system, members of the Transit Commission and Board of Transportation will begin this week the preparation of individual reports to be submitted to Mayor Walker. Although the two boards have conferred frequently since early in August, when it definitely developed that there was a variation in prices amounting to as much as $88,000,000, no common ground has yet been found.

Mayor Walker is to receive also the reports of representatives of Controller Berry's office, as well as a detailed memorandum from Aldermanic President McKee. It was predicted yesterday in transit circles that the ultimate result of the present situation would be the delegation to some individual or small group of individuals, chosen from those who have participated in the conferences of the past few months, the task of drawing up a definite report fixing the basis for trading with B. M. T. representatives.

Against Reproduction Theory.

The controversy among members of the Transit Commission and Board of Transportation over the price to be used as a maximum figure in dealing with the B. M. T., if that stage of the unification program is ever reached, still centres about the basis to be used in determining the value to be placed on the company's elevated lines and its Williamsburgh power plant. Samuel Untermyer, special counsel for the Transit Commission, and Commissioners Lockwood and Godley are known to look with disfavor upon the theory of valuing these properties at reproduction cost.

Although they are not in complete unanimity on the price which should be offered the company for these properties, all three have in mind testimony adduced during the unification investigation of 1927, tending to show that the elevated lines, taken as units, showed substantial operating losses.

The company's view of the situation, shared to some extent by some of the city's representatives in the recent conferences, is that the elevated lines are part of an integrated transportation system, so that their earnings cannot fairly be segregated from those of the highly profitable subway lines operated by the company through city-owned tubes.

McKee Studies Problem.

The diversity of views on the price to be paid the B. M. T. extends within the ranks of the Board of Transportation, Chairman Delaney's position not being in complete accord with that of at least one of the two other members of the board. Aldermanic President McKee, who did not attend some of the more recent conferences, has his own independent viewpoint, and in the past few weeks has devoted much time to a careful study and analysis of data presented at the many unification meetings.

Chairman Fullen of the Transit Commission, who has been on vacation, is scheduled to return to his office today or tomorrow. The preparation of the individual reports will then be speeded up by the various conferees. Mayor Walker, who has not yet definitely committed himself to any of the prices discussed in conference, is expected to formulate his own opinion after a study of the memoranda submitted to him.

It was pointed out yesterday by one transit official that any formal report developed from the series of conferences would have to be submitted by the Transit Commission, since that body is specifically charged by the State law with the duty of formulating a unification plan and submitting it to the Board of Estimate.

Attitude of B. M. T.

Although the B. M. T. has never given any public intimation of the price it would accept for its rapid transit properties, beyond the tentative estimate of $273,000,000 embodied in the valuation figures of its engineers, it is believed that the company would be content with the $228,000,000 price already discussed in recent conferences. It is certain, however, that the Transit Commission will not recommend any such price unless the majority of the board and its special counsel can be persuaded to retreat from their present stand for a much lower figure.

Those in close touch with the controversy predict that the Transit Commission will report a price well below $200,000,000. They believe further that the Board of Estimate will withhold formal action, declining to approve or disapprove that report, but leaving the Transit Commission to carry on negotiations with the B. M. T., provided the company is willing to talk business on the basis of the report. The Board of Estimate, under the State law covering unification, does not have to take formal action until all negotiations are concluded.

Drowns as Brother Tries to Aid Him

Special to The New York Times.

CAMDEN, N. J., Sept. 1.—Mayhew Dilks, 64 years old, a Spanish-American War veteran, and his brother, Caleb, 69, were on the deck of their houseboat in the Delaware River here last night when, according to the elder brother, Mayhew suddenly leaped into the water. Caleb plunged after him and tried to swim with him to shore. Neighbors assisted both from the water, but Mayhew was dead. His brother will recover.

72,000 See Yankees Divide With Athletics; Giants and Robins Break Even

YANKS BREAK EVEN AS 72,000 LOOK ON

RUTH BACK IN THE LINE-UP

His 3 Singles Figure in Scoring 3 of the Yankee Runs During the Day.

RUFFING OUTSTANDING STAR

Sets Back Champions in Nightcap With Two Hits, Allowing Only 3 Players to Reach 1st.

By WILLIAM E. BRANDT.

The holiday double-header between the Yanks and Athletics yesterday drew the greatest crowd of the season, 72,000, to the Yankee Stadium. The multitude experienced thrills, too, although the first game went against the Yanks, 3 to 2, stretching their losing streak to five straight.

For one thing, Babe Ruth resumed his place in the Yankee line-up after a two days' rest because of a wrenched back. The Babe hit no homers, it is true, but his three singles were concerned in the scoring of three of the four runs the Yankees made during the afternoon.

The second game was a Yankee victory, 2 to 0, with Charlie Ruffing unfolding a pitching performance against the champions which rendered their attack helpless. He allowed only two hits, both singles, and gave one base on balls. Cochrane and Boley, who hit the singles, and Dykes, who received the pass, were the only Athletics on base throughout the game, and not one could get as far as second.

Earnshaw Loser in Duel.

George Earnshaw, shooting for his twenty-second victory of the season to tie Grove for the Philadelphia pitching leadership, was pitted against Ruffing. In the third inning, after walking Combs, Earnshaw collided with Lary in trying to capture Lary's bunt on the fly. This mishap put Lary on first and Combs on second. Ruth fanned, but Gehrig's long fly to left sacrificed Combs to third. Then a wild pitch scored Combs.

In the fifth Ruth's single to right drove home Combs with the second and last tally of the Ruffing-Earnshaw duel.

In the first game Ruth's single to right in the first inning followed two bases on balls and drove home Byrd from second. Walberg faced Pipgras in this game, but not for long. After Ruth's single he walked Gehrig, then left the game, pitching to four men without retiring any.

Mahaffey Takes Walberg's Place.

Leroy Mahaffey took Walberg's place and held the Yankees hitless for the next four innings and runless for seven and two-thirds innings. With two out in the eighth, Ruth singled and scored on Gehrig's long double. After Lazzeri's single, Rice walked and Grove went to the mound.

The Athletics, though held to five hits by Pipgras, scored a run on Foxx's lucky infield hit in the first inning and two more on Simmons's homer into the left-field stand, with Cochrane on base in the third. Thus they still held a 3-to-2 lead after Gehrig's double had scored the Babe.

Ruth, sharer of the spotlight with Ruffing, had a chance to win the game with an old-fashioned homer into the right-field bleachers in the ninth, but he struck out and left the tying run on third base.

RED SOX OVERCOME TWICE BY SENATORS

Washington Triumphs, 2-1 and 6-3, to Cut Athletics' Lead to 5½ Games.

CRONIN AND BROWN EXCEL

Former Fields Sensationally and Latter Relieves Marberry to Save Nightcap.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1 (AP).—Washington gained a game on Philadelphia by winning two hard-fought contests from Boston today, 2 to 1 and 6 to 3. The Athletics now lead by five and one-half games.

Joe Cronin and Lloyd Brown bulked large in the two victories. Brown relieved Marberry in the second contest with two men on and no one out. He retired the side without further scoring and then drove out a home run in the seventh to put the Senators in the lead.

In the first game, with the tying run on third in the ninth and two out, Cronin leaped high in the air to check Reeves's line drive and then made the catch as he and the ball were falling. Cronin also stole home in the seventh inning of the second game.

NEW YORK A. C. NINE WINS.

Wild Pitch by Lowe Beats Police Department, 6 to 5.

The New York A. C. baseball team defeated the New York Police Department nine, 6 to 5, at Travers Island yesterday. A wild pitch by Lowe in the eighth inning allowed Schepps to score the winning run, after a walk, a safe bunt, a fielder's choice and another bunt had enabled the winners to tie the count at 5-all.

Buchmann of the Police Department hit a single, double and triple, batting in four runs, and walked once.

Howard Miller, N. Y. A. C. centre fielder, made seven putouts.

GIANTS BREAK EVEN; LINDSTROM INJURED

Beat Phils, 8-4, Then Lose, 4-3, Third Baseman Wrenching Knee in Nightcap.

HUBBELL VICTOR IN OPENER

Is Aided by Homers by Hogan and Leach—Terry Contributes Triple, Double, Two Singles.

By JOHN DREBINGER.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 1.—The Giants, again on tour minus their leader, John McGraw, were still pursuing their slender pennant hopes with great tenacity today, winning the first game of the holiday double-header from the Phillies, 8 to 4, when all sorts of disaster enveloped them in the second engagement.

One of their select pitchers blew up, their own offensive failed to function with its customary smoothness, they lost the services of Freddy Lindstrom, their crack third baseman, who may be out indefinitely with a badly wrenched knee, and wound up by losing the ball game, 4 to 3.

Even a gathering of 22,000, which packed the limited resources of Baker Bowl, became strangely sympathetic at this series of misfortunes and presented in the ninth the strange spectacle of urging the Giants on as they routed Ray Benge to score one run but missed bringing home another.

Phils Take Early Lead.

Inept pitching by Willie Walker, after Carl Hubbell had turned in an excellent job in the opener, scuttled the nightcap early. William began his effort by passing the first two batters to face him, and this the Phils, for once displaying singular animation, quickly converted into two runs when Klein bounced a double off the right field wall.

In the third, Walker bogged down again as Brickell's single, another pass and O'Doul's bunt filled the bases. A sharp smack to left by Rensa again scored two.

This done, Heving, Chaplin and Pruett, the first two passing out for pinch hitters, all pitched remarkably well, and while the Giants managed to bounce thirteen hits within the confines of Baker Bowl they never got enough of them in a lump to overcome the Phillies' lead.

They got one tally in the third when Critz doubled and scored on an infield hit by Lindstrom, which brought Freddy down in a heap as he tripped over first base. This sent Lindy hobbling off the field and Marshall became the Giant third baseman.

Giants Score in Eighth.

Then came a long pause as the McGrawmen hammered away at Benge but scored nothing until the eighth, when singles by Ott and Roettger gave the Giants their second tally.

With two out in the ninth, the Giants rallied once more. Marshall singled, Terry walked and Ott just missed getting a homer when his drive bounced off the screening on top of the high right field fence. It only went for a single, scored Marshall and put Terry on third. Then Phil Collins supplanted Benge and O'Farrell ended the fray with an infield grounder.

With Terry pummeling three Philly pitchers for a triple, a double and two singles and Hogan and Leach chiming in with a pair of homers, it was scarcely an effort for the left-handed Hubbell to gallop off with the opener.

INDIANS TAKE TWO FROM THE BROWNS

Celebrate Labor Day by Twice Triumphing, 13 to 8 and 9 to 5, in Bargain Bill.

24TH VICTORY FOR FERRELL

Cleveland Ace Records 13th in Row in Second—Hudlin Winning Hurler in the Opener.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 1 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians celebrated Labor Day today by winning a double-header from the St. Louis Browns, the first game 13 to 8 and the nightcap 9 to 5. The second game was called at the end of the eighth inning because of darkness.

In winning the second, Wesley Ferrell of the Indians chalked up his twenty-fourth victory of the season and his thirteenth triumph in a row. Willis Hudlin, the Indians' third pitcher, was the winning hurler in the first encounter.

Porter hit a home run for the Indians in the first game and Hodapp, also of Cleveland, hit for the circuit in the nightcap.

CHICAGO, Sept. 1 (AP).—The Tigers took the holiday double-header from the White Sox today, winning by scores of 6 to 5 and 4 to 2. Earl Whitehill got his fifteenth victory of the year in the second contest after Ted Lyons had failed in an effort to win his twentieth.

The winning run in the first game came over in the ninth when Funk doubles, went to third on an infield out and scored on a single by McManus.

The second game went to the Tigers when hits by McManus and Akers coupled with two errors by Watwood let in a pair in the fourth and hits by Gehringer, Stone and Akers scored two more in the sixth.

ROBINS SPLIT TWO; DROP TO 4TH PLACE

Lose Opener to Braves, 5 to 3, Then Capture the Nightcap by 4 to 2.

PASSED BY CARDS IN RACE

Sherdel Hurls the First Triumph and Thurston Gets Decision in Final Engagement.

By ROSCOE McGOWEN.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Sept. 1.—Under threatening skies which cut the Labor Day crowd to a scant 6,000, the Robins and Braves split a double-header today, the McKechnie men taking the opener, 5 to 3, and the Robinsonian athletes capturing the nightcap, 4 to 2.

By virtue of the onrushing Cardinals' twin triumph over the Pirates the Flatbush men found themselves unceremoniously dumped into fourth place and trailing the surprising St. Louisians by a half-game margin.

Babe Phelps held the Braves to five hits in the opener, but two of them were of the most devastating brand. Rabbit Maranville scored two runs in the third when he followed a pass to Spohrer and Maguire's single with a slashing double to left, and Walter Berger assured victory for his club in the sixth with a prodigious line drive over the distant centre field wall with two Braves on base. It was the Boston slugger's thirty-second homer of the season.

Lopez Connects for Homer.

Al Lopez gave the Robins their only runs and a temporary lead in the fifth when he found Wee Willie Sherdel for a home run into the left field stands with Moore and Finn on base. Moore had singled and Finn had drawn a pass.

Rube Bressler made a bid in the ninth by starting it with a double, but Sherdel retired the next three batters in easy fashion to hold his lead and win the game.

The Brooklyn victory went to the credit of Hollis Thurston, whose last appearance here against the Braves put him in the records with a two-hit shut-out. His work today was not quite up to that standard, but, considering that six of the ten hits he allowed were doubles, his pitching in the pinches was excellent.

Thurston Breaks Deadlock.

Bobby Smith held the Robins to one hit, a double by Herman, until the fourth, when the Babe tripled and came in with the tying tally on Bissonette's single. The game remained in a deadlock until the seventh, when Thurston himself untied the knot with a long double after Wright and Bressler had singled. Finn had hit into a double play and Lopez had been purposely passed.

CUBS BEATEN TWICE; LEAD NOW 4 GAMES

TRIPLE DECIDES NIGHTCAP

Sukeforth's Drive With 2 Out in 9th Takes Weird Bounce and Scores Two Runs.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 1 (AP).—The Cincinnati Reds dealt a stunning blow to Chicago's hope of sewing up the National League race soon by taking a Labor Day double-header and leaving the Cubs only four games ahead of the field. The scores were 5 to 0 and 2 to 1.

The Cubs had the second game won, 1 to 0, with two down in the ninth inning, when one of baseball's worst breaks went against Hack Wilson. Sukeforth's hit to centre bounced weirdly over Wilson's head and went for a triple, scoring Stripp and Crawford, who had walked.

The first game was a victory for Red Lucas, who gave the Cubs only three hits and shut them out. His team-mate, Frey, did almost as well in the second game, letting the Cubs down with five hits, although Osborn did just as well for Chicago.

HERRMANN STRIKES OUT 17.

Equals League Record as Reading Defeats Baltimore, 3 to 1.

READING, Pa., Sept. 1 (AP).—Leroy Herrmann, 23-year-old right-hander, equaled the International League record when he struck out seventeen Baltimore batsmen tonight as Reading won the second portion of a holiday twin bill, 3 to 1. Lefty Grove, now of the Athletics, struck out seventeen when he pitched for Baltimore a few years ago.

Herrmann gave only six hits. Reading was held to five by Luther Roy. One was a home run by Kahn with none on base in the eighth.

CARDS WIN TWICE; TAKE THIRD PLACE

St. Louis Collects 35 Hits in Double Triumph Over Pirates, 11 to 6 and 5 to 1.

RHEM AND GRIMES SCORE

Gain Mound Victories as Swetonic and French, Then Kremer and Spencer, Fail.

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 1 (AP).—The St. Louis Cards went on a hitting rampage today, beating Pittsburgh in both games of a holiday double bill to assume third place in the National League. The score in the morning was 11 to 6 and in the afternoon 5 to 1.

Rhem was victor in the morning, when the Cardinals compiled seventeen safeties off Swetonic and French. Grimes had an easy time in the afternoon, holding the Pirates to one run. In the meantime his mates were pounding Kremer and Spencer for a grand total of eighteen hits.

Kremer was out to win his twentieth game, but he could not hold the Cards in check.

BELMONT MARK SET AS BALKO TRIUMPHS

Sagamore Entry Clips 4-5 of a Second for 6 Furlongs With New Time of 1:09 2-5.

ROONEY, 5-1, TAKES CHASE

Defeats Indigo and Milan, Widener Entry, in Broadhollow—Sun Edwin, 1 to 12, Scores.

By BRYAN FIELD.

A big black horse rushed onward like a military charger and made turf history at the opening of the Belmont Park Fall meeting yesterday when he ran six furlongs in 1:09 2-5, a new track record and one of the fastest races of the kind run anywhere in the world.

The horse was Balko from the Sagamore Stable, and he set the new figures under the crushing impost of 136 pounds, which was top weight in the Fall Highweight Handicap. The old mark was 1:10 1-5.

A crowd of 20,000 persons, who had made Balko and his entry mate, The Heathen, favorite at 17 to 10, cheered as they saw the big black come from nowhere in the last furlong to win by a head in a driving, bitter finish. The Heathen, owned by C. H. Pierce, but trained, as is Balko, by J. H. Stotler, was second, beating George D. Widener's Finite by a length.

As the race started far up the chute, at a point invisible or unnoticed by most in the crowd, there were few who saw The Heathen bump Balko at the break. This looked bad, indeed, as a bumped horse carrying 136 pounds does not easily recover. Balko not only recovered but set out in chase of one of the speediest lots of sprinters that ever raced down the Widener chute.

Victory Is Worth $3,375.

Balko's victory was worth $3,375 and can be added to triumphs in The Jennings, Toboggan and Speed handicaps, scored earlier this year. In addition, Balko was the horse that forced the pace when Jack High set the smashing figures of 1:35 for a mile here last Spring. Following that race Balko was beaten two noses in the Queens County Handicap.

That he is now in top notch condition his race proves. The others in the order they came over the line were Tetrarchal, Quick Step, Rapid Transit, Gun Royal and Sandy. All are noted for speed, but the pace was so fast from the beginning that the field was strung out almost in Indian file. The Heathen was the horse to spring to the front after he caromed off Balko at the break.

The Heathen galloped on in a way that made many think he would be the winner. He was carrying 129 pounds and was carrying it well. Tetrarchal, with 117, was the horse to follow in closest pursuit for the first quarter, but he did not stay.

Finite, held at 9 to 5, and the one counted on to win the race by many observers, was impeded in the early stages, so that when Tetrarchal tired it was Quick Step that was closest to the pacemaker. Balko all this time was coming up from behind like a cyclone, but it seemed hardly possible that he would have strength left for a closing drive when he was using up so much power to get to the contention.

Balko Moves to Front.

Quick Step quickly faded and then it was a fight between Balko on the outside, The Heathen in the middle and Finite along the rail. Balko bounded to the front in the last sixteenth and kept right on going to outlast The Heathen. Finite, finishing perhaps fastest of all, still was soundly beaten.

The Broadhollow Steeplechase, worth $4,375 to the winner, was riddled by scratches, only six of the fourteen named going to the start. The race, however, was interesting and there was a surprise when the Brookmeade Stable's Rooney won by four lengths, paying 5 to 1.

Two of those which ran were Indigo and Milan, the property of Joseph E. Widener, president of the Westchester Racing Association. Mr. Widener declared to win with Milan and this may have cost the race, although it is hard to take any credit from Rooney, as he won so decisively. Indigo and Milan finished two, three, after the latter had led for the first mile and a quarter.

In the early stages Indigo was restrained from going to the front because of the declaration, and when Rooney took the lead there still seemed no danger as Milan did not fold up. Suddenly Charley Smoot on Rooney stole away from Milan and it was apparent that Milan could not keep up with the increase in pace. Jockey Bauman on Indigo went into a hard drive in an effort to catch the speeding Rooney.

But he started with many lengths the worst of things and gained ground, but not nearly enough. He was ten lengths ahead of Milan despite the handicaps under which Indigo ran. The Widener entry was favored at 13 to 10.

Kildare Is Victor.

There were two interesting mile races on the program, Sun Edwin from the Arden Farms taking one in 1:37 2-5 and the Newtondale Stable's Kildare making a game finish to win the other in 1:37. Sun Edwin had little to beat, while Kildare had a great deal to contend with. The former was held at 1 to 12 and easily defeated George D. Widener's Partisan, while A. W. Wentzel's Titus, the only other starter, brought up the rear.

Kildare led from start to finish of his race except for a twenty-yard stretch inside the sixteenth pole when he was headed by Nellie Custis. Coming on again in gallant fashion, Kildare regained the lead to win by a nose from Nellie Custis. The winner was the favorite at 7 to 2.

Nellie Custis beat Hand to Hand a head for the place and seven others trailed. In the nightcap, Harry Payne Whitney's Potheen was favorite and her victory made five public choices out of seven to win.

Doctor Rankin broke slowly, trailed far back for the first half mile and closed very fast on the rail. Stephenite was well up for six furlongs, then dropped back. Aurica ran a poor race. Scratched—Huffy, Crumpler, Isoleteur, Personality, Flower Rock, Canandaigua, Omar Roman and Arc Light.

Rooney, perfectly ridden, was allowed to rate along for a turn of the field, moved up very fast in the last six furlonds, ran into a long lead, but was ridden out to win. Indigo was allowed to rate along far back, closed very fast, but was not good enough. Milan had plenty of early speed, but after making a full turn of the course, dropped back and held Beelzebub safe. Beelzebub fenced poorly and lacked speed.

SISKIN TRIUMPHS AT LINCOLN FIELDS

Nevada Stock Farm's Entry Takes Joliet Handicap by Spurt in Stretch.

DON LEON, FAVORITE, FOURTH

Rusty Finishes Third After a Good Start, Four Lengths Back of Schooner.

CHICAGO, Sept. 1 (AP).—Siskin, a two-year-old son of the imported French stallion Epinard, won the Joliet Handicap, with $5,000 added, at Lincoln Fields today, defeating a fleet band of eleven of the best juveniles in the West.

The race was watched by a Labor Day crowd of 30,000, one of the largest that ever has gathered at Lincoln Fields.

The victory was worth $6,460 to the Nevada Stock Farm, owner of Siskin. Schooner finished second and Rusty, the entry of W. A. Ranger of Kentucky, was third. The heavily-played favorite, Don Leon, another Bluegrass invader, was fourth.

Siskin ran the six furlongs in 1:11 4-5—remarkably fast time for a 2-year-old carrying such a heavy burden. His impost was 125 pounds. He paid $10.40 to win, $6.40 to place and $4.04 to show.

The big 2-year-old started slowly and on the back stretch did not appear to be a contender. Coming around the stretch he was in sixth place, but Jockey Morrison then made his drive and Siskin picked off the field until only Schooner remained in front. Morrison made his final bid and wore Schooner down to win by a head.

Rusty set the early pace and held on gamely but tired at the finish. Don Leon found his weight burden of 126 pounds too much, and after moving up to third place, dropped back to fourth in the stretch.

U. S. Yacht Wins First British-American Cup Race

MARS, U. S. YACHT, DEFEATS BRITISH

Merle-Smith Sails Craft to Victory in First Race for British-American Cup.

U. S. IS SECOND AND THIRD

Visiting Team Takes 4th, 5th, 7th and 8th Places—Americans Lead, 24¼ to 12.

By VERNON VAN NESS.

Special to The New York Times.

OYSTER BAY, L. I., Sept. 1.—The United States won the first race of the British-American international six-meter class cup races this afternoon on Long Island Sound off Centre Island under the auspices of the Seawanhaka Corinthian Yacht Club. American boats took the first three positions and piled up 24¼ points to Great Britain's 12.

The first boat to finish the twelve-mile course, including a beat to windward, a run to leeward and two reaches, was Mars, skippered by Van S. Merle-smith. Mars covered the course in 2:44:38 to finish one minute and seven seconds in front of Lucie, sailed by Briggs Cunningham, which in turn crossed the finish line twenty-five seconds ahead of Cherokee, sailed by Cornelius Shields.

In the reach to the third mark in the final leg, Prudence, British yacht, came into the fight as the result of a luffing match between the Cherokee and the British Felma, sailed by F. A. Richards. This let Prudence come through on the wind and finally finish in fourth place, four minutes and thirteen seconds after the trim Mars had skimmed over the line.

Aphrodite Finishes Sixth.

The British boats finished fourth, fifth, seventh and eighth. The other U. S. entrant, in addition to the first three, was Aphrodite, sailed by C. Sherman Hoyt, which finished sixth.

Had there been a fresher breeze the race could not have proved more interesting. As it was the wind was north by east at the start and then shifted and came out of the south. At the start the wind was about eight knots, but at the finish it had dropped to about five.

The start was delayed fifteen minutes, but finally, at 1:55, the eight boats crossed the line to a very fine start, Cherokee of the American team showing the way, with Fintra of the British team next and then the American Lucie, the British Felma, the British Carol, the American Mars, the British Prudence and the American Aphrodite.

Beating to windward, Cherokee widened her lead, with Fintra sailing considerably to leeward, and the rest spread out for a long stretch. Rounding the first mark in this leg Cherokee had a lead of sixteen seconds on Mars, which was nearly three minutes ahead of Lucie.

Mars Overhauls Cherokee.

In the run to leeward, Mars showed plenty of foot, overhauled Cherokee, and at the mark led Cherokee by more than 50 seconds. Lucie was third, and then Felma, Aphrodite, Fintra, Prudence and Carol.

Once taking the lead, Mars never relinquished it, and when the wind shifted after the leeward run, Mars, under the able handling of Mr. Merle-smith, proved just as fleet in reaching on the next two legs and gradually stepped out to widen her advantage. Cherokee gave way to Lucie in the first reach, but clung on stoutly to keep off Prudence. The latter proved to have more foot in the reaching and came swiftly after the wind shifted.

K. P. Preston, who sailed Prudence, proved a capable skipper and took advantage of every chance he had, but with Mars, Lucie and Cherokee slipping along as they were, he did not have a chance to do better than finish fourth.

Aphrodite was beaten across the finish line by only a second in a finish that displayed the sailing ability of F. A. Richards, who sailed Felma. Not more than a dozen lengths from the finish, Aphrodite had a lead of nearly half a boat length, when Richards came up beside Aphrodite, blanketed the American boat, and thus stealing her wind, flashed on ahead to finish fifth, a mere second in front of the American boat.

British Sailors Cheer Mars.

When the last boat had finished and Mars came past the committee boat, trailed by the British crews, the latter rose and gave three hearty cheers for the American victors.

The race was followed by a large spectator fleet of seventy-five craft. Patrolling the course were no less than seven Coast Guard boats and the Coast Guard cutter Gresham.

The second race will be sailed tomorrow and the succeeding ones each day thereafter, weather permitting, until one team has triumphed four times.

Sarasota Yacht Club Takes Lipton Prize on Point Basis

PENSACOLA, Fla., Sept. 1 (AP).—Finishing sixth in the final nine-mile race for fishing class sloops, the entry of the Sarasota Yacht Club today won the 1930 Sir Thomas Lipton regatta, staged under the auspices of the Gulf Yachting Association, with a total of 20 points.

The Mobile (Ala.) entry was second with 18 points and Pensacola third with 16. St. Petersburg, New Orleans and Biloxi, Miss., finished in a tie with 13 points each and Houston, Texas, was last with 11.

By virtue of its victory the Sarasota Club won the right to hold next year's regatta.

GYPSY HOME FIRST TO WIN DALLEY CUP

H. and G. Curry Sail Boat to Victory Over Class R Rivals, to Take Larchmont Title.

136 YACHTS IN 20 RACES

J. Carlisle in Sabalo Captures the Junior Championship in Sail-Off With Decima.

By LINCOLN A. WERDEN.

Special to The New York Times.

LARCHMONT, N. Y., Sept. 1.—Howard Curry of the Manhassett Bay Yacht Club and his son, Gordon, left the wharf of the Larchmont Yacht Club and sailed off across the Sound this evening with the handsome Dalley Cup as a result of their victory with Gypsy in the Class R event, one of the feature races today of the club's Fall regatta.

By their victory the Currys scored 71 points of a possible 81 for the nine races in the Larchmont Club championship during the season. Today's final contest also settled a tie that existed between the Currys and the W. H. Wheeler Jr. boat, Cotton Blossom.

Among other laurels that went across the Sound to Manhassett were those accounted for by young John Carlisle, son of Floyd Carlisle of the Enterprise syndicate and also commodore of the Manhassett Bay Club, who won the race week junior championship with his Sabalo in a race-off by beating James Thorburn's Decima.

A fleet of 136 boats took part in the twenty class races, which started in a calm that was broken an hour and a half later by a fresh southerly wind which later shifted to the east.

Some Take Longer Route.

Due to the light breeze the signal for the shortened course was hoisted on the committee boat fifteen minutes before the start, but some confusion result among the skippers, for some of them who started late neglected to heed the signal and, as a consequence, went over the longer route.

One of these was Eldon Trimingham, the Bermuda skipper, who won three of the four races against the Americans in the series just finished. He brought his K-1 in second among the international six meters, sailing the 9½-mile course instead of the 7½-mile route. The race was won by A. E. Luders Jr. in Totem in 2:39:55, while Trimingham was timed in 2:42:21.

Only two boats entered the Class M race, with George M. Pynchon's Istalena winning from Simba over the 13¼-mile course to the buoy a half mile southwest of Captain Island Light and then to Matinicock Point and back to the committee boat.

Istalena, with Philip Mallory at the wheel, waited four minutes for Simba to cross the starting line, but the C. D. Wiman boat trailed over the course, nevertheless, by 5 minutes 56 seconds.

Mistral Defeats Rivals.

Gordon Raymond sailed W. B. Bell's Mistral to a victory among the New York Yacht Club forty-footers, with Typhoon second, 4 minutes 3 seconds back of the winner, and Banshee, Howard Whitney Jr.'s entry, third.

Ralph Manny turned in a victory in the interclub class with Blue Streak with a wide margin over Alberta, and W. Roy Manny won with Synthetic among the ten meters, leading Dragoon by 35 seconds.

FOG AGAIN KEEPS CUP YACHTS IDLE

Enterprise and Shamrock V Are Prevented From Taking Trial Spins Off Newport.

LIPTON STAYS ABOARD ERIN

Vanderbilt Returns After Inspecting Sails for America's Cup Defender at City Island.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 1.—A regular June fog blanketed this city most of the day and when it was not foggy it was raining, thus casting out of the minds of the yachtsmen, who are interested in the coming contest between Enterprise and Shamrock V for the America's Cup any thought of trial spins.

As a result, it was another day of rest for the officers and crews of the two big sloops, the third in succession.

Harold S. Vanderbilt returned early in the day from New York on his power yacht Vara, stopping on the way for a call at City Island to look over the work being done on several of Enterprise's sails, which are expected here tomorrow. His return means that Enterprise will be cut bright and early tomorrow providing the weather clears.

More Work on Shamrock V.

It was a restless day for the crew of Shamrock V also, but Captain Heard is hoping for better weather, for he still has sails to stretch and more tuning up to do before the races start on Sept. 13.

Several yachtsmen were guests of members of the Clambake Club at a members bake held at the clubhouse on Easton's Point and there were others just biding their time waiting patiently for a chance to get busy.

Sir Thomas Lipton spent a very quiet Labor Day aboard the Erin. Because of the weather there were only a few visitors aboard during the day.

Reception Is Planned.

The city is planning to properly receive and entertain the members of the crew of the British cruiser Danae, which is coming for the races.

William H. Vanderbilt, chairman of the general committee, working with the sons of St. George, has appointed a subcommittee of reception and entertainment and Leroy King has been named chairman.

BARNEGAT BAY REGAINS BAMBERGER TROPHY

Nick Nack Second in Series Final Race, Beating Flying Cloud for Yacht Prize.

Special to The New York Times.

SEASIDE PARK, N. J., Sept. 1.—Barnegat Bay regained possession of the Bamberger Trophy when the Lucke brothers in Nick Nack placed second in today's race, scoring enough points to nose out the Hiering brothers' Flying Cloud, also a local boat. F. Slade Dale, sailing Vixen, another Seaside Park entry, took first honors today.

The showing of the local boats during the series showed a marked improvement over last season. Nick Nack led the three-race Star class series with 28, the Hiering brothers' Flying Cloud was runner-up with 26, while F. Slade Dale's Vixen scored 25 and Orton G. Dale's Arran of Bay Head tallied 22 to tie with George Elder's Iscyra II of Manhasset Bay.

Slade Dale led from the start today and was never seriously threatened, while Nick Nack held second during the major part of the race. The rest of the contest was a battle all the way with the Iscyra II capturing third.

The race was sailed in a moderate easterly wind with a heavy fog obscuring the course much of the time, making the buoys difficult to pick up.

Sixteen Auxiliary Cruisers Finish Run Across Sound That Started on Saturday.

Special to The New York Times.

HUNTINGTON, L. I., Sept. 1.—Thirteen of the twenty-one cruising auxiliaries entered in the sixth annual Cornfield Light Race under the auspices of the Huntington Yacht Club finished the 106-mile race across the sound to the Connecticut shore and return today. Three finished yesterday, which leaves five boats unaccounted for.

It was reported late this afternoon that the Whitecap, J. G. Thorburn's sloop, representing the Pequot Yacht Club, had withdrawn from the race. The remaining craft are expected to finish the race late tonight. The race started from Lloyd's Harbor at 3:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon, the skippers and crews having first been entertained at dinner by the Huntington Yacht Club.

Although the Tidal Wave, representing the Shelter Island Yacht Club, and the Jinitopi, Dr. H. V. Holcombe's entry from the local yacht club, crossed the line only fifteen seconds apart in a spectacular finish at 4:39:15 and 4:39:30, respectively, yesterday afternoon, on corrected time the Tidal Wave won the long race by a margin of 1 hour 9 minutes 45 seconds.

The boats which have not finished are Whitecap, Cleon, Windward, Tinker and Full Moon.

MOONBEAM IS VICTOR IN STAR CLASS TEST

Miss Borland's Sloop Takes Queen of the Bay Cup in Invitation Series.

CUYAHOGA ALSO TRIUMPHS

Shows Way in Indian Class of the Shinnecock Y. C. Regatta—Green Dragon Scores.

QUOGUE, L. I., Sept. 1.—Moonbeam, the Star Class racing sloop which belongs to Miss Margaret Borland of the yacht racing squadron of the Westhampton Country Club, won the Queen of the Bay Cup in the annual invitation series held under the auspices of the Shinnecock Yacht Club on Tiana Bay today. The yacht from Moriches Bay was the winner in the Star Class on Saturday and again today. Also Miss Borland received the greatest number of points for the condition of the craft and for general seamanship.

The race today was sailed in a light southeast breeze that was decidedly stronger than the fluky wind of Saturday. It held fairly steady throughout. In the Indian Class, the winner was Cuyahoga, which is the property of W. Potts. M. D. Tower's Green Dragon won among the Moriches Bay one-design boats. The best of the catboats was W. Kidde's Spalpeen.

Red Head, the property of H. E. Post Jr., was the first of a large fleet of Shore Birds to finish. The S. S. Class was divided into two divisions. B. Fenner's boat won in the first division, while in the second division the winner was the craft owned by Miss Barbara Gill. Among the Marconi-rigged sloop of the same class the first home was No. 21, which is owned by Miss Ruth Smith.

In addition to the sailing divisions the club held races for outboard motor boats this morning. These boats were principally manned by junior members of the club. Bud Smith did the best work, as he was the winner in both Class C and Class D. The winner in Class B was the craft that was owned and handled by K. B. Smith Jr. It was the first time the club has ever recognized the youngsters in its big invitation regatta and the innovation met with warm approval.

Wood Keeps Harmsworth Trophy, Beating Miss Carstairs's Boat in Final Heat

HARMSWORTH PRIZE RETAINED BY WOOD

Veteran Sets Record in Event, Driving Miss America IX 77.390 Miles an Hour.

BRITISH BOAT FORCED OUT

Hawker at the Wheel in Place of Miss Carstairs, Who Sees Race From Stands.

GEORGE WOOD IS SECOND

Phil, Third Brother of Famous Family, Finishes Third, Two Miles Behind.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Sept. 1.—Gar Wood, veteran speed-boat pilot, retained the British international Harmsworth trophy by winning the second and final heat of the event today, thwarting the third consecutive challenge of Miss Marion Barbara Carstairs of England.

Wood set a new average speed record with his Miss America IX for a Harmsworth race, 77.390 miles an hour, which replaces that of 75.287. Close behind the winner—a scant 100 yards—came his brother George, driving Miss America VIII.

The English entry Estelle IV did not finish because of a collapsed gas tank sustained on the upper end of the course on the final lap. What fuel remained in the tank was used to drive the boat to its well.

Finishing third, two miles back of the other boats, came Miss America V, piloted by Phil Wood, a third brother of the famous speed boat team.

Miss Carstairs a Spectator.

Miss Carstairs watched the race from the judges' stand. It will be her final effort to possess the trophy, she admitted, for already her unsuccessful efforts have cost her half a million dollars.

"I've done my best," she said. "I tried for the Harmsworth Trophy three times without success. I cannot afford another attempt."

Shortly before the starting time Miss Carstairs announced that the Estelle IV, surviving British challenger, would be driven by Bert Hawker instead of herself.

It was Hawker who on Saturday, in the initial heat of the race, overhauled Gar and George Wood in the Miss Americas VIII and IX, and soon afterward was out of the running with a broken oil line.

Miss Carstairs's final order to Hawker was: "Make the Woods do eighty miles an hour or break up the Estelle IV."

Wood Soon Draws Away.

Estelle IV was a length behind Miss America IX at the starting line. Gar Wood lost no time in pulling away from the field, and with throttle wide open soon increased his lead to 300 yards. In the back stretch the heat resolved itself into a duel between the two Americas. Gar Wood held onto the lead until the fifth lap on the lower turn when George Wood opened the throttle and passed him. However, his lead was short-lived, as Gar pushed his craft to the limit and swept to the lead again on the back stretch to whiz over the finish line 100 yards in front.

Should weather conditions be fair tomorrow it is expected that Miss Carstairs or Hawker will drive the Estelle V in an attempt to lower the world's hydroplane record held by the late Sir Henry Segrave. Wood may also try for a record with Miss America IX.

Scott-Payne's Craft Scores.

DETROIT, Sept. 1 (AP).—Hubert Scott-Payne, London, England, today won The Detroit News international trophy for five and one-half liter hydroplanes with his Miss Britain I.

Scott-Payne won one heat and placed second in two others for a total point score of 1,122 against 800 for The Phantom of Houston, Texas, which took second honors. The Baby Minchas of Bay City, Mich., was third.

The fastest lap of the race was made by the Phantom in the second heat at 43.855 miles per hour.

Frank Wigglesworth of Boston won the fifty-mile race for stock speedboats of the runabout type. He maintained an average speed of 27.721 miles an hour. Second place went to John D. Maypole of Chicago and third to Howard Bond of Detroit.

Most of the race was run through a heavy downpour of rain. Twenty-eight boats from sixteen cities started, and all finished. Taking the lead in the third lap of the four-and-one-half-mile course, Wigglesworth held it to the end. In addition to the $1,500 first prize money, he also received $900 in lap prizes.

CHRISTIE MAC WINS TROTTING FEATURE

Takes the Free-for-All in Straight Heats From John Madden and Guy Reaper.

Trampsmug and Christie Mac featured the card of trotting and pacing races staged by the Road Horse Association of New Jersey yesterday at the Weequahic Park track in Newark. More than 20,000 watched a long card of events.

Christie Mac, driven by David Rawson, defeated John Madden and Guy Reaper in two straight heats in the free-for-all trot. The first heat of the race went to Christie Mac in easy style, but Guy Reaper gave the winner considerable trouble in the second. Guy Reaper was in the van passing the finish line, but his driver was disqualified for running the horse and Christie Mac was awarded the heat and race.

Trampsmug came through in the free-for-all pace, beating Peter Etawah, a stable mate, in three heats. Trampsmug won the first heat, with Peter Etawah coming through in the second and Trampsmug taking the third.

ARMY POLO TEAM DOWNS OLD AIKEN

Triumphs, 10-4, at Meadow Brook Club After Leading, 5-3, in First Half.

4 GOALS BY CAPTAIN RODES

No. 3 Stars for Victors on Attack and Defense—American Four Plays Today.

By ROBERT F. KELLEY.

Special to The New York Times.

WESTBURY, L. I., Sept. 1.—Leading from the third period to the close, the United States Army polo team, which is preparing for its invasion of Argentina this Fall, scored over Old Aiken in convincing fashion, 10 goals to 4, at the Meadow Brook Club this afternoon.

After the first few periods, the play was dominated by the Army, and the team of youngsters which last year won the junior championship and contributed two candidates to the American international squad this season trailed, the hitting and team-play falling off.

The Army rode with Lieutenant McDonald Jones, Captain C. A. Wilkinson, Captain Peter Rodes and Major C. C. Smith in that order against Aiken's familiar line-up of Elbridge Gerry, James Mills, Stewart Iglehart and J. C. Rathborne.

In the past few weeks the forward end of the Army team has been doing most of the scoring, but today the back field of Rodes and Smith contributed the punch.

Rodes Plays Fine Game.

Captain Rodes, who a few years ago was a prominent candidate for international teams and played with the Army against the British Army in London, came back today to something of his old form. He was playing a sound No. 3, hitting well and shutting down well on Aiken runs. In addition, he found the time to contribute four of his side's goals and to aid in setting up others.

Major Smith, who joined the team after it had won the junior championship this year, played well at back, riding well and hitting cleanly with fine direction and length. Lieutenant Jones, at No. 1, was not quite so prominent as he has been lately, though he had some good runs. Captain Wilkinson, who is the only Army officer yet to be named as an international spare, carried a good part of the forward burden.

The Army played well and earned its victory by clean combination play and fine hitting, but Old Aiken is apparently in a slump. The young players were not hitting with half the length or confidence today that is usually theirs, and the result was a loss of the long passing game which is the strength of this team. They shortened up on their hitting, missed and topped drives and kept pulling up and bunching.

Mills and Iglehart Bumped.

In the seventh period Mills was bumped on the nose by the head of a pony and had a cut opened, and Iglehart received a bad bang on his knee. Both continued after first-aid treatment.

The two teams were even through the first two periods, and Old Aiken trailed only by 5 to 3 at the end of the first half. Then, in the fifth period, another Old Aiken score pulled that team up to within one goal of the leaders, but a three-goal rally by the Army in the seventh, while Old Aiken was shut out, ended the latter's chances.

The practice of the United States and England teams resumes tomorrow when the American side plays what will probably be its last test match, starting at 4:30, at Piping Rock. The British are to play Wednesday at Meadow Brook and have announced that they will try again the line-up which includes Lieutenant Humphrey Guinness at back and Lewis Lacey at No. 2, with Gerald Balding at No. 1 and Captain C. T. I. Roark holding his place at No. 3.

It was the switch to this formation that carried the Britons through three fine closing periods at Sands Point, Sunday.

The line-up:

U. S. Army (10).	Old Aiken (4).
1—Lt. McD. Jones	1—E. T. Gerry
2—Capt. C. Wilkinson	2—J. P. Mills
3—Capt. P. P. Rodes	3—S. B. Iglehart

GOVERNORS ISLAND RALLIES TO TRIUMPH

B Quartet Scores 3 Times in Last Period to Beat First Division B Four, 8-7.

GEORGE MAKES SIX GOALS

Ties Count at 7-All, Then Tallies After Final Bell to Clinch Hard-Earned Victory.

Three goals by Lieutenant Alex George in the last three minutes of play gave the Governors Island B polo team an 8-7 victory over the First Division B four in an exhibition match yesterday at Fort Hamilton. George had a total of six goals.

About 1,500 spectators saw the First Division go down to defeat in the final chukker of play. After Lieutenant George's first two scores in the sixth period had tied the score at 7-all, the teams kept playing spiritedly and it was not until a few seconds after the final whistle had sounded that George finally tallied the third goal which brought defeat to the Fort Hamilton malletmen.

The winners got off to an early lead in the opening chukker when Lieutenant George and Major Downs scored, but by the end of the third chukker the home team, led by Captain Don Scott, had overcome the Governors Island lead and were ahead, 6 to 4.

After a scoreless fourth chukker the Governors Island players slowly began catching up with the First Division, but soon after the last period opened Lieutenant S. M. Lipman scored for the home team, and things appeared gloomy for the visitors.

However, the outlook soon changed, for George sent two shots through the First Division goal to tie the score at 7-all. Then, after the final whistle, he pierced the home team's defense for the deciding goal.

The line-up:

Governors Isld. B (8).	First Division B (7).
1—Maj. C. D. Downs.	1—Lieut. R. Hutchins.
2—Maj P. R. Davison.	2—Lieut. S. Lipman.

Altoona Auto Race Is Captured by Arnold; Litz Second After Spirited Duel

ARNOLD TRIUMPHS IN ALTOONA RACE

Chicago Speed King Averages 113 Miles an Hour to Take Auto Classic.

DOWNPOUR HALTS CONTEST

Cantion, Akron Star, Comes in Third—Victory Assures Arnold A. A. A. 1930 Title.

By The Associated Press.

ALTOONA, Pa., Sept. 1.—Billy Arnold, young Chicago speed king, won the Labor Day race on the board oval here today, finishing ahead of Deacon Litz of Dubois, Pa., after a thrilling duel. The event was scheduled for 200 miles, but was stopped after 116¼ miles when a heavy shower made its completion dangerous.

Arnold completed the 116¼ miles in 1 hour and 1 minute, an average of 113 miles an hour. The victory gave him 139 points and increased his season's total to 1,027. Shorty Cantion of Akron, Ohio, his nearest rival for the 1930 A. A. A. championship, won 104 points by placing third and increasing his season's total to 584.

Ted Allen, secretary of the A. A. A. contest board, said Arnold's triumph today guaranteed him the 1930 title, since Cantion, by winning the remaining official event at Syracuse next Saturday, could add only 120 points and could not overtake Arnold.

Duel From Start to Finish.

The shower which terminated the race today broke up a duel between Arnold and Litz which had the crowd of about 30,000 excited from start to finish. Arnold set the pace from the moment Starter Jack Rose sent the field away. He averaged 120 miles an hour during the first fifty miles, a speed which only Litz was able to match.

The other ten starters were gradually outdistanced until the third-place position, over which Lou Meyer, Cantion and Russ Snowberger fought, was soon one mile and later nearly three miles behind the leader.

Litz twice sent the spectators to their feet when his efforts to overtake Arnold were coupled with "breaks" which endangered his life. On the fiftieth lap of the mile-and-a-quarter track the Deacon was just about to pass Arnold when Litz's machine skidded and shot into the dirt on the eastern turn. The incident, aside from thrilling the crowd, had no effect on the duel and Litz was immediately in Arnold's wake.

Litz gained the lead a few minutes later when Arnold went into the pit to change his left front tire. He lost about ten laps later through his second mishap at the eastern turn.

Litz's Car Again Skids.

Litz's right front tire blew as he was coming out of the turn. His car skidded into the dirt, swung completely around while the crowd gasped, and was finally righted by super-driving and was piloted into the pit.

From then on Arnold slowly pulled ahead and lapped the Litz car in the 108th mile. A few minutes later the shower ended the race.

Borotra Enters U. S. Tourney Which Will Start on Saturday

Dr. Philip B. Hawk, chairman of the championship committee of the West Side Tennis Club, announced late yesterday that Jean Borotra's entry for the national title tourney starting Saturday had been accepted, on the condition that the French star would be privileged to withdraw should his business call him back to France before the end of the tourney.

Borotra hopes to remain until the close of the competition and most likely will play during the first few days at least. His name will be included in the draw which will be made at noon today at the Hotel Vanderbilt.

Pierre Gillou, captain of the French Davis Cup team, is understood to have advised Borotra by cable to play in the championship.

The Business Slump and the Sports Boom.

THE stock market dropped with a crash last Autumn and the shock is still felt in many quarters. Economists say that business is bad. Unemployment is a problem here and abroad. There was a frightful earthquake in Italy. There are native uprisings in India and revolutions in South America. There is always a war in China. But in the face of these national and international difficulties, sports have been booming all along the line.

Consider the money that has been and is being spent on the international sports program. The international yacht race alone will have caused an expenditure of $5,000,000 at the very least. That's a conservative estimate and it might be mentioned that there will be no compensating gate receipts for the men who footed the bills. The reference is to "the" international yacht race, the contest for the America's Cup, but there have been other international yacht races. There was the contest between the United States and Canada and the Bermuda-Long Island series just recently concluded.

Golf is having one of its best years, and that freak offshoot, the so-called Tom Thumb golf, has called for the use of so much material and given so many men employment during the general business slump that government officials have clapped hands for joy. Tennis has been going along at its usual stride. This is an international year in polo and it takes more than the change from a five-dollar bill to finance an invading team or turn back an attacking force in polo.

The Baseball Turnstiles.

Baseball seems headed for its best year financially. It may seem queer, but the baseball magnates believe that in what are called "hard times" the baseball turnstiles whirl just a little faster. That's probably because baseball is a cheap amusement. When a man has plenty of money he buys a car, hires a boat, goes abroad, takes a fishing or hunting trip or indulges in some other delightful and luxurious pastime.

But when he is down to hardpan he has to buy his amusement at a cheaper rate and he gets it at the ball park. That's the baseball theory and there is much evidence to support it.

In that case it's easy to imagine a couple of baseball magnates talking over business conditions, to wit:

"Four more banks have failed in Florida. Isn't that wonderful! Two steel companies have passed their dividends and four automobile plants have shut down. The new tariff bill has killed international trade. We certainly are in luck."

"Yeah. If unemployment gets any worse we'll double our last year's receipts. That drought helped us a lot. Now what we need is an early frost to ruin the harvest. Have you heard any good bankrupt reports lately?"

The Race Problem.

That's a gross libel, of course. Baseball magnates are really kindly gentlemen who pat the heads of little children on the streets and wish everybody well. They are for the full dinner pail. But they don't take to the cyclone cellar when a business slump comes along. They oil up the turnstiles and prepare to greet and entertain the man who, in happier days, did his own entertaining elsewhere on a more expensive plane.

A contributing reason for the financial success of the major leagues this season—the major leagues alone are under discussion—has been the close race in the National League. Here it is September and the argument is not yet settled. The Cubs have the edge, but the Giants, Robins and Cardinals have at least an outside chance of overhauling the leaders. Even the Athletics have had to keep moving along in the American League to stay clear of the pursuing Senators.

But there have been better races in other years when the gate receipts were less satisfactory. It appears that the business slump must be given credit for the baseball boom this year.

The Home-Run Epidemic.

A correspondent wants to know why Hack Wilson wasn't hailed with more enthusiasm in this area when he rushed by Babe Ruth in the great Home Run Derby. The critical correspondent hinted that local pride and prejudice prevented any outburst of enthusiasm over a Chicago player who dared to surpass a New York hero.

The plea in this corner is: Not guilty. In former years Babe Ruth was off all by himself as a home-run hitter. There was a novelty in it when he hoisted the mark from 29 to 54 for a season. After that it began to pall a little. When he later went after his record of 59 and moved it up a peg to 60, it was his come-back after an apparent downhill slide that aroused the real enthusiasm.

Now everybody is hitting home runs, including left-handed pitchers. Ruth has a dozen rivals, of whom the most formidable at the moment is Hack Wilson. Where a feat has become so familiar, it loses its zest. The next popular batting hero will be some player who specializes in hitting triples. Looking over the batting averages, it appears that triples are harder to hit than home runs. At least the sluggers make far more home huns than they do triples.

For All-Around Excellence.

The inclination in this corner is to hail Hack Wilson for all-around excellence on the diamond rather than for his home-run hitting. The late Pep Young, who knew whereof he spoke, said that Hack was the best man he ever had playing beside him in a Giant outfield. Pep was referring to Hack's fielding, for at that time the stout Mr. Wilson had not yet developed an accurate eye for major league pitching.

Hack is short and stubby, almost as wide as he is high. His build is a handicap and yet he shows amazing speed and unflagging industry in the field. He has plenty of color and fighting spirit. If he leads the home-run hitters for the season, that will be another feather in his cap. But if a man expects to attract attention for home-run hitting these days, he will have to hit them two at a time. Overproduction has ruined more than one popular industry. Big oil companies sometimes join forces to cut down on production. Perhaps the baseball sluggers will have to meet the same problem in the same way.

WANDERERS DEFEAT NEWARK AMERICANS

Patterson Gets Two Goals as Brooklyn Soccer Team Scores Shut-Out, 5 to 0.

Displaying championship form, the Brooklyn Wanderers defeated the Newark Americans 5 goals to 0 in their return match at Hawthorne Field, Brooklyn, before a crowd of 1,500 soccer fans yesterday.

After holding the home team to a 0-0 tie in the first half, the defense of the Jerseymen gave way completely in the second. The Wanderers thus avenged their earlier defeat.

Patterson, Brooklyn centre, accounted for two of the goals and Sanders, Eisenhoffer and Malloy contributed one apiece. In corners Newark had the better of it seven to four.

After the restart, Patterson, who had missed two good chances, connected with a combination pass by Maguire and Leyell. A minute later, Sanders made it 2-0 from Patterson's pass.

Brooklyn did not score again for 32 minutes when Eisenhoffer turned in a pass by Wright. Malloy, from a cross by Sanders, sent the score to 4-0 two minutes later. A solo play by Patterson yielded the fifth tally.

WEBB KNOCKS OUT OLDANI IN EIGHTH

Referee Stops Bout at Coney Island After South American's Eye Is Lacerated.

GUHRING UNABLE TO FIGHT

Webb Takes His Place When German Reports Illness—Schwartz Victor Over White.

By JAMES P. DAWSON.

Carlos Oldani, South American heavyweight and stablemate of Victorio Campolo, making his American ring début, suffered a knockout at the hand of Jack Webb, Orlando (Fla.) heavyweight, in the eighth round of what was scheduled as the ten-round feature at Henderson's Bowl, Coney Island, last night.

Jimmy Gearns, a licensed judge, acting as a referee in an emergency, refused to let Oldani respond to the bell for the ninth round because he was suffering a severe laceration under the left eye and the optic was closed. Dr. Joseph Sheridan, New York State Athletic Commission physician, ordered the bout stopped.

Webb substituted for Ernst Guhring, German heavyweight, who complained yesterday that illness would prevent his fulfilling the engagement. Webb weighed 197 pounds and Oldani 209.

The semi-final, scheduled for ten rounds, bringing together Frank Boja, Germany, and Jack (Dennis) Golden, Ireland, was cut to four rounds because of the rain, and ended in a draw. Boja weighed 158½ and Golden 161.

In the first scheduled ten-round bout, shaved to nine rounds when rain started to sprinkle, Solly Schwartz, English welterweight, won from Sammy White of South Brooklyn. Schwartz weighed 139½ pounds and White 139.

Augie Kubart, Elmhurst middleweight, defeated Leroy Wilson, South Brooklyn, in the six-round preliminary. Kubart weighed 164 pounds and Wilson 157. In the opening bout of four rounds Artie Rodenbach, west side heavyweight, won from Tom Colbert of Detroit. Rodenbach weighed 182½ pounds and Colbert 178.

BELL STARS FOR LOSERS

Triumphs Over Hall and Pairs With Vines to Score in Doubles—Borotra in Exhibition.

By ALLISON DANZIG.

John Doeg of Santa Monica and George Lott of Chicago, third and fourth ranking players of the country, returned from their successful defense of their national doubles championship at Boston to go down in defeat in both singles and doubles yesterday as the East again turned back the West, 3—2, at the West Side Tennis Club, Forest Hills.

Gregory Mangin of Newark, spare on the Davis Cup team this year, had a hand in two of the reversals. After defeating Doeg at 6—2, 6—4, while Lott was losing to Frank Shields of New York at 6—3, 6—2, the Mercurial Georgetown undergraduate paired with John Van Ryn of East Orange to vanquish the national doubles titleholders, 3—6, 6—3, 8—6.

Lott and Doeg led at 5—3 in the final set, only to yield to the superlative shot-making of their opponents, who took the last three games at love.

This was the second successive time that Van Ryn and Mangin have defeated Lott and Doeg in the East-West matches. Last year, when the East won the series, 6 to 3, the New Jersey combination met the champions right after they had triumphed at Boston and prevailed over them at 6—2, 3—6, 6—2.

Speculation Is Stimulated.

Coming after the defeat of Van Ryn and Wilmer Allison by Lott and Doeg at Boston on Saturday, the victory of Mangin and Van Ryn stimulates speculation as to the Davis Cup possibilities of the New Jersey combination. In full stride, their collective efforts were characterized by an impetuous dash and quickness on the trigger at the net that were fairly irresistible, with Van Ryn making electrifying returns of Doeg's cannonball service and Mangin doing the almost impossible with his straight backhand, though the latter's return of service was a source of weakness in the first set.

Van Ryn and Mangin pulled up from 0—3 to 3—all in the deciding chapter. A foot fault was called on Lott by a centre service linesman in the ninth game when he was trailing at 0—30. Despite Doeg's superb serving and the excellence of his ground strokes, which had failed him badly against the rushing attack of Mangin in singles, the Eastern team came through by a crushing margin in the concluding stages.

The West's victories were turned in by Berkeley Bell of Austin, Texas, in the singles and by Bell and Ellsworth Vines of Pasadena in the doubles. In a fiery duel of services and explosive ground strokes, punctuated by vehement volleying exchanges, Bell defeated J. Gilbert Hall of South Orange, 6—2, 4—6, 6—3. In doubles the bristling little Texan and the tall, easy-moving Californian vanquished Hall and Shields, 6—4, 6—4.

Spectators Are Amused.

An unexpected attraction was added to the day's program which found instant favor with the gallery of 2,000 spectators and kept them in high glee for an hour and a half. This was the appearance of Jean Borotra of France, his first on American courts since he won the indoor championship in 1929.

With Clifford Sutter of New Orleans, intercollegiate and Eastern champion, as his opponent in an exhibition, the volatile Basque, who arrived here from Canada, put on one of his characteristic performances, catapulting himself about the enclosure with reckless abandon in pursuit of lobs, storming the net for vivid volleys and smashes and finding enjoyment in it all.

Needless to say, the gallery enjoyed it all, too, including the repartee between Borotra and Lott, who turned from the adjourning court on one occasion to call "foot fault" as Borotra served. The Basque had to pause and wave a waggish finger at the Chicagoan before he served the second ball.

Borotra won the exhibition, but not until he had lost the first set to Sutter, who gave a splendid account of himself and likewise gave the French Davis Cup ace more trouble than he probably had bargained for. The score was 4—6, 6—3, 6—2, 6—2.

FOOTBALL TO START TODAY IN NEW YORK

40 ON THE COLUMBIA SQUAD

37 at Fordham and 40 at N. Y. U. Will Answer Call—40 Candidates Expected by Lavender.

The start of a new football campaign under a new coach gets underway at Columbia this morning at 10 o'clock when approximately forty candidates report to Coach Lou Little at Baker Field.

There will be few veterans from last season's outfit, so the newcomers will come in for a great deal of attention from Little and his assistants. The absence of a large squad, the installing of a new football system by Little, and the inexperience of the majority of aspirants, all will tend to make the double workouts from now until Sept. 24 filled with plenty of action.

There will be eleven letter men from the 1929 team reporting.

The squad:

The Fordham squad, numbering thirty-seven, will report to Coach Frank Cavanaugh at Fordham Field today for its opening practice.

Hiker Joy, Dennis McNamara and Paddy Creedon, assistant coaches, also will be on hand to greet the squad, which includes nine members of last season's undefeated eleven.

Major Cavanaugh, who is beginning his fourth campaign as coach at Fordham, intends to hold two training drills each day from now until the opening of classes, when the practice will be restricted to one session a day but which will be much more strenuous than the work of the early periods.

At today's morning session Cavanaugh will lecture his charges on the necessity of strict training and the better results that are derived from the individual submerging himself for the good of the team. In the afternoon period the coach will inaugurate limbering up exercises.

Coach Meehan expects to take more than forty candidates to the Violet training camp where the group will remain until Sept. 22, indulging in two workouts daily except Sunday. The list of candidates will be increased through a general and freshman call which will be sounded soon.

The coaching staff assisting Meehan this season includes Mortimer Starobin, Syracuse; Stafford J. Connor, New Hampshire State; John J. Connor, N. Y. U.; John V. Weinheimer, N. Y. U.; Charles D. Sergeant Pauch, U. S. Army, Wins Navy Match In Field of 1,484 at National Rifle Shoot

By The Associated Press.

CAMP PERRY, Ohio, Sept. 1.—The navy match of the national rifle matches here was won today by an army sergeant, Frederick Pauch of Somerville, N. J., who was first among 1,484 marksmen with a score of 97 out of a possible 100 points.

Robert B. Moore, Joplin (Mo.) civilian, and Sergeant John Carlson of Fort George Wright, Wash., also had scores of 97 each, but Pauch had the most hits in the inner ring of the bullseye.

Three service men tied for second at 96 points each—Sergeant Willard Brown, United States Marine Corps; Lieutenant Kamiel Martens, Fort George Wright, and Robert F. Gadd, Connecticut National Guard.

Ensign D. L. McDonald, U. S. N., won the match last year with a score of 96.

Major C. H. Hodges, Fort Benning, Ga., carried off the day's honors at skeet shooting, a modified form of trapshooting, with 24 out of 25 targets. J. H. Otterson, Wilmington, Del., and F. J. Ward, Camp Perry, had 23s to tie for second place.

Thurman Randle, Fort Worth, Texas, is leading the contestants attempting to qualify for the twenty places on the United States team, which next Sunday will fire in the annual Dewar international shoot against marksmen of Canada, England, France and Belgium. Randle's score is 795 out of a possible 800. Sergeant Edgar L. Doyle, New Haven, Conn., is next with 794 and Fred J. Hansen, Chicago, third with 793.

KYRONEN CAPTURES 15-MILE RUN TITLE

Carries Off Metropolitan Crown Before 5,000 at 74th Annual Scottish Games.

By ARTHUR J. DALEY.

Two foreign-born athletes romped off with premier honors at the seventy-fourth annual Scottish Games, conducted by the New York Caledonian Club, before a crowd of 5,000 at Ulmer Park yesterday. One was Willie Kyronen of Finland, who captured the Metropolitan A. A. U. fifteen-mile championship, and the other was Phil Edwards of British Guiana, who annexed the Scott invitation mile run.

Both won in relatively easy fashion with Kyronen leading his nearest rival, Whitey Michelsen of the Millrose A. A., a member of the 1928 American Olympic team, by a little more than a lap, and with Edwards showing the way to Isadore Miller of the Millrose A. A., the metropolitan half-mile champion, by nearly thirty yards.

Kyronen Steps to Fore.

In both instances it was the eventual winner who set the pace from start to finish. Kyronen stepped out in the fore in the first mile, while the runners were still circling the Ulmer Park track, and was at the head of the parade for the twelve miles of Brooklyn streets that led up to the final two miles around the track again.

The veteran Finnish-American A. C. star eased down a bit in the latter stages of the race after he had opened up a one-mile lead at the midway mark, but still was able to coast in with a full lap to spare over Michelsen. Kyronen was timed in 1:31:01, well in back of the record.

Edwards, who had demonstrated at Chicago in the dual meet between the United States and the British Empire that he had regained his old-time form which once had enabled him to equal Ted Meredith's 880-yard American record, was in fine fettle at a distance somewhat strange to him. He was pressed for a while by Miller, also new at the mile route, but drew away steadily in the last 260 yards to breeze in an easy victor in the very ordinary time of 4:31:4.

Gains Leg on Trophy.

Although Edwards gained one leg on the Colonel Walter Scott Trophy by his triumph, the New York Athletic Club captured its third Scott prize of the season by winning team honors with 21 points. Previously the Winged Foot Club had won metropolitan junior and senior titles and a Scott trophy went with each.

The three best performances of the afternoon were furnished by a trio of New York A. C. men, all coming in the field events. George Spitz won the high jump from scratch at 6 feet 3 inches; Leo Sexton was victorious in the 12-pound shot-put from scratch with a toss of 54 feet 2¼ inches, and Pat McDonald captured the 56-pound weight throw for height from scratch with the pole vaulting height of 13 feet 6 inches.

WEST INDIANS PLAY DRAW AT CRICKET

MARTINDALE BATTING STAR

Not Out for 76 as West Indians Complete Tour With 14 Victories, 1 Loss and 6 Draws.

Although fifty-nine runs ahead, with an innings to spare, in the last match of their tour, the West Indians nevertheless had to be content with a draw when darkness put a stop to their play in the game with the All-Barbados cricket eleven at Commercial Field in Brooklyn yesterday.

Resuming where they had left off on Sunday, E. Martindale and P. Edwards kept on batting, and before their partnership was broken had taken the West Indians' total to 222. Before the side was out a total of 299 had been realized. Martindale was not out for 76 and Edwards had added 62. J. Smith contributed 20.

The Barbados players went in for a second time and to their first innings' total of 85 added 155 for the loss of eight wickets. The two wickets they had still in hand saved them from a one-sided defeat. H. Edgehill played brilliantly for 65, other doubles being those of N. Harding, 24; A. Walcott, 17; R. Cook, 13, and A. Dash, 12.

The West Indians, who finished their schedule of twenty-one games with a record of 14 victories, 1 loss and 6 draws, will sail for home on the steamship Dominica on Thursday.

MISS AMES TAKES SENIOR SWIM TITLE

Covers 100 Meters Free-Style in 1:14 4-5 in Metropolitan A. A. U. Event at Briarcliff.

MISS FERGUSON TRIUMPHS

Annexes 400-Meter Handicap in Duel With Miss Robertson—Miss Kompa Also Scores.

Special to The New York Times.

BRIARCLIFF MANOR, N. Y., Sept. 1.—Miss Catherine Ames of the Women's Swimming Association of New York defeated three clubmates to win the senior Metropolitan A. A. U. 100-meter free style championship, feature of a water carnival held over the 50-meter course in the lagoon at Briarcliff Lodge today. Miss Ames covered the distance in 1:14 4-5.

The title test, which promised to provide a keen battle between Miss Ames and Miss Helen Hendry, newly developed young star, unfortunately was marred by the latter's failure to hold a straight route. She set off at a tangent after the turn at the halfway mark, collided with Miss Constance Hanf, then straightened out in front of her.

Despite the collision, Miss Hendry finished second, less than three yards behind Miss Ames, but the referee disqualified her for interference and second went to Miss Hanf, with Miss Jessie Conway third.

The 400-meter free style handicap was marked by brilliant work on the part of Miss Florence Ferguson of the Yonkers A. C. and Miss Susan Robertson of the Women's S. A., respectively. They thrashed to the line in dead heat, but inasmuch as Miss Ferguson had the smaller allowance, 39 seconds to her rival's 41, she was declared the winner. Her time was 6:25 1-5, a sterling feat for a youngster. Miss Robertson's time was 6:27 1-5.

Another pretty duel was witnessed in the 100-meter back stroke handicap. Miss Erna Kompa and Miss Margaret Decker of the W. S. A., allotted 9 and 11 seconds, reached home neck and neck, Miss Kompa gaining the decision by a mere touch in 1:31 2-5.

The 100-meter free style handicap for girls under fifteen went to Miss Jules Barrett of the Yonkers A. C. in 1:39 3-5.

ASSERTS AUSTRALIA MUST MEET DEBTS

Acting Premier Fenton Rejects Suggestion for Cut in the Interest Charges.

OUR SETTLEMENT ENTERS

Press Asks Whether Britain Treated Dominion as Favorably as America Treated Britain.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MELBOURNE, Sept. 1.—"Whatever our fixed commitments, we must meet them," Acting Prime Minister Fenton declared today in replying to a suggestion that a reduction of the interest on Australia's war debt would be one remedy for the country's financial difficulties.

Answering a general suggestion for the funding of international debts, including that due to the United States, Mr. Fenton said many and varied subjects would be discussed at the approaching imperial conference, where Australian interests would be in good hands.

"Without any comparison, Australia did her share, and more than her share, in the war without waiting to count the cost," he said. "Obviously, she must pay what she contracted to pay."

The subject came up in another form during the week-end, when newspaper broadsides were fired at Sir Otto Niemeyer of the Bank of England, asking, bitterly, whether "the motherland treated Australia with the same generosity as the United States treated Britain." Sir Otto retorted that the British debt to America had nothing to do with the case and that Australia had no ground for thinking she bore heavier war expenses than Canada, New Zealand and South Africa.

CANBERRA, Sept. 1.—The Commonwealth revenue for the first two months of the financial year shows such an alarming decline that it seems inevitable a special session of the Federal Parliament will be called for October to deal with Australia's financial position. The customs revenue for the two months is $7,395,000 below the estimate, and for the whole current year a decline of $10,000,000 was allowed for, whereas the decline already is $16,280,000 below last year's revenue.

FINDS ANCIENT CEMETERY.

Italian Professor Discovers Burial Ground of Roman Workers.

ROME, Sept. 1 (by Science Service).—A burial ground for members of the working classes of the ancient Roman world has been discovered on the Sacred Island near Ostia, seaport of Rome. Twenty tombs have already been unearthed under the direction of Professor Guido Calza of the University of Rome, and thirty more may be restored to view.

The most humble Roman citizens as well as the more prosperous buried there received some tribute of art appropriate to his calling. A sailor's brick-walled tomb is marked with a bas-relief of a boat rowed over the waves. A miller's tomb is decorated with a horse harnessed to a wheat grinder. A doctor's tomb has a carving of his first-aid kit and also a bas-relief of a surgical operation. Some of the carvings are the crude work of untrained hands, but artistic feeling is there, Professor Calza says.

The finding of the burials may set at rest scholarly speculation as to why the place was referred to as the Sacred Island in old writings.

WITHDRAWS LEAGUE GROUP

New Peruvian Government Notifies Geneva of Change.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, Sept. 1.—The League of Nations secretariat announced today the receipt of a message from Ernesto Montagne, Foreign Minister of the Provisional Government of Peru, withdrawing the delegation appointed by the former government to the assembly meeting here Sept. 10. It authorizes José Mario Barreto, secretary of the delegation and permanent Peruvian delegate here, to represent Peru pending further provision for a new assembly delegation.

The reason given for the change is the establishment of the new régime. The delegation withdrawn was headed by Mariano Cornejo, Minister to France, who since Peru's election to the Council last September represented it there and on all important committees. Señor Cornejo took an energetic and outspoken part in activities here. He was one of the few diplomats here who did not hesitate to call a spade a spade, particularly in championing the rights of small States against the great powers.

Camden Police Active Following Warnings of Shake-Up.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMDEN, N. J., Sept. 1.—Fifty-three prisoners appeared for arraignment today before Police Judge Garfield Pancoast as the result of thirteen raids which police conducted over the week-end following recent warnings of an impending shake-up in the police department.

The places raided included alleged gambling houses, speakeasies and pool rooms. Gambling equipment was seized in several places and a quantity of liquor was taken. In several instances patrons were arrested as witnesses.

Thirty-four of the prisoners were fined a total of more than $1,700, or forfeited nominal bail by failing to appear for today's hearing. Judge Pancoast held sixteen others for the grand jury or for further hearings on Wednesday, jailed two and released one.

Special to The New York Times.

BAY SHORE, L. I., Sept. 1.—All public schools here will open Wednesday morning, according to announcement here by Floyd Hurlbut, superintendent of schools.

Registration of all grade children who have not previously attended a Bay Shore public school will be from 9 to 12 o'clock next Tuesday in the grade schools on Brook Avenue, Fourth Avenue and Fifth Avenue.

There will be a kindergarten in each of these schools. Children who have passed their fifth birthday on or before next Wednesday will be admitted to the kindergarten. Such a certificate may be obtained from the office of the Town Clerk in Islip if the child was born in Islip township. A baptismal certificate may be presented, but school authorities are not permitted to accept an affidavit of the parent.

The Fourth Avenue grade school will accommodate a kindergarten and grades one to eight inclusive, while the Fifth Avenue and Brook Avenue schools will be limited to a kindergarten and grades one to six inclusive. Pupils entering the high school or the grades from some other school should present a transfer from that school. Registration for high school is under way this week.

Special to The New York Times.

FREEPORT, L. I., Sept. 1.—George E. Van Nostrand, who has been employed in the Brooklyn post-office for forty-five years, retired yesterday and from now on will devote his time to fishing, collecting civic data from the papers and attending civic meetings. His application for a position was signed by Henry Ward Beecher, Theodore A. Diamond, then President of the Board of Aldermen; H. B. Claflin, the merchant, and Dr. Alexander Skene.

Tompkins, chairman of the committee. The group was said to be working in conjunction with Caspar Spies, secretary of the Central Queens Allied Civic Council.

Members of the committee are searching titles in the Queens Register's office and reporting the names of the property owners to the council, it was announced. CULBERTSON TEAM KEEPS BRIDGE PRIZE

BIDS ARE CONSERVATIVE

Perfect Defensive Play Marks Victory Over Four Headed by P. H. Sims of Deal, N. J.

Ely Culbertson's four-man contract bridge team scored a decisive victory in defending their possession of the Asbury Park Trophy, won in the annual Summer tournament of the American Bridge League last July, against the challenge of a team captained by Philip H. Sims of Deal, N. J., in a match at the Knickerbocker Whist Club, 35 West Forty-third Street, yesterday afternoon. The margin of victory was 2,840 points.

Mr. Culbertson and Theodore Lightner, playing the east-and-west in the forty duplicate hands which composed the match, finished with a net score of 1,635 over Lee Langdon and Michael Gottlieb, the Sims pair who opposed them, while Mrs. Culbertson and Baron Waldemar von Zedtwitz, playing the same hands which Mr. Langdon and Mr. Gottlieb played, finished 1,205 points ahead of their opponents, Mr. Sims and Willard Karn.

There was little of the spectacular in the bidding or play. The bidding was sound and precise rather than flashy, and the most conspicuous feature of the play was the perfect defense of the pair playing against the contracting side.

While there was no great disparity between the cards held by the east-and-west hands and those held by the north-and-south, it was generally agreed that the former had somewhat the better cards. For this reason the showing made by Mrs. Culbertson and Baron von Zedtwitz against Mr. Sims and Mr. Karn was considered the outstanding achievement of the match.

Despite the fact that both of their opponents were acknowledged top-rank players, and despite the fact they had the poorer cards, Mrs. Culbertson and the Baron came out well ahead, and the absence of errors in their defensive play was held chiefly responsible.

The bidding systems used by the two teams were not radically different. The Culbertson team used a little lighter requirement for their forcing-two bid, Mr. Sims's play reserving this for definite slam indications, with a requirement of at least six quick tricks. However, the vast bulk of the bidding was accomplished by a gradual climb, principally by minimum over-calls. Forcing bids were unusual, proving the exception.

GETS SECOND PAPERS TODAY

Balchen, Byrd's Pilot, Expects Citizenship in 90 Days.

Bernt Balchen, pilot of the plane which carried Rear Admiral Byrd over the South Pole, will go before F. R. Wontendyke, United States District Naturalization Commissioner with offices in Newark, today to receive his second citizenship papers, and will probably receive his final papers within ninety days, it was learned last night.

J. W. Binder, secretary of the Bergen County Chamber of Commerce, was notified yesterday to accompany Balchen to the commissioner's offices today.

Balchen's right to citizenship papers this year was threatened by technicalities, due to the fact that he had spent two years in Antarctica as chief pilot for Admiral Byrd after filing his first papers.

Two Die in Illinois Plane Crash.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—Frank L. Deihs, an Elgin realty dealer and aviation enthusiast, who narrowly escaped death on Friday when a plane crashed near him at the National Air Races, lost his life in the crack-up of his own plane this evening in the view of 10,000 holiday picnickers near Dundee, Ill. He died on the way to a hospital, and one of his two passengers, Ervin Born, succumbed at a hospital. The other passenger, John Hubert, 19, also of Elgin, is in a grave condition.

DISABILITY DEGREES DEFINED BY COURT

HELPED IN STORE A LITTLE

Supreme Court of Mississippi Puts Liberal Interpretation on Plaintiff's Disablement.

The Equitable Life Assurance Society vs. Serio was a lawsuit in Mississippi, according to The Journal of the American Medical Association which says:

"The insured carried a policy of life insurance under which the insurer, for an additional premium, agreed to pay certain benefits if the insured should become totally and permanently disabled. He developed tuberculosis. On the advice of his physician, he refrained from doing regular manual labor. He spent a part of nearly every day, however, in a small country store, which he and his wife, with the aid of their children, operated. The family lived in the rear of the store.

"In that connection he could do small jobs, occasionally wait on customers when no considerable effort was required, and generally, when circumstances did not require him to rest in bed, assist in the store in an irregular and more or less casual way. In undertaking these tasks, he was always exposed to the risk of attacks of weakness and of having to go back to bed, but one or more members of the family were there for his aid and protection.

"There was nothing to show that if he had been separated from his family and from the security that their presence afforded he could have independently earned, in any kind of employment for a financial return, an amount of any consequence. The insured filed claims for two annual instalments of benefits claimed to be due under his policy, but payment was refused. He thereupon sued and recovered judgment. The insurer appealed to the Supreme Court of Mississippi.

"The construction, said the court, which is placed by nearly all courts on insurance contracts such as that which forms the basis of this suit is an equitable and reasonable construction. It is not that literal interpretation which would construe 'total disability' to mean a condition of complete helplessness or such an entire physical or mental inability in respect to the pursuit of an occupation or employment as would prevent the insured from doing anything whatever.

"The construction is more liberal in a case in which the disability arises out of a disease the nature of which is such that common care and prudence require the insured to rest, to the extent that he shall refrain from the ordinary exactions of any fixed employment. Tuberculosis is such a disease, as is so well known as to require no proof before the average jury in Mississippi. The jury in this case, in the light of all the evidence, was well justified in returning the verdict that it did, in favor of the insured.

"The insurer apparently claimed that even though it should be held that within the meaning of the policy the insured was wholly unable to engage in any occupation or perform any work and was therefore 'totally disabled,' yet the evidence did not show that his disability was 'permanent' and that he could not get well. But the court refused to interpret the term 'permanent disability' as meaning only a disability without any hope or possibility of recovery or change for the better.

"Courts must give such contracts a reasonable interpretation that will stand the test of honesty and square the transaction between the parties with some valuable object in contemplation at the time the contract was made.

HURRICANE LASHES ISLE OF DOMINICA

Tropical Storm Heads for Porto Rico and Cuba After Passing Martinique.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, Sept. 1.—A hurricane has struck the island of Dominica, in the Lesser Antilles, probably causing serious damage, and was headed tonight toward Porto Rico and Eastern Cuba, it was announced at 11 P. M. by Father Lanza, director of the Belen Observatory.

The hurricane's present course does not seem to threaten Havana, but due to its intensity, speed and possibility of changing direction it will be a potential menace for at least twenty-four hours.

Father Lanza's bulletin says the hurricane passed from the Atlantic Ocean into the Caribbean Sea north of Martinique, struck Dominica and at last reports was northwest of Martinique.

"Its intensity has increased alarmingly in the past few hours, attaining the proportions of a hurricane," says the bulletin. "It is probable that the storm will pass over Porto Rico some time tomorrow. If this course is maintained it is probable that it will affect the eastern section of Cuba."

FINANCIAL MARKETS

An Interesting Month Begins in an Obscure Situation—The Record of September.

Yesterday was observed as a holiday in practically all financial and commercial markets. It was a period of nation-wide suspension of business activities. There was once a time when the holiday-makers came back after Labor Day expecting immediate change in the business situation—prompt return to normal trade activities, if nothing more. This did not often happen; even in a year of active trade business is apt to be as slow in reacquiring momentum after the Summer idleness as it was in relinquishing activities on the approach of Summer. Even the tightening of money, which used to be expected at the beginning of September, has in recent normal years not usually been visible before the October quarter-day.

Nevertheless, September has often been a month in American finance and trade with a very distinctive character of its own. It was certainly so last year; indeed, September of 1929 will be remembered in our financial history as the month when the furious three-year Stock Exchange speculation came definitely to an end. In some of its aspects the speculation for the rise continued half way through the month, for stock market "averages" reached their high record figure in September, brokers' borrowings surpassed all records and issues of new company securities as a whole, and of investment trust shares in particular, exceeded all monthly records. But, on the other hand, all the storm signals were set which indicated the following month's great crash. European money markets were taking urgent protective measures, European capital was rushing home from the Wall Street market and unmistakable signs of decreasing trade activity were in sight.

September was a notable month of trade expansion in 1928, 1926 and 1924. In the last-named year only the traditional dislike to anticipate uncertainties of a Presidential election seemed to hold in leash a market which was already drawing conclusions from the great turn in the agricultural situation. An equally notable and equally sudden change in the opposite direction came in 1927 and 1920. The trade reaction of 1927—people in those days insisted on calling it "mild depression"—began in earnest in September, the steel trade leading. It was the first of many occasions when the paradox was presented of an enthusiastic rise on the Stock Exchange while trade was doing badly.

The story of September, 1920, is almost forgotten in view of the larger and more spectacular economic events that followed. It was a month in which complete illusion regarding the as yet invisible business situation alternated with fright at the visible trend of trade and prices. With the Stock Exchange in a state of unusual mental bewilderment, September's prices for railway shares rose enthusiastically to the highest of the year, while industrial shares plunged down to previously unreached depths. Two misconceptions, that return of the railways to private ownership meant immediate restoration of prosperity in the war-crippled organism, and that the "consumers' strike" of the previous Spring meant great speeding up of necessary purchases in Autumn, existed simultaneously with a fall in staple prices more violent than had yet occurred, and exceeded only by the precipitous decline of the next three months.

The month which has just begun has at least the advantage over September in 1927 or 1920, that financial markets have already faced the full violence of readjustment in the two or three past months. There is no illusion left regarding the nature of the industrial situation, unless it is the kind of illusion which pictures the future in darker colors than are warranted. In past financial experience, such an attitude has usually been a safeguard against unpleasant surprises. But financial watchers will keep their eye with unusual interest, first on the course of the September stock market, which certainly begins with an accumulated speculative interest on the side of the decline, and next on the course of staple prices, which can hardly fail to throw some light on existing obscurities.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

News, Comment and Incident, On the Stock Exchange and In the Financial Markets.

Business will be resumed as usual in the financial centres this morning after having been suspended entirely yesterday in observance of Labor Day.

⁂

Different Points of View.

An illustration of the difficulties of ascribing precise motives for actions taken by the central banking authorities is offered by the divergent explanations put forth concerning the recent purchase of $30,000,000 of government securities by the bank of issue. Among bankers here it was concluded at once that the securities had been purchased to offset the effects of gold exports. The Federal Reserve Board, in its bulletin, explains, however, that they were acquired to offset the effects of increased currency demands. This point indicates some forethought on the part of the authorities, for the securities were purchased in the first week of August, when the extra demand for currency had only just begun to be felt, after the reaching of the season's low point late in July. It is not unlikely, however, that the authorities may have agreed on the desirability of the move, without being in complete accord as to the reasons for it. In any case, it was an important step in furtherance of the bank's easy-money policy. The market here accepted the theory that the move was actuated by the gold exports, because it had concluded that the Federal Reserve authorities were in sympathy with the export of some of our surplus stocks of the metal.

The Last Day of Summer.

Although astronomers and the devisers of daylight-saving schedules use other days in reckoning the close of Summer, the investment banking fraternity has marked down Labor Day as the date when the dullness of Summer is forgotten and a fresh start is made. In some years the dullness has continued long after Labor Day, while in others business has speeded up remarkably. However, this year all signs point to a busy September in the bond market. The market is not glutted with unsold bonds. Indeed there is something of a scarcity value for certain types of high-grade bonds and certainly a dearth of short-time notes.

Steel Operations Watched.

The operations of the United States Steel Corporation as well as the movement in Steel common are perhaps more closely watched now than at any other time in the last several years by persons wishing to sense the trend of business as well as of the security markets, it is asserted. During the late bull market, which ended rather disastrously last Fall, the general opinion in the financial community was that United States Steel had lost its leadership of the market. However, since the rally in the market from its low point last Autumn, attributed in part to buying of United States Steel for the account of bankers, any news bearing on the operations of the Steel Corporation has been studied closely by the financial community. The source of both the buying and selling of the stock has also been closely watched.

Rates and Prices.

In the midst of the emergency rate-cutting by the railroads to help drought areas, and in view of the lower rates on grain to go into effect on Jan. 1, there was discussion in railroad circles last week of the relation of railroad rates to commodity prices. An analysis was cited wherein it was shown that over a period of years freight rates in the United States have always declined more, or advanced less, than the prices of commodities generally. This analysis also showed that, while wholesale prices are 65 per cent higher now than they were in 1885, the average ton-mile revenue of railroads is now only about 1 per cent greater than it was in that year. In 1921 the average freight rate was 26.1 per cent higher than in 1885, while the wholesale price of commodities averaged 72 per cent higher.

Too Close to the Situation.

An executive of a large industrial corporation recently communicated with his bankers, according to a story circulated in Wall Street, and told them that he would like to invest in standard common stocks, as he expected that there would be an improvement in the general business situation this Fall. The banker suggested at once the industrialist's own stock, but the latter rejected the recommendation. While he had faith in his company, he said, he expected that its stock would be rather slow to reflect general improvement in the market. During recent sessions the industrialist's stock has been one of the features of the upward movement. "That is an illustration," the banker remarked, "of a man who was too close to a situation to see clearly."

The South American Political Unrest.

As was demonstrated last week, news of a revolt in a South American country is the signal for a weakness in that country's bonds. First came the slump in Peruvian bonds at the beginning of the week, and subsequently the drops in Argentinian and Brazilian issues. The comment in investment banking circles here was simply that governmental changes do not in themselves alter the status of a nation's credit standing. One has only to glance at the debt history of South America to note that repudiations of debts or defaults are extremely rare. One feature of note last week was the fact that Peruvian bonds quickly recovered most of the losses.

Among the Pessimists.

Despite the improvement in sentiment in Wall Street in the last fortnight, the financial community is by no means in agreement concerning the course of the stock market this Fall. Several market letter writers asserted on Friday that the market's sharp rise was undeniably an invitation to the public to buy stocks at the opening of the Exchange on Tuesday morning. At least one expert remarked, however, that he was doubtful whether the public would accept the invitation. Most of the letter writers appear to be expecting a good market during September, but they are a little dubious concerning the outlook during the rest of the year. One pessimist, who says he has attempted to glean encouragement in high banking circles, has concluded that there are only two schools of thought. "One school," he says, "predicts that the June low levels will be broken in the Fall or Winter. The other school believes that the low levels of last November will be broken."

Trust Mergers Revived.

With the recovery in the stock market, many rumors of mergers of investment trusts have been revived. According to reports current in Wall Street, the managements of some of the middle-sized trusts feel that they are unequal to the task of attempting to make money in such an erratic market as 1930 has witnessed thus far. Critics of the trusts say that a majority of those with offices in New York not only buy and sell their holdings at the same time but also choose the same stocks. There is little independence of action among the managers of some trusts, it is charged. In such circumstances, it is held, the best way out of the difficulty is to merge the indifferently managed trusts with those possessing strong sponsorship and brilliant management.

A Stable Industry

Despite the peaks and valleys which continually recur in the business cycle, there has never been a year since the inception of the industry, about forty-seven years ago, when the annual gross receipts of the electric light and power companies of this country have shown a decrease.

We recommend the bonds and preferred stocks of well-established electric light and power companies for conservative investment from the standpoint of stability of earnings, liberal yield and the degree of security afforded.

THE THIRD DISCOVERY OF GAS

Gas began to displace candles and whale-oil for LIGHTING in this country about 1815. Then, as gas lights were themselves being displaced by electric bulbs in the 90's, a new use for gas became popular—COOKING.

The third discovery of gas did not take place until the past decade. Gas was found to be superior for HEATING. This new demand helped to make the production of gas during the last ten years greater than the total produced during all the previous 110 years of the industry.

Gas for House Heating

House heating by gas holds an especially bright future.

It banishes from winter months the burden of shoveling fuel, handling ashes, building new fires, regulating heat. Lighted in the fall, a gas furnace automatically maintains a constant temperature indoors all winter.

Burning of gas helps in conservation of fuel. A ton of coal, burned in the average household furnace, gives only half as many heat units as the gas produced from a ton of coal in a gas manufacturing plant.

Gas is a clean fuel; it does not soil curtains, hangings, or walls. With gas heat the cellar becomes a habitable part of the house.

Associated Increase 33% a year

Two facts emphasize possibilities of house heating by gas. It is estimated that of about 13 million domestic customers in this country, only about 75,000 use gas for house heating. While the average customer uses only 30,000 cubic feet of gas a year, the consumer using it for house heating burns 300,000 cubic feet a year.

Although less than one-half of 1% of the Associated System's gas customers use gas for house heating, yet their consumption was 7% of total sales in 1929. Homes heated by gas supplied by the Associated System are increasing at the rate of 33% a year.

Tone Generally Firm on English Exchange—Buying Largely Professional.

FRENCH STOCKS UNCHANGED

Trading Dull Despite the Ease in Settlements—Trend Downward on German Boerse.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 1.—Although the New York Stock Exchange was closed Saturday and today over Labor Day, the second week of the account opened under generally firm conditions. Buying again was largely of a professional nature. Dealers, however, reported that a fair amount of public orders had accumulated over the week-end. In British Government funds Victory bonds were supported, but the others were inclined to dullness, owing to the less favorable tendency in foreign exchanges. The 4½ per cent conversion loan held up well, but the war loan weakened to £103 13-16.

Among the industrials textiles again were supported, Coats rising to 59s, Bleachers to 16s 9d and Fine Spinners to 21s. Rayons were heavy, American Celanese reacting to £2 11-16 and Courtaulds to £2 3-16. There was more activity in British Celanese owing to the near approach of the company's report. Cables and Wireless strengthened in the afternoon. The B ordinary gained 2 points, the A ordinary 2 points and 5½ per cent preference 1 point.

Most of the internationals opened better, but around midday slipped back somewhat, owing to Wall Street being closed. Fresh support was given this section, Hydro-Electric recovering from $36¾ to $38⅝, International Holding from $4⅜ to $4⅝, and Brazilian Traction from $35 to $36. His Master's Voice Gramophone finished at £3 1-16 after being under £3. Imperial Chemical recovered, the ordinary picking up to 21s 9d, after 21s 4½d.

Although there was no change in the price of the commodity, rubber shares improved in several instances.

Oil shares were little altered, but the tendency was irregular. Rhodesian mining stocks were quieter but firm in tendency.

Loans continued in fair demand today in Lombard Street. There was less inquiry for bills in the discount market. Sterling exchange on New York was lower at $4.86 25-32 @$4.86 27-32.

Session Dull in Paris.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 1.—Money was plentiful at the abnormally low rate of one-half of 1 per cent for the August liquidation held today. This rate beat the previous low record in mid-August when money was obtainable at three-quarters of 1 per cent.

Despite the extreme ease in settlements the market was not in the least stimulated and the Bourse was dormant practically the whole session. The hoped-for reawakening of activity at the beginning of September did not appear and the volume of transactions did not increase.

Rentes remained steady and some categories made gains. The close was as follows: The 3 per cents, 88.95; 1917 4s, 101.60; 1918 4s, 101; 1920 amortizable 5s, 136.25; 1915-16 5s, 101.25; 1928 5s, 104; 1920 6s, 102.55; 1927 amortizable 6s, 106.05.

Quiet and Weaker in Berlin.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 1.—The tendency at today's session of the Boerse was toward weakness, although owing to the greatly reduced volume of trading most stocks were fairly well maintained. Felten and Guilleaume of the electricals and Julius Berger of the building group each was 3 points weaker. On the other hand, several issues were able to register slight gains, among them Reichsbank, Svenska Tandsticks, Thueringer Gas, Deutsche Wolle and Schantung Railway.

The Boerse closed inactive. Call money was 5 to 7 per cent.

REPORT LAND BANKS UNHURT BY DROUGHT

Heads of System Say Loans in Affected Area Are Comparatively Small.

THIRTEEN YEARS REVIEWED

Credit Outstanding Now Averages $15.54 an Acre, Against Appraisement of $46.85.

The drought will have slight effect upon the Federal Land Banks, according to a report prepared by the present managers of the banking group which first offered Federal Land Bank bonds to the public in 1917. Most of the sections affected by the drought are within the territories of the strongest banks, it is explained, and the percentage of loans within the drought area is small compared with the total loans of the system.

The report, which constitutes a summary for investors of the results of the experience of the last thirteen years, as interpreted by the Federal Farm Loan Board and its statisticians, is designed to answer inquiries which have been made, either by the group managers themselves or by investors in the bonds.

It contains a summary of the present condition of the banks, based on the June 30 statement and supplemented by other information. For purposes of simplification the system has been treated as a single institution and three ciphers have been dropped from all figures. Thus instead of a system of twelve banks with consolidated assets of approximately $1,292,000,000, the study contemplates an institution of $1,292,000 in resources.

"Such a bank," the report says, "would have outstanding total loans of $1,194,000. The full amount of the principal of all loans on which there was any existing delay in any partial payment of interest or principal would be as of June 30, 1930, $89,000; the principal amount of loans on which that delay had existed for ninety days and over would be $37,000; the actual amount of the payments delayed over ninety days would be $2,717 (against which reserves equal in the aggregate to the full amount of payments delayed ninety days and over had been set up); the aggregate amount of payments on which there had been delays of less than ninety days against which reserves had not yet been set up would be about $2,243.

"It is the custom of the banks to set up reserves against the full amount of all payments delayed for ninety days and over.

"After deducting reserves set up against possible losses, the real estate taken over would stand on the books of such a bank at $11,500. The total amount of sheriffs' certificates, judgments, &c., which were still subject to redemption, would be $6,900. This in a bank whose loans aggregated $1,194,000.

"These figures, as small as they are, do not represent losses. For example, the real estate that stands on the books of such a bank at $11,500 net after deducting special reserves, possessed an original appraised value of not less than $39,000, and the banks have been selling farm lands in increasing volume in the past two years.

"Thus farm lands owned outright by the banks stood on their books as of June 30, 1930, at an amount after the deduction of reserves, which constituted only nine-tenths of 1 per cent of the total assets of the banks, and the total amount of sheriffs' certificates, judgments, &c. (representing lands still redeemable by owners), represented only five-tenths of 1 per cent of the banks' total assets.

"The actual average of all loans closed by the Federal Land Banks to June 30, 1930, was $3,222 only; the semi-annual or annual payments are such as to amortize the loans by maturity, and loans now average $15.54 per acre, as against appraisements of $46.85 per acre, or 33.2 per cent.

"When we hear then of deflation of farm values, of the number of foreclosures on mortgages and of lands and properties taken over; when we compare these figures with assets as a whole and the reserves that have been set up, we can realize how relatively insignificant has been the effect of deflation upon the security of Federal Land Bank bonds."

UTILITY IN OREGON TO ASK $40,000,000

CONCERN FORMED RECENTLY

Will Take Over Power Properties of Pacific Northwest Public Service Company.

Offering will be made soon of a new issue of $40,000,000 Portland General Electric Company first and refunding mortgage 4½ per cent bonds, series due in 1960, by a syndicate headed by Harris, Forbes & Co. The company was formed recently to take over the electric properties in Oregon of the Pacific Northwest Public Service Company as the first step in the latter's program of segregating its electric, gas and railway holdings.

Proceeds of this financing will be used to retire approximately $29,000,000 of 5, 5½, 6 and 7½ per cent mortgage debt now outstanding against the electric porperties. The debt will be retired on various dates up to Nov. 1, 1931. The remainder of the proceeds will be used to refund advances for the installation of additional generating capacity, to provide the company with working capital and for other corporate purposes.

On completion of this financing the capitalization of Portland General Electric will be 500,000 shares of no-par comomn stkco, of which 250,000 shares, with the exception of directors' qualifying shares, will be owned by the Pacific Northwest Public Service Company; $6,813,000 first mortgage 5 per cent bonds, due on July 1, 1935, and the new issue.

Consolidated gross earnings of the properties to be acquired amounted to $8,105,991 for the twelve months ended on June 30, 1930, of which $7,676,896 was derived entirely from the sale of electric power and light, while the net earnings before interest, depreciation and Federal taxes totaled $4,610,342. The net earnings were equal to approximately 2.15 times the annual interest requirements of $2,140,650 on the entire funded debt of the company to be outstanding on completion of this financing.

The parent company, the Pacific Northwest Public Service Corporation, is controlled by the Central Public Service Corporation.

80.8% of Their Employes Are Investors in 14 Utilities

The National Electric Power Company announced yesterday that at the end of July fourteen subsidiaries operating in fifteen Eastern States had 5,522 employes as investors in preferred stock in their own companies out of 6,832 employed, or 80.8 per cent.

At the end of April, 1929, only 28 per cent of the employes had invested in preferred stock, and at that time only one company showed more than 50 per cent employe participation.

Mortgage Company Renamed.

The name of the Manhattan Mortgage and Guaranty Company has been changed to the Bankers Bond and Mortgage Company, effective today, Saul Cohn, president, announced yesterday. The change was made to reflect the widening scope of the organization.

and
North American Trust Shares
*The Largest Fixed Investment Trust

WHEN Admiral Perry, in the War of 1812, sent the famous message, "We have met the enemy and they are ours," he might have added, "thanks to du Pont powder."

From those first du Pont powder mills on the banks of the Brandywine has grown a corporation operating mills and factories scattered from one end of the country to the other and turning out, beside explosives, paints, dyestuffs, Fabrikoid, Pyralin, Duco, Rayon, Cellophane, synthetic ammonia and numerous other products. The du Pont Company has a large investment in the General Motors Corporation.

The chances are that there are a large number of du Pont products used by you daily in your home and office. This widespread use and great variety of products gives some indication of the potentialities of this business.

Each North American Trust Share gives you an interest in the profits of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Company, Inc., and 27 other major corporations, such as New York Central Railroad and American Telephone & Telegraph.

Points About N. A. T. S.

1—Each NORTH AMERICAN TRUST SHARE represents an investment in the common stocks of 28 outstanding corporations, leaders in their respective fields.

2—An investment in NORTH AMERICAN TRUST SHARES is as sound as American industry itself. The products and services of the companies the common stocks of which underlie this trust, are directly related to every phase of human life.

3—The underlying stocks, all of which are listed on the New York Stock Exchange, are deposited with the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, Trustee. The trustee issues 2,000 N.A.T.S. upon the deposit of 4 shares each of the underlying stocks together with applicable reserve fund and accumulations.

4—The 28 underlying companies have an average unbroken dividend record of 33 years, combined total assets of more than 24 billion dollars and combined surplus and reserves of over 6.7 billion dollars.

5—N.A.T.S. are readily marketable. In addition to the established market which has been maintained at ½ point below the asked price the holder of the smallest denomination of shares may liquidate through the trustee without penalty. The holder of 500 shares or any multiple thereof may convert through the trustee into the underlying stocks.

6—Each certificate carries coupons calling for semi-annual disbursement of all distributions received by the trustee on the deposited stocks. On June 30, 1930, a semi-annual income and capital distribution of $1.34 per share was made.

7—N. A. T. S. holders are offered rights semi-annually permitting reinvestment of all return in excess of cash dividends on deposited stocks at a discount from the asked price. This program results in retention of appreciation and maintenance of original diversification.

8—N. A. T. S. are available in denominations ranging from 10 shares to 10,000 shares. Thus an investment in the shares of 28 leading corporations can be made for less than $100.

9—Current price for N. A. T. S. per share is about

TO MEN WHO SELL

The only way for a man who sells to make the most money is to sell something that can be sold to the greatest number of people at all times and under all conditions with the least possible effort.

It is not only the man who sells who wants to make money, but everybody does. We have always been told that the way to wealth and independence is through proper investments. We all have heard that one good investment is worth a lifetime of labor. We believe we have that investment.

Our investment represents a list of 89 nationally known or world-wide corporations that directly or indirectly affect almost everybody in the country.

Every owner of securities and every wage-earner is a prospect to whom you can render an exceptional service. Phone Hanover 8603 and ask for Mr. Corcoran for an appointment, or call at our offices on the tenth floor, 60 Wall Street, for complete information. Openings are available in the Metropolitan territory, New Jersey and Connecticut. Commission basis.

RESIDENT OFFICES REPORT ON TRADE

Confidence in Autumn Business Apparent as Stores Order Fall Stocks.

SHOWROOM ACTIVITY GAINS

Dress Trade Improves—Reordering Develops on Coats—Velvets Lead in Hats—Boys' Wear Active.

Activity broadened notably during the last week in the wholesale markets here, with sentiment taking on a much more cheerful aspect in comparison with recent weeks. In the dress trade the introduction of new models based on the recent Paris openings brought a substantial volume of new business in addition to eliminating recent charges that the earlier dress styles lacked distinction. Tunic types are rapidly coming to the fore, with considerable emphasis on the Russian influence. Showroom activity promises to be brisk this week and next. Knitted suits continue to be heavily reordered, with pressure being exerted to obtain quick deliveries. Coat reorders have developed well. Reorders for millinery feature velvets. New fur jackets and wraps are reported to be taking well. Satin is now gaining in fashion importance in piece goods. The week developed peak activity in boys' and men's clothing for quick delivery. Merchandise for school openings featured the former.

Following are the major style and merchandising trends as noted by leading resident buyers here:

KIRBY, BLOCK & FISCHER—"The latest fur fashions in the form of finger-tip jackets and sleeveless wraps are taking with surprising rapidity. Lapin, galapin and rabbit garments are being purchased extensively at popular prices, the first two featured in short jackets for wear with sports frocks, the last in youthful wraps. Camel's hair and pile fabric coats in black are now attracting considerable attention and are featured in smart tailored garments suitable for sports and street wear. Dress manufacturers reported considerable activity during the week because of the introduction of late models from recent importations. Soft, sheer woolens are sponsored in all lines. Lamés of supple texture are increasing in importance for evening wear. A late development is of Persian inspiration, manifesting itself in printed cashmeres, new Paisley effects, striped woolens and brocaded patterns on heavy silks. The Russian influence continues notable."

Tunic Type Dress Important.

McGREEVEY, WERRING & HOWELL—"Tunics are recognized as one of the important dress types of the moment. The raglan or kimono sleeve is very new. Wool embroidery and the separate wool lace collar and cuff sets are shown. Shades of green have gained marked favor within the last week. Contrasts in furs and fabrics and trimmings are extremely important. Eyelet embroidery in self-material, as well as bead embroidery, is stressed in the new lines. It is expected that lace dinner and evening dresses, and lace combined with chiffon, will meet with considerable favor. Draped necklines maintain their importance. Knitted suits continue very active reorder items. There has been excellent action on velvet suits. In the lower end Canton crêpes continue to sell in good quantities, as well as wool lace dresses. Black chiffons are receiving attention. Splendid reorders have been received on coats, chiefly black styles trimmed with such furs as fitch, paradise muskrat and pahmi in the $39.50 range."

AFFILIATED CLOTHIERS, INC.—"The volume of men's wear purchases is showing a steady increase. There is a very encouraging tone to the market which is restoring confidence to visiting buyers. One factor that perhaps is responsible for the increase in purchase volume is the retailers' realization that orders for Fall merchandise must not be withheld any longer, so that sales will not be lost because of incomplete Fall stocks. Commitments last week included almost every type of furnishings goods for men and wearing apparel for boys from hats to hosiery. In the boys' field both knicker suits and long pants suits were conspicuously in the lead. Deliveries were wanted quickly, as a great number of boys' departments were short of stocks for school opening. A young men's trouser that gives promise of being in active demand is made of a corduroy in a college model that boasts of a three-inch wide waistband, having three pearl buttons on the band and a trouser bottom twenty-two inches wide. Colors are light tan and navy blue."

FELIX LILIENTHAL & CO., INC.—"After several seasons of fashion dullness, satin reappears for smart daytime and evening wear. It is most effectively featured in black and off-beach shades. We have been receiving a great many calls for knitted suits, especially the three-piece type at $10.50. The one-piece knitted frock is becoming more and more popular for spectator wear. Wool zephyr knit with sweaters in lacy constructions are most desirable. Transparent velvets have been excellent reorder numbers, especially at $10.50. The demands have been greater for extreme styles in novelties in dresses than for the staple tailored dress. Probably this is due to the desire to show something different and startling for opening the Fall season. Evening wraps and coats in both the full length and short jacket length are being concentrated upon. Paris decrees that the long, full length wrap is the new feature. However, we are of the opinion that the short jacket will continue in vogue until real cold weather sets in."

Showrooms Reflect Activity.

JAY, FLANAGAN, MESIROW COMPANY—"More showroom activity was noticeable last week than earlier in the season. Most people were waiting for the new collections which have recently been reproduced by all types of manufacturers making dresses at $16.50 and up. While the silhouette has not been changed to any extent, there are many smart new ideas and details. The tunic, both straight and flared, is finding favor as well as the full sleeve. The dolman version is shown extensively, although we feel that the full sleeve will be more popular, as it is much easier to wear under wraps and coats and is more becoming to the figure of average height. The bolero still holds its popularity. The two-piece Russian version is very interesting. This features colorful blouses of crêpe embroidered or fur trimmed and combined with black or contrasting colors, such as sapphire blue with black."

WILLIAM M. VAN BUREN—"We are getting many reorders on dress coats at all prices. Those retailing around $59.50 are active as a result of the August promotions which have been very satisfactory as a general thing. It is also interesting to note that reorders are not confined to these popular-price coats, but are coming in on styles costing up to $200. From these indications we look forward to a good coat business. Sport coats are coming to the fore again. We are having many calls for the semi-dress types in monotone tweeds and novelties. Camel's hair coats are proving good sellers and are being reordered by our clients at prices to retail from $29.50 to $75. Evening wraps are beginning to assume importance and we are having many calls for them. Ensemble suits have exceeded expectations and we have had to fill in stocks for several of our clients."

JOHN M. BIGGINS—"We have placed a number of orders during the past week for plain and satin crepes, with black the leading color. Low-end flat crêpes in polka dots and Fall designs are in demand. We are still having calls for the printed travel tweed crêpes. Part wool plaid blankets are enjoying a brisk demand. Printed and plain rayon crêpes are indicated as the outstanding wash goods cloth for the Fall season. The volume of orders placed for handbags during the past few weeks indicates a better Fall business. There have also been a great many calls for gloves."

MERCHANDISE REPORTING COMPANY, INC.—"Misses' suède jackets are notable items in sportswear. The garments are tailored and retain their shape, as the imported suède fabric repels water. The jackets are priced at $6.75, with berets to match at 75 cents extra. The available colors are red, fawn, green, navy and reindeer. Another important item is the three-piece transparent velvet suit priced at $10.50. The suit comprises transparent velvet skirt and jacket and satin blouse. The blouse is sleeveless and has Peter Pan collar with small bow to front. The full-flared skirt has belt fastened with rhinestone buckle."

BEN F. LEVIS—"Buying of popular-price dresses continues in full swing. Canton crêpes continue to be the leading material. The tunic dress is being strongly featured. Black is the outstanding color, with brown next. We are beginning to get some calls for party dresses. Panne satins are outstanding. Moire in plain and printed effects is good, while flat crêpes and laces are also shown. Travel prints are just as strong as ever. We are receiving reorders daily on these items. In millinery, velvet hats are being shown in as many styles as felts. Outstanding are the modified version of the beret and the cushion brim. Although black is most popular, running strong are the different shades of brown: Manila, Philippine and Hawaiian. Trimmings, such as patent leather, pasted feathers, novelty buckles and rhinestone pins, are outstanding."

JACK HARTBLAY, INC.—"Activity in boys' and men's wear last week reached its peak. Numerous buyers were in the market, and mail orders were heavy. All types of merchandise were sought for school openings, sales purposes and Fall requirements. Most buyers have concentrated upon lower-price merchandise, which is more desirable this season than previously. Boys' knickers and longies, to retail at $1.95, and also inexpensive four-piece school suits have been ordered. Lumberjacks and windbreakers are being bought quite liberally to retail at $1.95 and $2.95. In men's clothing, suits and overcoats are being sought to retail at $15 to $22.50. This merchandise has been bought quite liberally, and we find there is none too much of it to be had at present."

YEAST LITIGATION SETTLED.

Standard Brands Reports on Federal Company Case.

The litigation between Standard Brands, Inc., successor to the Fleischmann Company, and the Federal Yeast Corporation of New York over alleged infringement by the Federal company of patents covering yeast manufacturing processes, has been settled, according to a statement issued yesterday by Joseph Wilshire, president of Standard Brands.

After outlining the litigation, begun in 1923, Mr. Wilshire said:

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 1 (AP).—Georgia tobacco farmers at the close of the fifth week of the auction season, had set a sales record of 106,402,351 pounds.

The average price for the five weeks was 9.87 cents a pound for a total of $10,500,117.44. Sales in 1929 were 90,654,245 pounds at an average of 18.38 cents, or $16,662,622. Sales in 1928 were 85,238,053 pounds, at an average of 12.81 cents, or $10,921,435.68.

The fifth week of the auction brought a record low price of 5.68 cents a pound for 3,022,808 pounds, as compared with the sales for the fifth week of 1929 of 3,721,780 pounds, at an average of 9.93 cents.

STOCK SWINDLES DECLINE.

Injunctions Against Frauds So Far This Year Exceed Total in 1929.

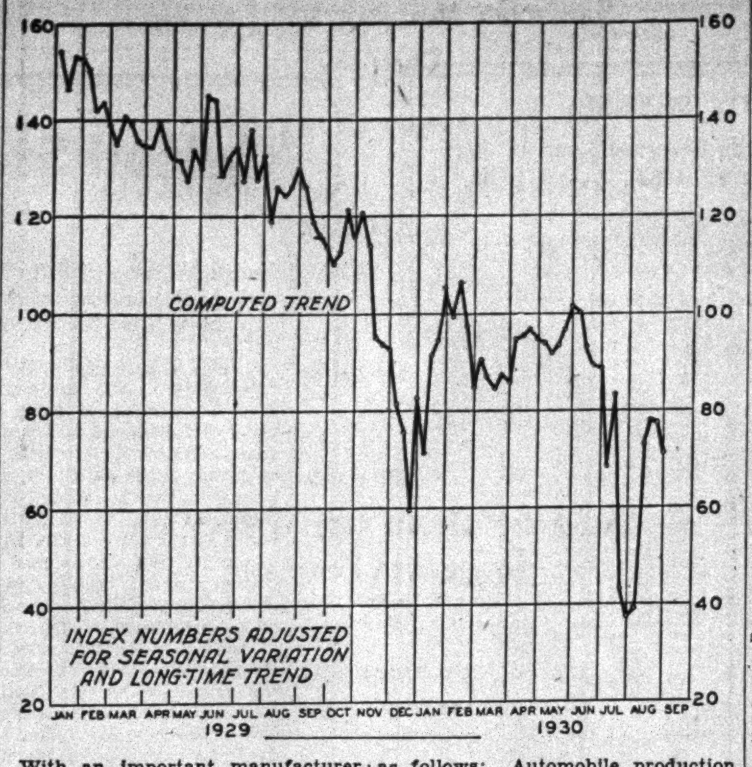
The securities bureau of the State Attorney General's office reported yesterday that last month it had obtained eighteen court orders against sixty-seven individuals, firms and corporations, compared with three court actions against nine individuals and firms in August, 1929. Losses in last month's cases amounted to $2,000,000, bringing to $34,950,000 the total for the year to date.

Watson Washburn, Assistant Attorney General, said in the report: "The total injunctions so far this year exceed the total for the whole year 1929, though the operations of security swindlers are greatly reduced in comparison with 1929. Curtailment of their activities is mainly due to declining stock prices and also to the cooperation of the newspapers in exposing stock frauds and putting the public on guard."

Time for Deposits Extended.

The time for deposit of second preferred and common stocks of the Power Securities Corporation in exchange for $6 preferred stock of the Electric Power and Light Corporation has been extended from last Saturday to Sept. 30 at the request of various holders of exchangeable stocks. The Guaranty Trust Company is the depositary for both classes of stock.

Curtailment by Producer of Low-Price Car Reduces Auto Output and Index Drops Sharply



With an important manufacturer of low-priced cars curtailing production in preparation for changing models, motor car output for the entire industry has suffered a fairly severe reversal and the adjusted index for the week ended Aug. 30 has fallen to 71.3 from 77.5. The situation thus resolves itself into a further postponement of the date of the hoped-for revival in the motor car industry, with the current rate of output, allowing for seasonal variation, still below that which prevailed just prior to the three weeks' suspension by Ford.

The current setback raises the question as to what extent general business activity might improve without the aid of a sharp revival in the motor car industry, which has been a leading factor in the business revivals which have followed the three previous post-war business depressions. The recovery from the depression of 1921 was clearly led by automobile production, the sequence of the upturns, taking only the four series included in the weekly index of business activity, being as follows: Automobile production (February), car loadings (April), steel ingot production (August) and electric power production (August). In 1924 the sequence of upturns was as follows: Automobile production (July), car loadings (July), steel ingot production (August) and electric power production (September).

And even in the revival from the comparatively minor depression of 1927 the motor car industry was in the van, the sequence of upturns being: Automobile production (December), steel ingot production (December), car loadings (January) and electric power production (January).

In view of the fact that the motor car industry is estimated to have taken 18 per cent of all the steel manufactured in 1928 and 1929, and considering further the large proportions of rubber, cotton, copper, zinc and other materials which are directly or indirectly dependent upon the prosperity of the industry, it is obviously a serious question whether there can be any rapid improvement in industrial activity generally without the aid of a greater revival of automobile buying than now appears to be immediately in sight.

There is, on the other hand, the fact to be considered that it has been estimated that in the first seven months this year the proportion of steel taken by the automobile industry has been only about 16 per cent, as compared with 20 per cent in the corresponding period of 1929.

ESTIMATE INFLUENCE OF OUR MONEY ABROAD

Clark, Dodge & Co. Believe the Proper Use Will Increase Markets for American Exports.

Although the favorable foreign trade balances of the United States are dependent on a continuation of increasing net foreign lendings, this country cannot go on forever receiving foreign securities in exchange for American. This is the conclusion reached by Clark, Dodge & Co. after making a survey of foreign trade and the effect of foreign loans. They assert, however, that if American loans are applied to the proper improvement of capital equipment abroad they will exert a very material influence in raising productive efficiency and standards of living, thereby developing a potential market for further American exports.

"It seems reasonable to expect a gradual increase in the foreign demand for American capital," the report of the survey reads. "This should tend to stimulate foreign trade again, but the improvement, just as the contraction, will develop slowly as business activity and the demand for goods within individual countries revives.

"It has been pointed out by several economists in this country that from the long-term standpoint future exports of American capital must be applied more and more to the service of foreign loans already outstanding and that a declining proportion of current borrowings will be available for the purchase of additional goods from us. In this connection, however, it should not be overlooked that if our credits are wisely extended the ratio of our foreign obligations to the capacity of the world to pay will be a diminishing one."

To Sell Bankrupt Silk Stocks.

Arrangements have been made by William Iselin & Co., factors for the Amalgamated Silk Corporation, which filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy last week, for the sale of the corporation's inventory of silk goods under the supervision of the Altoona Textile Company, it was announced yesterday by B. H. H. Noble, secretary of the corporation. The Amalgamated inventory, according to latest estimates, approximates $1,000,000. The actively selling qualities heretofore produced by the Amalgamated Silk Corporation will be produced by the Altoona Textile Company.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 1.—The tropical disturbance which is of hurricane intensity is central tonight in about Lat. 16 degrees N., Long. 64 degrees W., moving rather rapidly west-northwestward over the Caribbean Sea. Its centre will pass south of Haiti Tuesday.

Pressure remains low over the Hudson Bay region with a trough extending southward to Michigan and thence southwestward to Texas.

An area of high pressure is moving east-southeastward over the Rocky Mountain region and the Plains States and pressure remains high over the Eastern States, the Canadian Maritime Provinces and the Western Atlantic Ocean.

The temperature is still abnormally high in the lower Missouri Valley, Oklahoma, Arkansas, and the interior of the West Gulf States and over most sections east of the Mississippi River except New Jersey, New England and New York, the highest temperature reported east of the Rocky Mountains was 98 degrees, which was registered at the following stations: Washington, D. C., Kansas City., Mo., Keokuk, Iowa, Oklahoma City, Okla., Fort Smith, Ark., and San Antonio, Abilene and Austin, Texas.

The temperature has fallen from Lake Superior southwestward to the Central and Southern Rocky Mountain regions.

The indications are for local thunder showers in the Ohio Valley and the lower lake region Tuesday afternoon or night, and in the Middle Atlantic and North Atlantic States and the Appalachian region Tuesday night or Wednesday. Otherwise generally fair weather will prevail Tuesday and Wednesday in the Washington forecast district.

There will be little change in temperature Tuesday, but the weather will become cooler Tuesday night and Wednesday in the Ohio Valley and the lower lake region and slightly lower temperature is indicated during Wednesday in the Appalachian region, Tennessee and the interior of the Middle Atlantic States.

NEW LAW IN EFFECT ON INHERITANCES

New York Measure Protects Widows and Children, Giving Former More of the Estate.

DOWER RIGHTS CANCELED

Own Real Estate May Be Sold by Husband or Wife Without the Other's Signature.

ALBANY, Sept. 1 (AP).—New inheritance laws went into effect in New York State today. They protect widows and children from disinheritance, cancel a widow's dower rights in her husband's estate, and generally give to the widow a larger share of the estate than she received under the obsolete laws.

The new laws make it possible for either husband or wife to sell his or her real estate without the other's signature. In the past, a wife could sell her property independently, but a husband could not, except by transferring title to a corporation.

The new laws abolish the distinction between real and personal property of a person who dies intestate. Heretofore, when a man died intestate, real property passed to his more distant relatives, while only a part of the income from his real and personal property went to the widow and children.

The new laws provide varying amounts for the widow (or widower). If there are children the widow receives one-third of the estate outright and the children two-thirds. When there are parents and no children, the survivor takes the first $5,000 and half the remainder, and the parents what is left. When there are neither parents nor children, but other blood relatives, the survivor takes the first $10,000 and half the remainder, the relatives splitting what is left. If there are no relatives the survivor takes the whole.

The new law makes it impossible for either husband or wife to disinherit the other. The survivor may elect to take the share of the estate provided by the new law in case of intestacy, but may not take more than half the estate. The provisions do not apply in case of divorce, separation or abandonment.

Taxes on small inheritances are reduced, and there are provisions facilitating the sale of a decedent's real estate.

HAVOC IN UP-STATE STORM.

Glass Kills Johnson City Man and Binghamton Has Heavy Damage.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Sept. 1 (AP).—A terrific rain and wind storm which swept through Binghamton and Johnson City late today killed one man, and caused heavy property damage.

Highways in all directions from Binghamton were blocked by fallen trees, and power and communications lines were broken. More than an inch of rain fell here in fifteen minutes at the height of the storm.

A piece of plate glass from a shattered door was whirled through a window in the home of Finley W. Martin, aged 57, of Johnson City, severing his jugular vein. He died before medical help arrived.

Street car traffic here was halted, automobiles were damaged by falling trees, chimneys toppled and some houses unroofed.

BRONX THEATRE SOLD.

New Owners to Remodel the Kelton Into Business Building.

The Kelton Theatre property at the northwest corner of Harrison and West Burnside Avenues, the Bronx, has been sold by the Herburn Realty Company, Inc., to the F. G. W. Construction Company. Blumenthal Brothers acted as brokers.

The building will be remodeled into a two-story business structure to contain fourteen stores and one large loft. Plans for the alteration have been drawn by Oscar Goldschlag, architect.

Man Killed by Train at Crossing.

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., Sept. 1.—John Rivetia, 55 years old, of 367 Wagner Street, was killed tonight when he stepped in front of a Pennsylvania Railroad train at the Hall Avenue crossing. Rivetia, a foreman at a brick plant, was on his way home from work.

CRASHES TRAIN WINDOW.

Flying Brakeshoe Causes Glass to Cut Two Passengers.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMDEN, N. J., Sept. 1.—Two passengers on a Reading express en route from Atlantic City to Camden were cut by flying glass tonight when part of a brakeshoe became detached and crashed through a car window as the train neared Magnolia.

The injured were Edward J. Twesten of 823 Holly Street, Philadelphia, and his wife, Emma. The piece of metal, driven through the window with terrific force, struck the back of the seat ahead of them and fell to the floor, while shattered glass cut both about the face, neck and arms.

Members of the train crew, attracted by the shouts of excited pasengers, gave first aid to the Twestens and quieted others in the car. Mr. Twesten refused to go to a hospital when the train reached Camden, telling train men he and his wife had been shaken by the accident but were able to continue home.

The train was traveling about fifty miles an hour when the metal, weighing about three pounds, was deflected into the car.

Flushing House Changes Hands.

The fact that the Frostair Electric Refrigerator freezes water in shorter time should be important to every apartment house owner who considers the matter of automatic refrigerators disinterestedly. It gives tenants uninterrupted refrigeration, at a low operating cost. Frostair is built by Sturtevant—master engineers, who planned and installed the ventilating system in the Holland Tunnel.

ALL EYES ON AN INDUSTRY THAT'S MAKING HISTORY.
A wave of enthusiasm on the part of home-owners for AUTOMATIC HEAT CONTROL is sweeping the nation. Fired by the whole-hearted endorsement from health and fire authorities, coal merchants, heating and plumbing houses, builders, architects and master house planners, such as The Ladies' Home Journal, the sales of MINNEAPOLIS-HONEYWELL all-electric heat regulators are mounting at a sensational rate. We dominate over 90% of this industry; and in spite of the fact that ahead are six of the best months in our history, our company just paid an extra cash dividend for the first half of 1930. To top it all, we are about to launch the biggest radio, magazine and newspaper advertising program ever attempted by this corporation. Our controls are made, sold, installed, serviced and financed by one organization and not available through any other source. Brilliant master salesmen, with cars and families, living in Long Island, Brooklyn, Westchester and New Jersey, who are accepted for a technical training will find here the opportunity of the twentieth century. Advance commission; also other attractive propositions. Entire 17th floor, 801 2d Av., at 43d St. Mr. Miller.

SALESMEN OF CHARACTER AND ABILITY.
If you feel that you can rightfully lay claim to these exceptional requisites and are willing to offer your record to us, then we know that the task which confronts us will be well on the way toward accomplishment.

We are charged with the responsibility of procuring a limited number of salesmen of the conservative business type, qualified by experience and standing to meet and associate with investors — men of intelligence — real salesmen. It is to such men that we make this simple appeal with the hope that among the many men who will read this advertisement we will find the exceptional ones which our business requires.

As a foremost requisite we require honesty, sterling quality and trustworthiness. There must also be some experience in appealing to human nature, and ability to analyze the sales prospect and to present the merits of a worth-while proposition so that the order will be given as a natural sequence to the presentation of the facts. Sincerity of purpose with a will to succeed, and keeping at it, are among the requirements of this position. We cannot take the space to tell you in detail what we have to offer. But let it suffice when we say that to the real salesman who is sincere in his answer to this advertisement and will take the time, trouble and effort to reply to it, and who can sell us the idea that he is qualified to hold this position—to him will be given an interview, at which time the genuine merit of our proposition will be outlined in detail. Be assured that the offering is one of high character, security of principal, ability to pay semi-annual dividends, and based upon past returns, should be most profitable to the investor.

FURTHER.

The company, its success, its reputation, its background and the tremendous scope of its future plans—all contribute to establish the very definite fact that this connection should be that last satisfactory and profitable one which so many have been in search of for years. You know that spot in business life where all fears about future earnings and security of connection are finally set aside.

Compensation is on a commission basis to make this sales position appeal to men who are not interested in limitation of a straight salary job. We are interested in securing men for various sections of the metropolitan area. If you feel that your qualifications justify us considering you, telephone Caledonia 1538, Extension 37, for an appointment, or better still, call in person if you like on the 11th floor, 385 5th Av., and a courteous interview will be afforded you by our Sales Personnel Manager. If you cannot call during the day, telephone for an evening appointment. If you are the man we want you will know what to say to impress us. All conferences and communications will be held in complete confidence.

SALESMEN.

A large corporation enjoying the most prosperous business period in its history and with a record-breaking September ahead, will engage three additional men accustomed to earn $5,000 upwards yearly in commissions.

MEN—SALESMEN—MEN.

If the fellow who says times are hard, and people don't buy, and that he can't make a living selling, would come into my office and see the happy bunch of men drawing down big commission checks every week they would talk differently—there's a reason why.

We spend the money advertising, big full page display ads day after day, week after week; that's what makes it possible for us to load a special train every Sunday. Twelve cars loaded with people left the Penn. Railroad Station last Sunday to visit our property. Not satisfied with that we loaded another train with prospective buyers yesterday (Labor Day); it's the same every Sunday.

Because—We are selling property at a railroad station at popular prices, and on terms that fit the average pocketbook.
Because—Every man in our organization gets new fresh newspaper leads.
Because—He is not asked to sell his friends or relatives.
Because—He works for a firm that has built up and maintains a reputation with its clients that spells continued success.
Because—We merchandise real estate, and maintain the high standard of ethics the profession deserves.

Fall season starting Now! We invite you to attend a meeting Wednesday evening, 8:30 P. M. sharp, and see for yourself how other men are making easy money. You will hear GEORGE BARTON, a national authority on salesmanship, disclose simple methods that makes it possible for you to succeed. You will hear Stacey Leach, past president of the Long Island Real Estate Board, explain ideas that will help you turn your time into money.

WANTS CITY HALL MOVED TO BROOKLYN

J. H. Clark Jr., Queens Candidate for Surrogate, Says Tail Now Wags the Dog.

TO END MANHATTAN RULE

Holds Voters of 2 Largest Boroughs Are Tired of "Corrupt and Contented" Democratic Control.

Asserting that "the tail was wagging the dog" in New York City, John Holley Clark Jr., Republican candidate for Surrogate of Queens County, suggested yesterday that the City Hall should be transferred to Brooklyn, the borough of the largest population. Brooklyn and Queens, Major Clark added, had a larger population than Manhattan, the Bronx and Richmond.

"The latest revised census figures show that a majority of the inhabitants of New York City live on Long Island, Major Clark said. "Of the total population of 6,981,927, no less than 3,683,906, or 52.8 per cent, live in Brooklyn and Queens."

Major Clark added that Manhattan was gradually becoming depopulated and now had only 26.8 per cent of the city's population. He also asserted that the improper representation of Brooklyn and Queens in the Board of Estimate must be corrected.

"Manhattan politicians, like the Chinese, are quite clever," Major Clark continued. "Up to now they have been able to run the show. They have made the Bronx and Staten Island appendages. These three boroughs with less than half the population have thirteen out of sixteen votes in the Board of Estimate, or 81 per cent.

"The major individual commissioners, the men who run the government under the Mayor, are divided as follows: Manhattan 11, Bronx 5, Richmond 1, Brooklyn 2 and Queens 1. This situation cannot last much longer. The tail must stop wagging the dog.

"The present uncertain leader of the Queens Democrats is a humble servant of John Curry, but his successor will stop being that. The Harvey movement in Queens and the elimination of Mr. Livingston in Brooklyn are signs and portents. The people of the two largest boroughs are getting sick and tired of being attached to New York for taxing purposes only. They have no mind to be much longer governed by the 'corrupt and contented' Democrats of Manhattan. Regardless of party, they will demand their due share of the City Government, and, having the numbers, they will get it."

COAST GUARD SHIP CRASHES

Score of Men Slightly Hurt as the Boat Smashes Boston Pier.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Sept. 1.—The Coast Guard destroyer Jouette crashed through ten feet of the bulkhead of Pier 4 at the Charlestown Navy Yard today.

The impact, which brought scores of the yard personnel on the run, hurled many of the eighty-nine officers and enlisted men aboard about the docks causing minor injuries to a score or more.

Captain Henry Coyle denied that any of the crew was seriously hurt. The destroyer was extricated from the bulkhead with the forward part of the craft covered with mud and débris.

The extent of the damage was not established today by the Coast Guard. Captain Coyle, after a preliminary investigation, stated that failure of the engines to reverse at the proper time caused the accident. Just what caused the failure was not known. A careful examination of the engines revealed nothing amiss.

BOY DROWNS IN RIVER.

Queens Lad Becomes Exhausted—Man Lost Off Jersey City.

John Eyne, 12 years old, of 153 Nott Street, Long Island City, was drowned yesterday afternoon when he became exhausted while swimming in the East River off the foot of North Jane Street, Long Island City. A police emergency squad recovered his body after grappling for some time.

Passengers on the rowboat ferry between Washington Street, Jersey City, and the Lehigh Valley Railroad yards at Communipaw saw an unidentified man drown in the body of water known as the Gap yesterday afternoon. The police found the man's clothes in a suitcase on the bank, but there was nothing by which to identify him.

CHARGES TERRORISM BY TRUCKMEN'S GANG

GROAT ISSUES SUBPOENA

Alleged Leader Faces Prosecution for Assault—Dairy League Paper Defends Milk Prices.

As a result of a summons issued on orders of Assistant Attorney General William B. Groat, who is conducting two State inquiries into food combinations, Izzy Burkman, flour truckman, will appear in Tombs Court this morning to answer a charge of assault. The summons was issued after Louis Muchnich, an independent truckman, told Mr. Groat that he had been driven out of business and his son beaten because he refused to join a recently organized group of truckmen.

Burkman, a member of the truckmen's organization, is said to have led a group of "guerrillas" in an attack on Muchnich's son. The alleged attack, according to Muchnich, followed a visit to his place of business by Burkman and several associates who threatened him. The association, known as the New York and Brooklyn Flour Truckmen, was responsible for increasing the cost of carting flour in this city more than 50 per cent, according to testimony at the inquiry.

An editorial in The Dairymen's League News, organ of the Dairymen's League, says that pastures up-State are in the poorest condition in fifty years. The editorial contends that recent increases in the wholesale prices of milk are justified on the ground that poor pastures have added to the cost of milk production by compelling the dairy farmer to buy grain.

The daily production of milk per cow has decreased 7 per cent below the August production of two years ago, The Dairymen's League editorial says. It explains further that the pasture shortage is made more serious by a light carry-over this year of old hay.

The league editorial charges that "the whole trend of the investigation by the Attorney General apparently aims at obtaining low milk prices for New York without taking into consideration costs of production, nor the fact that these costs have been increased by the drought." This charge is unfounded, according to Mr. Groat, who said that his inquiry did not desire and had no power to fix prices but was interested solely in uncovering illegal combinations in milk and other food industries.

The Assistant Attorney General disregarded the fact that Labor Day was observed as a holiday by other members of the Attorney General's staff and spent all of yesterday at his office preparing the material which he will use when he begins an investigation of an alleged combination to increase fish prices. This inquiry will occupy the first place on the program when the State hearings into food profiteering are reopened tomorrow.

Assistant Attorney General Watson Washburn, in charge of the Securities Bureau, sent a report yesterday to Attorney General Ward which showed that actions were begun during the last month against sixty-seven individuals, firms and corporations. The total loss to the public in these cases amounted to about $2,000,000, according to Mr. Washburn.

DEFIANT SWIMMER SEIZED.

Police Use Ruse to Get Man to Leave East River at Market Street.

More than 1,500 persons watched harbor police, members of the rescue squad, reserves from the Oak Street station and an ambulance surgeon trying to convince a man that he should not swim in the East River at Market Street yesterday afternoon.

Stephen Stownk, living at 7 Bowery, who the police say was intoxicated, dived into the river while a large crowd on a public recreation pier looked on. When he failed to come up a call was sent in to Police Headquarters. After policemen arrived he reappeared but refused to leave the water. Only when Patrolman Burns took off his coat and challenged him to a race would Stownk emerge. When he did he was arrested.

PALMGREN CASE UP TODAY.

Prosecutor Will Get Evidence in Beating of 17-Year-Old Girl.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Sept. 1.—District Attorney Frank H. Coyne, returning from his vacation tomorrow, will take charge of the first degree assault case against Albert Palmgren, 25-year-old Katonah tractor driver, who is accused of having brutally beaten Miss Ida Engberg, 17, last Monday night and left her in the woods unconscious.

Miss Engberg was still on the critical list today at the Northern Westchester Hospital in Mount Kisco. The case probably will be presented to the grand jury this week. Palmgren still denies that he knows anything about the assault, which the girl says was committed with a hammer.

TO AID TREE PRESERVATION.

Forestry Group to Help Westchester Conservation Association.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Sept. 1.—The belief that Westchester is lagging in the preservation of its trees and the restoration of its forests has caused the formation of an advisory committee on forestry by the Westchester County Conservation Association, it was announced today.

While the association has as one of its objects tree protection and forest preservation, the subject is so specialized that the guidance of experts is needed. A committee of specialists in this field has therefore been appointed to make definite plans at a meeting to be held on Wednesday evening at 8 Martine Avenue, here. Herman Merkel, superintendent of the County Park Commission, former forester of the New York Zoological Society and recent adviser on [illegible] reconditioning of Central Park, heads the group.

SHIPPING PROFITS CUT.

Survey Finds Business Reduced by Low Rates and Small Volume.

Ship operators' profits have been cut drastically because of the lowest freight rates experienced in several years and the comparatively small volume of freight tonnage available, according to a current survey by the Standard Statistics Company of New York.

"The conditions," the survey says, "are found on all the principal trade routes, as well as in the domestic coastal and intercoastal field. Slight gains have been recorded in North Atlantic passenger traffic, but since such increases have been the result of expanded travel in tourist third cabin, revenues from this source do not generally compare favorably with those of a year ago.

"All in all, operating returns for the full year for the majority of domestic and foreign owners will not equal those of 1929."

One Blown 50 Feet, May Die—A. J. Knight's Boat Lost at Watch Hill.

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 1.—An explosion believed to have been caused by fumes of gasoline as it was being fueled at a dock blew the yacht Mist Chief to pieces, seriously injuring the owner, Arthur J. Knight of New York, and two members of the crew at Watch Hill today.

Henry Savage of Saybrook, Conn., was blown through the roof of the cabin, landing on shore fifty feet away. He is not expected to live.

Mr. Knight suffered many burns and cuts, and his hair was burned off. Captain Ray M. Skilton of Saybrook, skipper of the boat, suffered lacerations and burns about the arms, legs and head.

While the three men were being rushed to the Westerly Hospital a general alarm brought fire apparatus from that community, as well as the entire Watch Hill department. The firemen extinguished a blaze started on the dock and saved other boats near by.

MERCHANT SHIP PARITY URGED TO AID EXPORTS

Glover Advocates Wider Grants in Mail Contracts to Develop American Marine Trade.

Parity in merchant vessels as well as in warships is advocated in a statement by W. Irving Glover, Second Assistant Postmaster General, who says he believes it would increase the number of American vessels carrying manufactured articles of this country. At present they carry only 40 per cent of our exports, he asserts, the rest being transported in foreign vessels.

"American ships for American products and the American flag on the high seas is our aim," Mr. Glover declared. "In the last fiscal year total expenditures for mail service registered $369,528, while in the same period American vessels received $109,828.

"I recommend that the barriers which the present law creates be removed and that the Postoffice Department be authorized to make contracts with American-registered ships of defined tonnage and prescribed rates of speed for a period of years."

The government program of mail subvention now under way is providing employment for thousands of men throughout the country, Mr. Glover also pointed out. This activity will be extended to the Pacific Coast areas, he said, when the sixty-eight new or reconditioned ships provided for in the program are built at a cost of $275,000,000. Tonnage will aggregate 700,000 gross.

Neches Inquiry On Tomorrow.

Officers and owners of the Mallory freighter Neches and the scow Mulligan 3, which were in collision at the entrance to the Narrows one week ago, will appear tomorrow morning before the United States Steamboat Inspection Service for questioning. An effort will be made to place responsibility for the collision, which sent the Neches to the bottom and cost the life of her master, Captain L. P. Estes.

INTERNATIONAL YACHT RACE
Off Newport, R. I., Saturday, Sept. 13
Due to the great demand for accommodations to the first race between the Enterprise and Shamrock V, the Eastern Steamship Lines are placing a second big luxurious liner, the "GEORGE WASHINGTON," in service.
This ship will leave Pier 25, North River (foot of Franklin St.), New York, at 9 P. M. Eastern Standard Time, on Friday evening, September 12th, arriving off Newport Saturday morning. The ship will follow the yachts over the course, returning at the conclusion of the race direct to New York, being due there at 7 o'clock (E. S. T.) the following morning.
The "GEORGE WASHINGTON" is the equivalent in size and luxury of the Company's S. S. "EVANGELINE," which is making four voyages from New York to the races, sailing from Pier 18, North River (foot of Murray St.), at 8 P. M. (E. S. T.) on September 12th, 15th, 17th and 19th.
The "GEORGE WASHINGTON," like the "EVANGELINE," has spacious promenade decks and a number of staterooms with double and twin beds and private baths.
Not more than 250 persons will be booked on the "GEORGE WASHINGTON" from New York; no landing will be made at Newport, and no passengers will be picked up en route—thus insuring a cruise de luxe with no possibility of congestion.

HOLD-UP SUSPECT KILLED IN CLUB RAID

13 MEN AND GIRL QUERIED

President of Club Reveals Fight Started When Three Armed Men Tried to Rob Members.

A man, believed to have been one of three who attempted to hold up members of the Beagles' Club, in their quarters on the second floor of 437 Bushwick Avenue, Brooklyn, was shot through the heart and killed last night by Detective Daniel McCarren after he had threatened the detective with a pistol.

Shortly after 9 o'clock last night the sound of fighting in the clubhouse caused neighbors to telephone the police and McCarren and Detective Young, with several patrolmen, were sent to investigate. They found a free-for-all-fight in progress, and bottles and fragments of furniture were flying.

As the police entered, the occupants of the clubhouse rushed to the windows and began to jump out. McCarren picked out one man who carried a pistol and followed him. The man leaped out to the roof of a one-story extension adjoining the club building. Then he turned and pointing his pistol at McCarren, who was standing in the window, shouted:

"If you try to follow me, I'll kill you."

McCarren drew his own pistol and fired one shot. It struck the man over the heart and he dropped. He was identified later as Samuel Kimmel, 23 years old, of 136 Cook Street, Brooklyn.

Meantime the other officers had rounded up thirteen men and a girl, who said she was Barbara Schmidt, 20 years old, of 1,947 Fulton Avenue. She came to the city recently from Vermont, she said, and had been invited to the club by a member. All were taken to the Stagg Street station for questioning.

Benjamin Caley of 321 Ellery Street, who said he was president of the club, told police that the organization started on Aug. 1 and had twenty-six members. Several members were in the club last night, he said, when three armed men entered and tried to hold up the members there.

Instead of obeying, Mr. Caley said, the club members put up a fight. Several of them, he said, hurled bottles and chairs at the hold-up men.

An unidentified Negro burglar was shot and killed last night by Patrolman J. W. Browne, Negro, while trying to escape after he had been caught with loot taken from an apartment at 129 West 144th Street. The prisoner wrenched himself free from Browne when the policeman was telephoning for a patrol wagon, and started running down 144th Street. One bullet hit him in the back and another in the hand. He died a half hour later in Harlem Hospital.

TAILLESS AIRPLANE FLIES.

Machine Tested at Miami Makes Landings at Low Speed.

MIAMI, Fla., Sept. 1 (AP).—R. V. Waters, president of the Great Miami Airport Association, announced that two successful flights were made today by Major B. L. Smith with an airplane without a tail. The plane was made here, the project having received attention and support from Glenn H. Curtiss, pioneer aviator, who died recently.

Low landing speed featured the performances, Mr. Waters said, the airplane, known as a motor glider, coming to earth at 22 and 25 miles an hour. Flights were made at altitudes ranging from 500 to 800 feet.

The wings of the plane are set in a V shape. It is powered with a thirty-horsepower motor and rides on three wheels, one under the engine and one under the end of each wing.

INDEPENDENTS NAME HEFLIN IN ALABAMA

Self-Styled Democratic "Dry Wing" Backs Senator and Chooses State Candidates.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Sept. 1 (AP).—Senator J. Thomas Heflin was nominated to succeed himself, and Hugh A. Locke of Birmingham and Dempsey Powell of Greenville were nominated for Governor and Lieutenant Governor, respectively, at a State-wide convention of independents or "Jeffersonian Democrats" here today.

Jesse B. Wadsworth, keynote speaker and chairman of the convention, declared that the group is not a third party, but is "the dry wing of the Democratic party."

Mr. Wadsworth declared the purpose of the independents is to "right" the vote by which Senator Heflin, Hugh A. Locke of Birmingham and Dempsey Powell of Greenville, the latter two independent candidates for Governor and Lieutenant Governor, respectively, were barred from becoming candidates in the regular Democratic primary.

Tammany Hall and John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, were attacked by Mr. Wadsworth, who declared "These wets, these Al Smith Democrats, are going to be driven out of office by an outraged Democracy."

Senator Heflin, predicting the election of himself and those running with him, said:

"I want the vote of every white Protestant in this State to help us drive the Raskob-Tammany crowd out."

2 RENDT AIDES UNOPPOSED.

But Lynch Has Not Endorsed Mrs. McGowan and Mrs. Newbranch.

Mrs. Irene O'Donovan Rossa McGowan and Mrs. Edna Newbranch, both supporters of David S. Rendt, Richmond County Democratic chairman, are unopposed by candidates of the faction headed by Borough President John A. Lynch for election as members of the Democratic State Committee. The Lynch faction has not endorsed either, but it is too late to designate opposing candidates and the names of Mrs. McGowan and Mrs. Newbranch will be the only names of candidates for these offices to appear on the ballot.

Mr. Rendt reiterated yesterday that he had the support of Tammany and that Tammany speakers would appear at some of his meetings. Members of the Rendt group denied the assertion of District Attorney Albert C. Fach that he was taking no part in the primary fight. Mr. Fach, they said, was one of the first elected officials to desert the Rendt organization and join the Lynch forces.

REPLIES IN PALESTINE PLAN

Arab Paper Says Jews Must Give Up "Dream" of National Home.

JERUSALEM, Sept. 1 (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).—Replying to the forty-two proposals for Arab and Jewish cooperation made by Harry Snell, Labor member of the Palestine Inquiry Commission, and published last week by the Brith Shalom Society headed by Dr. Judah L. Magnes, chancellor of the Hebrew University, the Arab paper, El Carmel, sets forth certain conditions preliminary to a discussion of the Jewish proposals.

El Carmel's conditions are that the Jews should agree not to evict a single fellah, not to compete with Arab officials or workers, to employ at least 80 per cent Arabs in their undertakings, not to claim government aid for their industries, not to compete with Arab merchants, to accept Arabic as the only official language in Palestine, to abandon "the dream" of a Jewish national home in Palestine and not to oppose Palestine's joining an Arab federation.

Among the proposals of Mr. Snell, which are endorsed by the Brith Shalom Society, are the establishment of Arab-Jewish chambers of commerce, the extension of credit by Jewish organizations to the Arabs, the admission of Arabs to Jewish schools, the extension of Jewish research to Arab districts, the extension of Jewish medical and social service to the Arabs and the allocation of a special member of the Jewish Agency Executive to devote his time to Arab-Jewish relations.

Federal Crime Data Work Begun.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1 (AP).—The Department of Justice today assumed the gigantic task of collecting crime statistics from all parts of the nation and maintaining an accurate and up-to-the-minute index of underworld activity. With the approval of Congress, it took over a project inaugurated three years ago and carried on since then by the International Association of Chiefs of Police, assisted by the Rockefeller Foundation.

LEGUIA IS IMPRISONED ON ISLAND AT CALLAO

Former President of Peru Removed From Cruiser on Which He Sought Refuge After Revolt.

LIMA, Peru, Sept. 1 (AP).—Augusto B. Leguia, who just a week ago resigned as President of Peru on demand of a military junta, today was placed in an island prison, where in the eleven years of his dictatorship he jailed hundreds of political foes.

The island is San Lorenzo, in Callao Harbor, and the former President was removed to it from the cruiser Almirante Grau, on which he took refuge after his resignation. There he became ill, and although last week he was scheduled to be transferred to the prison the move was delayed until the 67-year-old man's health improved.

Since the revolt has made over the Peruvian Government, Señor Leguia's political enemies have been released and new garrisons have been installed on the island. Detachments of these soldiers came to the Almirante Grau in two launches today and put the former President aboard for transportation to the prison.

It is understood that Lieut. Commander Harold B. Grow, the American who headed the Peruvian Air Service under President Leguia and was arrested at Arequipa after the revolt broke out, is no longer held incommunicado. He is receiving messages and personal articles are being sent him by Mrs. Grow.

Commander Grow, who is an officer in the United States Naval Reserve, is charged by the military junta with having planned to bomb Arequipa under orders of President Leguia before he resigned.

SAYS LEGUIA RUINED PERU.

Ex-President Pardo Hopeful of Recovery Under Present Rule.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MADRID, Sept. 1.—Former President Pardo of Peru, whom ex-President Leguia succeeded, is quoted in El Heraldo of Madrid as saying:

"The dictatorship of Leguia left Peru ruined. Under the pretext of undertaking public works he contracted loans with American bankers. The public debt increased from $4,000,000 to $128,000,000.

"I consider the present government consists of honorable men. Under proper management Peru will recover. I myself have retired from politics."

PLANS TO SUE HUNTINGTON.

Little Neck Woman to Defend Her Land Claim in Court.

Special to The New York Times.

CENTERPORT, L. I., Sept. 1.—Thomas F. Magner, attorney for Mrs. Amelia Koch, a Summer resident at Little Neck, near here, indicated today that his client would go to court to defend her claim to a strip of beach property on Centerport Harbor. Mrs. Koch started last week to build a boat house on the property, to which she has claimed title for some time. The town of Huntington also claims title and acting on orders of the Huntington Town Board, Highway Superintendent Ira W. Lewis recently took a force of town workmen to the beach and tore the house down.

There had already been considerable friction between Little Neck Summer residents and the Huntington authorities. The town is a defendant in a $5,000 action to prevent the widening of Prospect Avenue, which Little Neck residents contend is a private right of way.

DRY LEAGUE COUNSEL QUITS

G. R. Munroe Leaves New Jersey Post After Thirty Years.

SOUTH ORANGE, N. J., Sept. 1 (AP).—The resignation of G. Roland Munroe, counsel for thirty years to the Anti-Saloon League of New Jersey, was effective today. The Rev. James K. Shields, head of the organization, said no immediate move would be made to appoint a successor.

Mr Shields said Mr. Munroe had been in ill health at his home in Hackettstown since July, when his intended resignation was announced. At that time Mr. Munroe said he wished to devote more time to his law practice.

When the children ask for something good and cold to drink, give them Hoffman Fruit Beverages. They'll love the taste of these luscious ripe fruits in beverage form. Hoffman ★ Lemon Beverage has just the right combination of real ripe lemons, cane sugar and carbonated water. It's refreshing, satisfying —and quenches thirst as only lemon can do.
